RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT

BELLE WASHBURN won the silver medal of the Society of American Florists' at the 1915 Buffalo, N. Y., Exhibition, and again won the Society of American Florists' silver medal and American Carnation Society's silver medal at the St. Louis, Mo., Exhibition, January 26-27, 1916. This is the only variety that ever won the Society of American Florists' silver medal two years in succession, which is worth considering when buying new varieties. Results count—order accordingly.

THE BEST RED CARNATION

Young Plants in 2½ inch Pots.

$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 500 at the 1000 rate.

The color is the most brilliant red of any carnation on the market. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. The calyx never bursts and all flowers grade first. Best of all it is a steady and constant bloomer giving just as many flowers as the Enchantress of which it is a seedling. Orders from the far west can be sent direct to our Mr. E. B. Washburn, 252 South Orange Grove Avenue, Pasadena, Calif., who will give them his personal attention. An inspection of our greenhouses either at Hollywood, Calif., or Hinsdale, Ill., is invited.

ROSES.

YOU NEED

THE BIG MONEY MAKER.

CHAMP WEILAND.

In color the most exquisite pink ever seen in a rose. Here is a rose, Mr. Grower, that caused the critics to shake their heads, but it was an up-and-down nod instead of the doubtful negative shake.

DO YOU ASK WHY?

Because in this rose they found their ideal, in the qualities that tend to make a truly grand variety, namely, color, foliage, size, beauty and freedom of bloom.

Small wonder—for in this rose we find a color unequalled by any other "sport" creation of recent years. Take the tip—grow "Champ Weiland." Now ready, grafted plants, 100 for $35.00; 250 for $82.50; 500 for $150.00; 1,000 for $300.00.

MRS. CHAS. RUSSELL.

We have an elegant stock of the above, and offer grafted plants at $14.00 per 100; $120.00 per 1,000; own root, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000.

MOTHERS' DAY.

First Suggested by The American Florist, May 16, 1908.

An Unusual Trade Opportunity.

When the first mention of Mother's day in a trade journal was made by THE AMERICAN FLORIST in its issue of May 16, 1908, this beautiful idea was then in its infancy. Many there were, who although seeing the article, scarcely gave it a second glance, thinking it a fad that would never amount to anything commercially. At that time the writer had several conferences with Miss Anna Jarvis, who explained her object in exploiting this beautiful custom and the efforts she was making to interest churches and Sunday schools. Public schools were also visited. Even the attention of mayors of all the large cities and governors of states was called to its observance and many issued proclamations setting aside the day as one to be observed in their communities as Mothers' day and addressed meetings held in its celebration. She had even at that time a trunk full of clippings of press matter, much of which she had prepared and started on its rounds of the papers. Her bills for postage were getting quite burdensome—her mail was rapidly increasing. Encouraging reports were received from everywhere, endorsing the movement, which, however, had at this time, 1909, attracted very little attention from the craft.

As a matter of fact, the importance of Mothers' day as a flower holiday was forced on the trade. After several observances, each with an increasing demand, the possibilities of the day as a floral holiday became apparent and in 1912 and '13 many of the retail craft in various populous centers got together and exploited the day by means of co-operative advertising, in most cases, with very good results. With all this effort, however, the movement has only started, as it is possible to make this one of the greatest flower days of the year. If every individual firm would get in line and boost Mother's day, as they should, it would be given an impetus that would carry the work somewhere near the recognition it deserves. The interest aroused would greatly benefit the trade, for there can be no proper observance of the day without flowers. To make a campaign such as this successful, there must first be enthusiasm—a man's whole heart and soul should be in the work; he must believe in it and act as if he did. First there is the literature, carefully written circulars, setting forth the ideas of the founder, and how inseparably the observance of the day is connected with flowers.

Although the white carnation has been deemed essential by Miss Jarvis, because it was her Mothers' favorite flower, the trade generally are educating the public to use, not only carnations of all colors, but roses, and in fact flowers of all kinds. "Flowers for Mothers' day", must be the slogan. After the circular, should come the decorated window; not just on Mothers' Day, but at least two weeks before. If every retail florist in the country would thus feature the observance of the day, what a wonderful stride forward would be made. Window cards were first used in Philadelphia. They were gotten out by a few retail men and enterprising wholesale florists, who sent the cards out gratis to their customers. Even this small display had its effect as people came into the stores to inquire what it meant and as a rule became enthusiastic and followed their approval with orders.

In many of the large cities where the movement has been successfully carried out, and the general public aroused to its observance, the result has been due largely to the united action of the trade in their advertising. Half or whole pages in the daily press exploiting the day, some with the names of the contributors and others unsigned, leaving the patrons to go to their favorite florist, brought very good results. Special emphasis should be called to the facilities of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery for delivering flowers at long distances, as in many families members away from home could be pleasantly united with their loved mother by gifts of flowers at this time.

There are many unique methods of decorating the windows. Some go to considerable expense using wax figures representing an elderly lady. This does not appeal to us. A reproduction of Hovenden's great painting, "Breaking Home Ties", Whistler's picture of his mother and other similar etchings, are all appropriate to be used about the store or in the windows. Appropriately worded cards calling attention to the day should always find a place in window and store. Banners with "Mothers' day, May 14", in bold letters should be given to all the retail stores so they could be placed about the establishment and on the sides of their delivery cars.

We feel that the possibilities of the day have never been brought fully to the front. The idea that the second Sunday in May is to be observed by a visit to the cemetery, to place flowers on the grave of the departed mother, is well worth attention in all advertising matter. Should this become a custom, the volume of business created would add very materially to the trade, in which all branches would participate.

The high price the white carnation attains at this time, is of course due to the fact that the demand greatly exceeds the supply; it cannot be otherwise, and the only solution is, to establish the fact that all flowers are appropriate to be used for the proper observance of the day. Roses, lilies, carnations, sweet peas; in fact, everything in season, no flower having any special significance over another. Arranged boxes of flowers, if artistically put up, with a proper blending of the colors, are very inviting. With these on view, customers who are undecided as to just what they want, are often induced to make purchases at a price more than they intended to pay.

Mothers' day has come to stay, each recurring observance, with its increasing demand for flowers, has proved this. That it should be exploited by all the trade in every state of this country by systematic educational methods, keeping to the front the Miss Jarvis' idea of setting aside the second Sunday in May each year, to the memory of the best mother that ever lived, your mother, and wearing on that day a flower, sending to the mother, if living, a box of choice flowers and if she has passed away, revere her memory by placing fragrant blossoms on her grave. The custom is ideal; it appeals to the most sacred impulse in man, woman or child, the love of mother.

The commercial aspect is at all times to be kept concealed. Timely articles written by experts, advertising men, whose business it is and who know the great highways of publicity and how best to reach the people through them, would furnish the press of the country with articles they would be glad to publish as news matter at no cost to the trade except that of the preparation. Every florist in this broad country should be interested in making Mothers' day a grand floral holiday. Will you do your part and by helping others help yourself?

Mothers' Day Publicity.

While the nation-wide observance of Mothers' day is becoming more general each year, and the increase in the call for flowers for the occasion is manifest, practically few of the craft realize the opportunity this day offers to make it one of the most profitable flower days of the year. Florists in a few of the larger cities were quick to grasp its possibilities, and have for several years, through appropriate, well directed advertising, supplemented by window displays in keeping with the occasion, secured results beyond their expectations. The trade in Cleveland, Toledo, Minneapolis and other cities have "gone after" Mothers' day business. They had results from the start and their sales on this day show an increase with each succeeding year. When the demand for carnations reached the point where it exceeded the supply, the public was educated to buying other flowers—roses, lilies, assortments in boxes, and even flowering plants.

In some instances the co-operative plan, all of the florists of the city combining and using large space in the newspapers to stimulate a general demand; in others, individual advertisements, often featuring something special for Mothers' day, were the means employed to reach the public, but in nearly every case the results were most satisfactory, not alone to the retailer, but the wholesaler and the grower as well. Also coming as it does during a period of comparative dullness, any opportunity offered to offset the quiet business which will follow the exodus of many regular flower purchasers to the summer resorts, should not be overlooked.

In its issue of May 16, 1908. THE AMERICAN FLORIST, realizing the possibilities offered to the trade in the observance of the second Sunday in May of each year as Mothers' day, an occasion when flowers were especially appropriate to express the sentiment of the day, was first to suggest Mothers' day to the trade as one that would eventually become one of the greatest flower days on the calendar. The date of its first observance, comparatively only a few years ago, makes it all the more important that the date should be kept well before the public, and to this end advertisements in the daily press, appealing to the sentimentality of the occasion, appropriate window displays well in advance of the day, window cards, circulars, announcement cards, always giving prominence to the date upon which Mothers' day will be observed; in fact, any well-directed plan to place the object of the day and its date before the public and keep it there, is bound to appeal to sentiment and cause a demand for flowers so necessary to its proper expression.

We reproduce herewith two specimens of advertising employed for Mothers' day which brought results far in excess of their cost. Another feature which is doing much to impress the sentiment of the day upon thousands, is the annual custom of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. in presenting carnations to passengers on its trains on Mothers' day.

Well-directed publicity has done much to awaken the public to the appropriateness of flowers and plants for many occasions and has played a large part in the building up of the business on many of what are now recognized as "red letter" days in the trade. It has done much in convincing the public that flowers were the proper tokens for St. Valentine's day and St. Patrick's day. For Mothers' day, where it has been tried, its effect has been stimulating. Keep Mothers' day in the mind of the public—and it will keep you in mind on Mothers' day.

PLANT NOTES.

Hydrangeas.

There are very few plants that are generally grown that show more variance in their culture or in the returns to the grower than the hydrangeas, especially those that are grown for summer blooming. In looking over the stocks in the several markets one will often see the extremes of these plants grown in the same sized pot; one with eight to ten heads of bloom, short and stocky with fine foliage, an ornament on any porch or in any yard; and the other tall and long jointed, with two or three heads of bloom and five or six branches with no flowers and the foliage thin and small; the former bringing the grower $2.00 to $2.50 and the latter hardly averaging 75 cents. Yet these two plants have practically cost the grower the same amount of labor. These plants grow rapidly and must have plenty of room, an abundance of sun and lots of nourishment. It is useless to try to grow a good plant when they are crowded together. Many growers finish these plants by raising the pots over the benches of bedding plants that do not now require the full amount of sun, placing the hydrangeas about four feet apart in the center of the bench and standing the pot on a stand two feet above the other plants. This gives the hydrangeas a fine location. When the plants have set their buds the pots will probably be full of roots and a watering of liquid manure once or twice a week will greatly assist them in finishing up the flower and keep the foliage in good color. To grow good hydrangeas they must have plenty of food, room enough to grow shapely and for the air to circulate all around the plant and a light, well ventilated location. Under these conditions they are easily grown and are remunerative to the grower.

Gypsophila Paniculata.

There are few summer flowers that are of more use to the florist having a local trade than the gypsophila, for it lightens up work beautifully and greatly aids in softening the appearance of the summer flowers, many of which have a coarse look in floral work, and in bouquets, sprays and basket work the sprays are particularly useful. The grower not possessing a good bed of this should procure stock at once and plant them in a good, sunny position,

Mothers' Day

Sunday, May

Next Sunday is Mothers' Day, set aside by the whole nation to honor universal Motherhood and your own Mother in particular. Governor Cox in his proclamation just issued, says, "We have reached that point in our civilization where Motherhood is enshrined in the hearts of the human race as is no other sentiment." All over the nation everyone honors Mother by sending her flowers, or a basket of her assorted favorites, or a plant that she loves. Common custom the country over has led to the adoption of the following slogan for Mothers' Day,

"A Colored Flower For Mothers Living, A White Flower For Mothers Dead"

The leading florists here represented have made special preparations to deliver flower and plant orders promptly in any quantity to all parts of the city and to supply the public with fresh, choice flowers, or baskets daintily made up, or any seasonable plants.

and after once becoming established they require no further attention than to keep the bed free from weeds and occasionally cultivated. Seed can be now sown and as soon as large enough transplanted in rows outside where they can remain until another spring, when they can be again transplanted to permanent quarters, but to have plants that will bloom this year it will be necessary to procure older stock. The double form of this plant is even more beautiful than the single for some purposes, and its lasting qualities make it more valuable for a cut flower than the older variety.

Freesias.

Although the freesias are a cheap bulb they should not be thrown away, for it takes but little attention to ripen them off after they are through blooming and as good bulbs can be procured as those that are purchased. The freesia is a native of southern Africa, so they are blooming at the natural season when flowered in midwinter in the north. But the bulbs must be allowed to mature their growth and then dried off gradually. The pots or boxes in which they are grown can then be placed in full sunlight and allowed to become very dry. A shelf near the glass makes an admirable place on which to place them after the growth has finished and no more watering is required, but they must not stand where any drip from the roof on a stormy day is liable to keep them moist. They can be shaken out in June and the bulbs started, as it is comparatively easy to select the flowering bulbs and store in a dry place until wanted for planting. For Christmas blooming the bulbs should be started early in July and a succession of plantings until September will give the grower flowers until the following spring.

Lilium Longiflorum.

Among the best flowers for greenhouse culture during the summer months is the Lilium lancifolium, of varieties rubrum, roseum album and Melpomene. While these varieties can all be grown outside, yet under those conditions they rarely give perfect flowers and they also tarnish quickly in the direct rays of the sun or under heavy rains and to have flowers that can be used for decorative work or designs it is far better to grow them under glass. Those that are to bloom in July should have been started in March, but for August blooming they can be planted now. One of the easiest ways to grow these bulbs is to plant them in boxes from four to six inches deep, not too large, but of a size that one man can handle when filled with soil. Do not fill the boxes too full when planting the bulbs, for like all lilies they throw out roots at the surface, so it is well to leave room for top dressing later. Grow them in a cool, shady location and after the spikes begin to grow give them plenty of water and keep them tied erect to stakes. Constant fumigation will be necessary to keep the green fly in check. This is in no way forcing these bulbs, and if properly dried off after blooming the bulbs may be grown year after year and a good crop of flowers obtained.

Celosia Plumosa.

The plants of Celosia plumosa or the ostrich plume celosia are of very easy culture and make very showy plants for either the garden or the greenhouse. They form pyramidal bushes and the yellow and red plumes which resemble ostrich feathers stand gracefully above the foliage. While they make showy plants for the garden, finer specimens are grown under glass, and they make very showy plants in the late summer and fall. Seed sown in April will make fine plants for culture during the summer, but like all the celosias the young seedlings damp off easily. As soon as large enough they should be potted in good light soil in 2½-inch pots and later shifted to 4-inch to grow large plants to 6-inch pots. They should be grown in a good, strong light, for if shaded the plants will become drawn and the dwarf compact plants are more desirable. C. plumosa aurea, the orange ostrich plume, and C. plumosa coccinea, the crimson ostrich plume, are the two best of the older varieties, and Pride of Castle Gould, a new introduction of the last few years, is the best of all the ostrich plume varieties and can be obtained in many colors.

THE CARNATION.

Care of the Young Stock.

The success of next winter's carnation crop depends very largely on the attention given the young plants now in the early stages of their growth. The building up of a strong, floriferous plant may be said to start with the selection of the cuttings, followed up with close attention to the needs of the young plants through the different stages of their growth.

Beginning with the cuttings in the propagating bed, as soon as they have made a nice cluster of roots, they should be taken out, potted, and given light cool quarters. In a very few days they will have taken hold of the fresh soil and then commences a rapid growth.

The young plants rapidly stretching out, soon get to the point where they will need topping, a part of the work that is very important and should be done on time, or in other words, as soon as the growth is advanced far enough to allow for a clean cut to be made; the young plants are weakened and much time is lost when the growth is allowed to lengthen out too far, and it should be borne in mind that every shoot the plants are encouraged to make means more uniform plants and better prospects of successful crops for next season. The question of topping high or low depends greatly on the habit of the variety. Some growers claim better success with low topping and others stand by topping higher up. We make our first topping at the third or fourth leaf joint, according to the variety; short jointed bushy growers we aim to keep up a little so that when the plants are matured they have a clear stem above ground, and we try as much as possible to top each batch of plants alike and at the same time so that the growth of the plants will be even throughout.

Together with the topping, the young plants should be worked along. The early propagated stock, now well established in 2½-inch pots, need potting into 3-inch, using a live, fresh soil as before. For a few days after potting keep them a little close; then as they become rooted into the fresh soil, give them a cool temperature with plenty of air on every favorable occasion. Young carnation plants thrive best in a cool, airy atmosphere and make a strong sturdy habit, so that when they are transferred to the field there is scarcely any check to their growth, but when they are treated to a high, close temperature, causing a soft growth, they lose a lot in getting used to the outside conditions.

It is well at this time to take stock of the young plants now on hand to see if the number comes up to your requirements. It is getting late for carnation propagating, and unless the cuttings are well along toward being rooted, they will not have much chance to make good plants when the time comes for planting them in the field, and if any more are needed it will be better to buy in some rooted cuttings than to start another batch in the sand.

Watering is one of the particular parts of the care of the young plants. It is best to keep them moderately moist all the time, but excessive wet or dryness should be guarded against. When the roots are active the plants respond with a healthy, vigorous growth.

It seems hardly necessary to remind growers to keep their plants free from weeds, but it is very important with these young plants. The weed seed is usually abundant in the fresh soil, and after being brought into the greenhouse grows very quickly, and unless they are removed the young carnation plants are going to be the ones to suffer.

Another very important item is to be sure the plants are free of insects. The bright days we get from now on allow for an occasional syringing to check the red spider, and fumigating once every 10 days or two weeks will keep the other insects down.

The general routine work in caring for the older plants must not receive any let up. The abundance of flowers coming on makes it necessary to pay particular attention to the disbudding. Airing the houses is another very important part of the work. A high degree of close temperature will cause the red spider to work quickly and once the red spider gets a foothold on these flowering carnation plants, it is good-bye to good flowers in a very short while. The weather now permits of regular syringings once a week, and as the season advances, it can be done more often, but care should be taken not to get the soil of the beds too wet.

Any cutting of the flowers should be done early in the day before the sun's action works on the plants; they keep much better when cut early than if cut in the middle of the day when the power of the sun is at its height.

like heavy applications of dried blood and potassium sulfate. Two sections, one of White Perfection and one of Enchantress, containing 40 plants each, were each treated weekly with $2\frac{3}{4}$ pounds of dried blood per 100 square feet of bench space. Two similar sections were each treated with $2\frac{3}{4}$ pounds of potassium sulfate weekly. To each of these four sections an appli-directions strictly as to the amount of fertilizer to apply, and to see that the fertilizer is weighed out. It must be remembered that "where a little is good, more is better" is not applicable to the use of fertilizers in the greenhouse.

SYMPTOMS OF OVERFEEDING.

The later stages of injury due to dried blood and potassium sulfate are above the calyx. The foliage assumes a deep green color, with abundant "bloom," and growth is normal for a time. Continued feeding, however, causes a retardation in growth. Carnation plants overfed with dried blood will gradually recover.

The injury from equal applications of potassium sulfate is more pronounced and more persistent. The first sign of injury is a crinkling of the edges of the inner petals, some brown spots appear, and at times the edges of the petals are withered. This stage is followed by a stage in which the center petals fail to open, being glued by a syrupy secretion. For this reason the later buds never open. An interesting abnormality is found in buds thus swelled beyond normal diameter and not opened, yet with the pistil projecting an inch beyond the bud. In addition to the effect upon the flowers, the injury from potassium sulfate is manifested by a marked retardation in the growth of the plant. The leaf tips gradually die, but the leaves, although somewhat thinner than normal, develop to a nearly normal width and length. The internodes of developing shoots, however, seem to lose their power of elongation, and this, coupled with the nearly normal length of the leaves, combines to produce a "rosette" structure.—Urbana, Ill., Experiment Station Bulletin.

Carnation Diseases.

Report of Geo. L. Peltier, horticultural pathologist, Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, Urbana, to the Illinois State Florists' Association, March 7, 1916.

Branch rot of carnations was much more serious this past season than formerly. This condition was due in part to the peculiar weather conditions which were prevalent during the summer. The excessive rains produced plants that were large, bushy, and soft. As they made such rapid growth, a large amount of topping was necessary which increased the number of wounds and so increased branch rot. Also, the plants being bushy prevented them from drying out completely after the rains, and this factor also induced this trouble.

The fungus causing branch rot cannot attack a healthy plant below the surface of the soil like stem rot, but it is more in the nature of a wound cation of eight pounds of dried blood, two pounds of acid phosphate, and two pounds of potassium sulfate per 100 square feet was made in the fall. The check sections were the same sections described under the preceding heading. They received only eight pounds of dried blood, two pounds of acid phosphate, and two pounds potassium sulfate during the year. The first application was made on October 4 and the last on April 25. No harmful results were noted before about the first of the year. On December 16 the various sections had produced flowers in the numbers shown as follows:

A noticeably larger number of flowers had been produced in the sections fed with an excess of dried blood than in the check sections. About January 13, however, the first sign of overfeeding in both treatments was noticed, when the petals began browning at the edges, the center of the blossoms did not open, and many buds remained closed. In two weeks the flowers were ruined, hardly a salable blossom being present. The plants overfed with dried blood later recovered, but those overfed with potassium sulfate were ruined for the season.

The point to emphasize in regard to injury by overfeeding with dried blood or potassium sulfate is that the first sign is on the petals themselves; consequently the flowers are ruined when the overfeeding is discovered. The way to avoid overfeeding is to follow quite characteristic for each fertilizer. As has been stated above, acid phosphate applied in large quantities produced no injury. Flowers from plants overfed with dried blood become quite soft, and if watered overhead during sunshine, will show brown spots on the petals where a drop of water has stood. A little later the flowers are characterized by a peculiar bunching of the center petals, leaving only a double row or so of petals open as in normal condition. Later buds do not open, the flowers remaining stationary after the petals have shown a half-inch parasite, attacking branches where the flower stems and shoots have been broken off and slowly working its way down into the stems and finally killing the entire plant. The fungus is also able to get in at the nodes and kill the young shoots even before they are visible. In bad cases of node infection, the nodes become discolored and split, and in a short time the whole branch dies. It was observed, for the first time, this season, that the fungus is the principal cause of the dying off of the lower leaves of the plant, especially in cases where the plants have yellows. To control this trouble, I would make the following recommendations:

1. It is better, for several reasons, to use a medium sized, sturdy plant than a large, bushy one to set in the bench.

2. In planting, do not set the plants too close together. Overcrowding will increase branch rot considerably.

3. As in the case of the control of stem rot, keep the temperature down, especially during the first three months.

4. It is always better to syringe early in the morning of a clear day, so that the plants will dry out by evening.

5. In topping, be careful not to leave stubs and broken parts on the plants, for these are open doors for branch rot to enter.

6. In gathering flowers, experiments have shown that carefully breaking off the flower stems at the node is to be preferred to cutting the stems between the nodes. Branch rot will enter a stub easier than it will at the nodes.

7. Of the utmost importance in the control of branch rot, as well as other diseases, adopt for your slogan, "keep the houses clean", which means under, as well as on top of the bench.

Carnation yellows appears to be increasing in seriousness rapidly and is now to be found on all the standard varieties on the market. While the cause of this disease still remains unknown, I would make a few suggestions, at this time, which if carefully followed out will help eliminate this trouble from your greenhouses.

1. Always bear in mind that anything that will lower the vitality of your plants will increase the amount of yellows. Also, that any check the plants receive will, likewise tend to increase yellows.

2. Before making your cuttings, select and mark the strongest and healthiest plants in the benches. Watch them closely and if they develop yellows do not take cuttings from them.

3. Make your cuttings from plants in bloom in preference to stock plants. In this connection, when you grow a new variety remember the plants are generally propagated from stock plants and in many cases weak cuttings, due to overpropagation, are used. Therefore, it is well worth your while to select the best and strongest plants of the new varieties the first year and watch them closely and then make your cuttings in the manner I have outlined above.

4. Root your cuttings early in the season and do not leave them in the sand after they have rooted. It is better to put up cuttings with the root system fairly developed than to wait until the cuttings have a great mass of roots. From my observations, I have found that the later cuttings are made, the longer they take to root. Also, that the late rooted cuttings will be troubled with yellows much more than the plants rooted early in the season.

5. Although the more plants are shifted, the more yellows will increase, never let the young plants become pot bound, or stunted.

Antirrhinum rust, like the carnation rust of old, has spread over the whole country and is now found in the east as well as the west. Like carnation rust, it will run its course and the ultimate result will be that the antirrhinum breeder will give us rust-resistant varieties as in the case of the carnation. However, this time has not yet arrived and the question now before the grower is to know how to control it at the present time.

This rust as well as anthracnose, another disease of the snapdragon, can be prevented by applying Bordeaux mixture every two weeks from the seedling stage until the spikes form, followed by a weekly application of ammoniacal copper carbonate during the rest of the growing season. A weekly application of the ammoniacal copper carbonate is also effective. Bordeaux mixture discolors the foliage, so that it cannot be used through the season.

In my former reports I recommended the use of seeds instead of cuttings. However, I have learned from experience, that suitable plants for commercial purposes cannot be obtained from seeds. Therefore, I would modify my recommendation to this extent. Do not use cuttings if you must send for them. Start your first batch from seed and then select cuttings from the most promising plants. Rust cannot be introduced in your establishment through seed, but infect cuttings can be easily overlooked. It has been proven rather conclusively, that the rust was spread over this country in the last three years, on infected cuttings.

Last summer, work was started on aster wilt and yellows, two of the most serious troubles of this crop. About ten thousand plants were used in the experiments. Twenty-five varieties, representing all the commercial types, were grown from seed obtained from various states in this country and different localities in Europe. All the plants used were more or less infected with yellows, showing that the variety or origin of the seed has no influence on the amount of yellows. The more young seedlings were shifted, the more loss from wilt occurred. This was true to some extent with yellows also. The lowest percentage of loss occurred where the seeds were sown directly in the field, although the plants bloomed later. Disinfecting the seed with mercuric chloride (one part to 1,000 parts of water) for from five to ten minutes, and the use of clean seed beds, with a minimum of shifting or transplanting, will materially decrease the loss from wilt. No recommendation can be made for the control of yellows at this time.

Besides the studies reported on above, which are to be considered major problems, we have under observation a number of minor troubles, which it is hoped will be brought to your attention through circulars issued by the division of floriculture, or through the trade papers.

THE ROSE.

Guarding the Easter Crop.

At this writing, owing to the variety of the weather we are having, the rose grower will have his work cut out for him in order to avoid mildew, black spot and burned foliage, as the cloudy weather has softened up the growth considerably in the last week or so. The main thing to do in this instance is to ventilate very, very carefully, and when the weather is warm enough to dispense with all artificial heat before the sun strikes the houses, or if the day be cloudy and warm, and the inside temperature will reach 65 degrees, bank the fires and use a little crack of air if possible. It is not advisable to throw a lot of air on the houses, even if the temperature should run up to 80 or 85 degrees following a prolonged cloudy spell of weather, allowing a drought and unaccustomed sunshine to burn the tender growth. Under these conditions, spray the plants overhead at once and carry very little air, and, to avoid mildew, do not ventilate at night, but run the houses at a temperature of from 56 to 58 degrees, and do not think of dispensing with the fireman's services for weeks to come, for some morning the temperature may take a sudden drop about 3 a. m. and make a mess of things. Keep the night man on, and instruct him carefully not to let the temperature get too high, as it is inclined to do at this season. Keep the sulphur painted on the pipes frequently; try to prevent the mildew, rather than do a lot of worrying after it once gets a good start, for it is a tough old customer when it once gets a hold. Unfortunately, black spot and mildew thrive under the same conditions, but the latter disease is somewhat at a disadvantage if one can ventilate freely, which, under the conditions described above, it is dangerous to do; so to materially lessen the chances of black spot getting a start, every precaution should be taken to keep the floors, the walks and the surroundings dry. Do not slop things up when watering and run things a little on the dry side until normal weather conditions prevail. A dusting of air-slacked lime through the houses frequently will help wonderfully to sweeten things up, and is equivalent to airing in some cases.

How about the cuts for Easter? Have you everything in readiness to handle the business satisfactorily—plenty of supplies and a system arranged to run out everything as smoothly as possible? One can not have things arranged at the last moment and come through without some very regretful mistakes, and it is only after some years of experience that we find the most satisfactory way to take care of any of the holiday business. To the novice we will state that good, fresh stock is the most important thing, so "cut out" any attempt to "corn" or "pickle"; it never has worked and never will. Next perhaps is the importance of filling every order taken carefully, attention being paid to the smallest of orders, and avoid disappointing a customer, if possible, even if you have to fill the order without profit by going outside for the goods. Remember it is your fault if you haven't the stock to take care of your orders, and do not overcharge for anything at this time, just because stock may be rather scarce. Of course, the supply regulates the demand, and the demand the prices. At the same time do not let these conditions run away with good judgment to the extent of injuring future business. In all probability we would put up a big "holler" and do when the same thing is attempted by the store men, and do not be too close-fisted when filling an order; allow plenty of green, an extra flower now and then, and you will find it will compensate you in the long run.

We will now step inside and look through the range. Yes, that is fine-looking, young stock, but it is ripening up a little too much; better shift it as it is grafted from the 2½-inch pots. Shift it to a 3½-inch pot, with drainage, and while you are handling it, cut away the raffia and stake and tie each plant. It will take some time to do this, but then it will be all over with and off your mind. Never, if you can help it (and you can), let the young stock make more than one growth in the same pot, and never shift a rose in a larger pot than a 3-inch without draining each pot. Drain by bridging two pieces of broken crock over the drain hole; otherwise by just throwing a piece of crock carelessly in the pot one doesn't know whether the plant will be drained or not.

Keep the young stock free from spider by spraying finely with lots of pressure, and by applying grape dust every two or three days with a bellows or powder gun the mildew can be prevented. If one hasn't enough soil composted, keep right at it so as not to delay planting, for it will be a very short while indeed before we will be starting to throw out and replant. Do not let the outside work cause you to neglect the indoor stock, but take on an extra man or two if necessary and keep at the front.

Annuals and Herbaceous Perennials.

A paper by A. H. Thurston, assistant in floriculture, Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, delivered at Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., January 30, 1915. The first section of this address appeared in our issue of July 31, 1915.

HERBACEOUS PERENNIALS.

Herbaceous perennials are plants having perennial roots with tops that die to the ground annually. Hardy bulbs are true herbaceous perennials, and consequently they have as much a technical as a practical right to be included in herbaceous borders. Herbaceous perennials would be weak in the spring if bulbs were excluded from this group. Hardy herbaceous perennials are so important in the flower garden of today that they may be called the backbone of the garden. Annuals, tender bedding plants, even shrubs are less important than this great class of plants. To most flower-lovers a summer garden without perennials would be of little interest, in spite of the fact that annuals might be at their best. What June annual can vie with the peony; what July annual with the delphinium; what August annual with the phlox?

There exists no class of plants which offers such an unlimited number of graceful forms; not a single shade of color can be mentioned which is not in some way or other represented; the variation in size is remarkable; many kinds will bloom continuously for several months, while others will bloom at a time of year when flowers are scarce. With regard to position, there are plants for every conceivable situation, no matter whether it be dry or wet, shady or sunny, warm or cold; it is simply a matter of selecting the right thing for the right place.

Gardeners who have a large demand for cut flowers recognize the value of herbaceous perennials for yielding a supply during a greater part of the year. Where a collection of hardy plants is grown and depended upon for cutting, it is better to grow those most adapted to that purpose on a separate piece of ground where they can be planted in quantities. The beauty of an herbaceous border is soon spoiled by constant cutting, and many small things are injured by treading on them. For supplying flowers for cutting, those kinds should be selected which stand well in a cut state, are hardy, and free flowering. The New England aster and the golden rod (Solidago altissima and canadensis) should be in every garden, but a great many people think that they are too common; they are weeds in their estimation because they see them growing by the roadside and in the field. Yet they buy from the nursery, plants which have been introduced from foreign countries where they are as common as the New England aster and the golden rod are here. Many of our best subjects are native American plants, yet superior varieties to the species have originated in Europe and have been sent out as novelties, many of them being sold to this country.

Perennials may be propagated by either seeds, cuttings, or by division. A great many of our ordinary herbaceous plants are quite easily propagated by seeds, and where large numbers are required it is the best method. Perennial seeds come slower than annuals; many need the action of frost to get the best germination. Propagation by cuttings is rarely useful for the amateur, but it is an important commercial method. Plants may be obtained from almost any plant having foliage stems by taking a short piece of the growing wood with a bud, either lateral or terminal, and placing the lower end in moist sand or other material suitable for root growth. The increase of plants by cuttings has the advantages of being rapid and of allowing the perpetuation of any variation noticed on a portion of any plant. Root cuttings are sometimes used in multiplying stock. This consists of detaching portions of the roots of the plants, making them into uniform lengths of about one and one-half inches and inserting in rows in shallow boxes or pans of sandy soil with the top of the cutting exposed. The winter season, November to February, is the best time to propagate by root cuttings. The simplest way of increasing all herbaceous perennials which have spreading, fibrous root stocks is by division, either when they are at rest, or just as they start growing in early spring. And this division is frequently good whether more plants are wanted or not, for it prevents the clumps from getting very large and weak. The outer portions of the old plants are the pieces that should be replanted, these being the youngest and therefore the most vigorous.

Most perennials thrive well in any moderately rich soil of suitable physical condition. For the majority of plants it is well to select a piece of ground on which water does not stand too long. Where the undertaking is not too expensive, the land should be trenched; if trenching is too costly, deep plowing or spading can be practiced, and the manure worked in at the same time. Herbaceous perennials are generally grown in borders, in which the planting may be entirely of herbaceous perennials, or it may be a mixed planting of shrubs and herbaceous perennials, the shrubs forming a background for the herbaceous plants. A border follows something, borders something; possibly it follows a walk or drive, or the side of a building, or the margin of the lawn; it really does not matter what, so long as it follows something. The outlines of the border may be irregular and curving, or straight; curved lines are most graceful and best give the natural effect which is desired. Borders may be six to eight feet wide and if they are to have a double face they should be ten to twelve feet wide. A very pleasing arrangement is to have a double line of borders with a broad path, preferably of grass, between them. The border develops mass effects rather than the detached and spot effects of lawn beds and of single planting; and it derives much of its pleasing result from its length, distance and perspective.

When herbaceous plants are used in the flower garden, the grouping must naturally be of the utmost importance, so as to insure a succession of effective displays. But arranging them effectively is not so easy as it might appear, and requires not only a considerable amount of taste and forethought, but also an intimate knowledge of the plants to be used. Before we can hope to arrange them effectively we must know to what size they will grow and we must also be acquainted with the color of the flowers, the time of blooming, the habit of growth, and the behavior of plants after their flowering season is over. The tall plants should be kept in the rear part of the border, but it is a mistake to plant them all in the rear row with the medium growing kinds in the middle rows. Consideration should be given to the profile, or sky-line of the border. Plant so that the taller varieties will stand out boldly; set off delphiniums, hollyhocks, etc., by planting some lower growing kind next to them. Where the border has a double face, the tallest plants should be kept near the middle, working down from them on both sides with lower growing plants. One of the most important points in the arrangement of plants in the border is the color effect. Too often we see them planted haphazard, without any consideration of whether the colors will harmonize or not. Do not scatter single plants throughout the borders, but group each kind together in masses. The size of the masses will depend upon the area of the border. A proper selection of the different species will give us flowers from earliest spring to latest fall. Hardy bulbs should be planted here and there throughout the perennial border, as they make the border attractive in the spring. Annuals may later be planted in among the bulbs which will have died down.

Those species that blossom before July should be planted in the early fall; those that bloom later in the year may be planted in the spring. In relation to spring planting, the fall has many advantages, except in the case of a few of the less hardy subjects. Fall planted stock will always show a much better growth during the first year than that put in during the spring season, due to its being in position to start with the first warm days in April without suffering any check. Fall planting may be done either in early fall or late fall, with preference strongly in favor of the former. While the majority of the stock planted late in the season may pull through the winter and start into growth in spring, it is a decided advantage to have the roots established before severe weather sets in. Let us consider some of the arguments of fall versus spring planting. In the fall the nurseries are well supplied and there is no difficulty in securing good plants of any varieties catalogued; in spring, the nursery stock is depleted and the best plants of the best varieties have been sold. In autumn, the soil retains some of its summer warmth, the root action of the plants is vigorous and they get partially established; in spring, the soil is cold and root action is slow. In autumn, the garden work is decreasing and there is ample time for planting; in spring, work is increasing and there is less time.

In planting, four general rules should be remembered: First, plant when the soil is moist. Second, make relatively large holes and spread the roots well. Third, avoid planting deeply. Fourth, make soil firm over and around the roots.

White Grub Control.

Wherever white grubs were destructive in 1915 or wherever spring cultivating shows large white grubs in the soil, growers should take action to protect 1916 crops from damage and continue the warfare on this pest to prevent heavy damage to crops in 1918. The white grubs that have wintered in the soil will come to the surface in April and May and feed to some extent on the roots of plants. By the middle of June they will become dormant, change to pupae early in July, and by September will become beetles which remain underground until the spring of 1917.

To lessen the damage to 1916 crops from the brief spring feeding of these large grubs, the United States department of agriculture states that the following measures are important:

(a) If the ground is to be plowed or cultivated in the spring, delay plowing as late as possible, or until the grubs have returned to near the surface (about last of April) and have chickens follow the plow to destroy the grubs that are turned up.

(b) Delay planting until May 15-20 or a little later if practicable. The object of this is to have the roots of the young plants develop so late that this year's large grubs will not have much chance to do damage before they become dormant early in June.

(c) Where possible, on land that is infested, avoid planting corn, timothy, strawberries, or early potatoes.

Pasture hogs on the infested ground at any time but especially during April 15 and October 15, as they root out and destroy the grubs.

Exports Extraordinary.

Total exports from the port of New York for the week ended April 1 reached the record-breaking amount of $78,745,000, as compared with $24,971,000 in the same week in 1915 and $20,609,000 in the corresponding week in 1914, according to the compilations of the foreign trade department of the National City Bank. The exports to Great Britain were $27,000,000, as against $7,000,000 in the same week of last year; to France $13,000,000, against $6,000,000; to Russia, $8,000,000, against $500,000, and to Italy, $3,500,000, as compared with less than $300,000.

New London Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the above society was held April 13. The evening was devoted to the queen of flowers, the carnation. Wm. A. Dawson, Willimantic, Conn., spoke of its history down to the present time. All the tables were filled with plants and flowers from the neighboring estates, the cut flowers being given to the lady members at the close of the meeting. It was the largest meeting the society has had and three new members were elected.

The Woods in Springtime.

You fellers in the city think you know when spring is here—

You talk about the "ozone" an' the "balmy atmosphere";

The smoke of busy chimneys takes a diff'rent kind of hue,

An' sometimes you imagine that the sky is really blue;

The florist sets his posies out upon the sidewalk now;

You kin hear a tugboat chuggin' up the river with a scow;

You feel a fresh ambition in your race for worldly goods—

But there ain't no springtime whatever though exceptin' in the woods.

In the woods the buds are bustin', in the woods the grass is green;

There ain't no iron railin's there, your feet and grass between;

In the woods a bird is singin'—spillin' joy to beat the cars—

An' he ain't no sick canary cheepin' mournful through the bars;

In the woods the sun is shinin', siftin' softly through the trees;

In the woods the sweetest perfume travels on the mornin' breeze;

In the woods the flowers are peepin' from their little velvet hoods—

Oh, there ain't no spring whatever like the springtime in the woods!

You kin have your city springtime, when the band begins to play

An' the parks is gittin' greener while your hair is gittin' gray;

You kin have your city springtime, with its mud an' soot an' noise.

For up here on the river spring is here with all its joys.

For there ain't no bands make music like the robin's throaty trill;

There ain't no park or grasses like the grasses on the hill.

The party in the city has more gold, perhaps, an' goods—

But the world belongs, in springtime, to the feller in the woods.

MOTHER'S DAY is the second Sunday in May, which falls on the 14th this year.

MOTHERS' DAY in Texas will be observed, May 7, by proclamation of Governor Ferguson.

THE great spring exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society of England will be held in the Royal Hospital Gardens, Chelsea, May 23-25.

THE large attendance, the liberal daily newspaper publicity and the generous booking of orders were features of the recent Philadelphia and New York spring shows, which have never been equaled and the result must be a great stimulus to all branches of the horticultural trade in those localities this spring.

Pansies Unusually Early.

Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, says the new early-flowering strain of Giant pansy, which his firm has been offering the past year or two, is now in full bloom, while there is not a sign of color on any of the other numerous types grown at this concern's plant department.

Women's National Agri. and Hort. Ass'n.

The conference of the middle west members of the Women's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association, held at the Art Institute, Chicago, April 12-14, was well attended, and the interesting programme of papers and discussions was thoroughly appreciated by all present. The opening session Wednesday morning was in charge of the Garden Club of Illinois, the speakers being Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Lake Forest, Ill., whose subject was "Amateur Development of a Country Place, with illustrations of its problems and their solution, and Mrs. Chas. W. Hubbard, Winnetka, Ill., who spoke on "The Amateur Vegetable Garden," relating her personal experience. The afternoon session, under the general topic of "Commercial Horticulture for Women," brought forth a number of interesting papers, among them being "Flower Growing for Profit," by Mrs. H. A. Boardman, St. Paul, Minn.; "Truck Gardening for Profit," by Charlotte W. Passmore, Hopkins, Minn., and "Pecan Culture as an Occupation and Investment," by Dr. Effie Lobdell, Chicago. At the evening session, following the reading of greetings from Mrs. Francis King, president of the association, Miss Elizabeth Leighton Lee, director of the School of Horticulture for Women, Ambler, Pa., spoke of "Outdoor Professions and Occupations for Women," followed by an animated discussion and five-minute talks.

Thursday morning's session was given over to the general topic, "Marketing Garden Produce in Chicago," the subject being handled from both the consumers' and the producers' standpoint, by Mrs. C. Franklin Leavitt and August Geweke, respectively. The afternoon session was devoted to woman's work on farms, more particularly in matters pertaining to the dairy.

The closing session Friday afternoon was one of especial interest, and the general topic, "Community Interest in Gardening," was handled in a comprehensive manner by a number of speakers of wide experience. Edward J. Tobin, superintendent of Cook county schools, speaking on "School and Home Projects," told of the splendid progress being made by the schools under his supervision in interesting pupils in the home garden project, between four and five thousand children in the county being engaged in the work, which is part of the regular course of study in the schools. Chas. F. Millpaugh, curator of Field museum, had been asked to address the meeting on the subject, "A City Arboretum for Chicago," but amended his topic and spoke of the possibilities offered to Chicago for something more than an arboretum in the new outer belt park. He urged that part of this section be held as a forest reserve, where natural plantings of trees and shrubs would in time give to the city a forest park of exceptional beauty and interest. Miss Alice M. Houston, of the Drama Art League of America, told of plans being carried forward to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of Shakespeare, in the planting in parks and school gardens 33 varieties of the flowers mentioned in Shakespearean plays. Mrs. Chas. W. Jack, Chicago, told of successful flower shows and plant markets in the suburban communities of Chicago, and was listened to with much interest.

At the business meeting held Friday morning, the matter of organization and the election of officers was deferred until the next meeting, which will be held in St. Louis in May.

College Florists.

Resolved, That the members of the S. A. F. and O. H., interested in the line of floricultural education and research, be recognized as a section of the S. A. F. and O. H. under the title of the College Florists' Section of the S. A. F. and O. H.

The above resolution was passed by the board of directors of the S. A. F. at their meeting in Philadelphia, March 29.

At the call of Prof. A. H. Nehrling of Massachusetts, H. B. Dornier of Illinois, E. A. White and A. C. Beal of New York, B. W. Ansporn of Maryland, E. I. Wilde of Pennsylvania, A. H. Nehrling and A. S. Thurston of Massachusetts, together with W. N. Rudd and Richard Vincent, Jr., gathered at an informal meeting and dinner which was held at the Hotel Walton, March 28. At this meeting various problems connected with teaching and experimental work were discussed. Among some of the things which were talked over were: How to establish a closer relationship of the commercial men with the colleges; how the colleges might cooperate with the commercial man; the best methods to use to give students a practical training in floriculture; the education of the public to a greater appreciation of flowers, and the placing of students during vacations in order that they might get actual experience along practical lines. Many valuable suggestions on these and other subjects were offered by Messrs. Rudd and Vincent. As a result of this informal meeting it was felt that there was need of an organization, which not only would be of mutual benefit to its members, but could cooperate with the S. A. F.

Seed Warehouse Built on Gold Foundation.

In sinking pits to bedrock to secure a firm foundation for the new seed warehouse of the State Nursery Co., Inc., Helena, Mont., J. K. Smith, the contractor in charge, located a gravel bar 18 feet thick and rich in gold, immediately above the rock formation. Some fair-sized nuggets have already been taken out, and kernels of gold like so much wheat were found when the gravel was panned. The earth is being carefully piled up and when the excavating work is completed the gravel will be sluiced and, if it all pans as well as that taken out at first, the contractor will clean up a fair sized stake.

LENTEN TRADE BREAKS RECORD.

The Lenten season just coming to a close will long be remembered by the local florists as having suffered less from business inactivity than any similar season heretofore. Some social functions were eliminated, but in their stead was an unprecedented call for flowers for many different occasions and the list of unfortunate sick was a large contribution. Funeral work, too, was perhaps never before so large and continuous throughout the winter and up to the present time. Bulbous stock, particularly in plants, was so much in demand that many see indications of a scarcity of these for Easter, for though more were planted than ever before, some large growers were unfortunate in having received stock that apparently suffered in transit to such an extent that when forced they produced only foliage and no blooms. All are now busily engaged in extensive preparations for what is believed will be the greatest Easter trade ever experienced. To that end the markets of Toledo, Cleveland and Mentor, O., have been reached as well as Chicago for stock that is not available here. Little fear is entertained by the retailers of their ability to get a full supply of everything in cut flowers, except possibly sweet peas, and the latest reports indicate a good crop of these, which, with the violets that are promised, removes much apprehension about the corsage branch of the trade, which will certainly be heavy. All the local plant growers are completely sold out and many belated orders could not be accepted. And now the retailers' trials begin and all will be glad when the eventful week will have ended.

CLUB MEETING.

The club meeting April 11 was fairly well attended and was honored by the presence of the sweet pea specialist, Anton C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Calif. Some of the growers present were so incensed by the scarcity recently of news notes in the trade papers covering the local trade that a general discussion followed that absorbed nearly the whole of the evening and resulted in a resolution strongly urging the local representatives of the respective trade papers to be in the future more generous in their notes covering this district. The great flower show at Philadelphia, which all were eager to hear a report of from those present at the meeting who attended the show, was passed over in silence, while the bowling interests claimed the members' attention till a late hour. J. F. S.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

This society held its regular meeting April 14, and sprung a surprise on its members by displaying a collection of pansies consisting of about 18 varieties, grown and exhibited by Charles T. Beasley & Co., of East Milton, Mass. The specimens were beauties and were a rare sight indeed at this time of year. The exhibit was awarded a first-class certificate. H. R. Hurd, of the C. M. Beach estate, West Hartford, exhibited three vases of stocks of fine growth, both as to stem and size of blooms. The seed from which they were raised was procured in the Garden of Gethsemane, Jerusalem. The seed was secured from A. D. Khadder, dragoman for Thomas Cook & Son. This exhibit also was awarded a first-class certificate. President Hollister appointed Niel Nelson, George T. Whitten and Fred Boss judges.

Through the use of the question box, a discussion arose as to the best time to prune grape vines and the results of pruning too late in the season. A member said that continually pruning late in the season resulted in small fruit, and finally the death of the vine. Professor George T. Whitten, of the Watkinson Farm School, said that very good results were obtained at the school by partial pruning in the fall just before freezing, and then again in the early spring—February or March. This method seemed to meet the approval of the veteran gardeners.

Fred Boss, head gardener at Elizabeth park, gave a demonstration of pruning shrubs, accompanied by a most instructive talk of the various operations. He was followed by President Hollister, who showed the old and the new style of grafting and budding, giving a practical demonstration of the processes. John F. Huss, superintendent for Mrs. James J. Goodwin, exhibited small trees of hemlock, white pine and Japanese pine, variegated. These were grafted a year ago last February, and were fine specimens. He gave an account of his visit to the National Flower Show at Philadelphia and the spring flower show at New York. Mr. Huss was one of the judges at both of these events.

This meeting was well attended and five new members were added to the society's roster. Our next meeting will be held April 28, the subject to be announced later.

TRADE WELL PREPARED FOR EASTER.

Business during the past week has been rather quiet, as is usually the case just previous to Easter. There has also been a falling off in funeral work. Roses are of good quality, especially Ophelia, Maryland, Ward, Russell and White Killarney. Carnations are very fine and of large size. White Wonder and White Perfection lead, but Enchantress Supreme and Benora are also excellent. Orchid sweet peas are selling well and are of splendid quality, while prices are very reasonable. Lily of the valley is fair, but is not in great demand, Easter lilies and callas are plentiful. The violets are deteriorating due to the lateness of the season. Plants are seen in abundant supply and the trade all anticipate a heavy Easter demand.

NOTES.

Edwin C. Kaelber had an attractive window display consisting of a fountain filled with daffodils and yellow marguerites arranged with long sprays of asparagus. Small baskets filled with daffodils and yellow daisies were arranged in the foreground and added to the pleasing effect.

Horace J. Head, who has been ill with blood poisoning for the past two months, is still in the Rochester General hospital, but is convalescing and will soon be out again. He will go to Hilton, N. Y., for a time to build up his health.

The monthly meeting of the above society, which was held in Hubbard hall, Greenwich, Conn., April 14, was an important and interesting event, and a large number of members were present. President W. J. Sealy was in the chair. A feature was the excellent display on the exhibition tables, which while not large was of exceptional quality. The awards were as follows: James Foster, cultural certificate for vase of American Beauty roses; James Stuart, cultural certificate for vase of Ophelia roses; P. W. Popp, certificate of merit for collection of tulips, many of the newer sorts being included in the display; James Linane, honorable mention for Carnation Alma Ward; Robert Grunnert, honorable mention for Carnation Matchless. A discussion of the exhibits brought out many helpful points.

Two new members were admitted and several proposals for membership were received and filed. Harry Turner, of the Morris Nursery Co., was a visitor and addressed the meeting briefly. A committee was appointed to arrange for the summer show to be held in Mamaroneck, N. Y., in June, the dates to be announced later. We anticipate one of the society's best exhibitions. An attractive schedule is in preparation. The dates of the fall show to be held in Greenwich were announced, and will be October 31-November 1. The premium list will consist of valuable prizes of cash, cut glass and silverware. The schedule will be arranged to give everybody a chance to compete, either on a large or small scale. A discussion of the recent exhibitions, held in Philadelphia and New York, brought out some interesting observations. Next meeting, May 12. P. W. POPP, Cor. Sec'y.

EASTER DEMAND VERY GOOD.

Stock is more plentiful at this writing, especially roses and lilies, but it would not be at all surprising if everything cleaned up completely before the week is over. Trade, the opening of the week was nothing to speak of and there was hardly any demand for Palm Sunday which in former years cut quite a figure in this market. The warm weather has brought in large supplies of stock and some of the dealers are rather inclined to believe that there will be more than enough to go around but when one studies the market real closely he will not be so quick to agree with them and even would predict a shortage before the stores close Sunday noon. Carnations are more plentiful than anyone thought they would be for Easter, but clean up at an early hour each day at good prices. Roses are in good supply, especially Killarney and White Killarney. Mrs. Chas. Russell are seen in large numbers at many of the stores but good American Beauty roses are on the short side and command high prices. Lilies are very plentiful and are selling in large lots at reasonable prices but real first class stock does not appear to be in any great supply but there is more than enough short and medium stemmed grades offered. Violets have seen their best days and what little stock is arriving this late in the season is moving at satisfactory prices. Orchids are clearing each day at good prices and the same holds good for gardenias and lily of the valley. Some especially fine sweet peas are to be had and are in good demand, especially the better grades of the orchid flowering varieties. Gladioli are more plentiful and a large supply of Spanish Iris is now included in the shipments. Snapdragons, baby snap-up at all times in this line. Wild smilax is rather scarce but will probably be more plentiful toward the end of the week. Plants of all kinds have cleaned up nicely but there are still a large number of pot lilies around and these can be had at very reasonable prices. There were more lilies than ever this Easter but it is safe to say there will not be many left after Sunday. The supply houses have had an unusually good Easter business and report a heavy demand for both cut flowers and plant baskets. Moss green crepe paper is none too plentiful and is selling at high prices. Spireas in bloom are scarce.

NOTES.

The George Wittbold Co. has a splendid showing of plants at its retail establishment for Easter and everything points to the best trade in years. Fred Nelson, who has charge of the retail department, says that funeral orders have been unusually plentiful the past month and covered a wide territory. The new Wittbold flats and store will be a beauty spot on Buckingham place when completed, and will be ready for occupancy in the fall.

A. F. Keenan is doing a nice business at both of his stores on East Sixty-third street and reports that trade in his garden seed department was quite lively the past week. He bought a large number of Japanese fern balls this season and says that they sell like hot cakes at 50 cents retail.

Chas. A. Johnson has sold his store at 3205 West Fullerton avenue to E. Hughes, a nephew of Horace Hughes, the West Van Buren street florist, and will devote his entire time to the manufacture of florists' baskets.

The case against J. H. Prost, city forester, was dismissed by the city civil service commission, April 15. After hearing testimony from several witnesses, one of whom committed suicide after testifying against Mr. Prost, the merit board ordered his reinstatement. The charges, filed by Alderman Eugene Block, chairman of the special park commission, alleged that he had connived at petty grafting in the conduct of the Gage municipal farm. Members of the civil service commission privately expressed the opinion that employees at the farm might be at fault. There was no evidence to show that the city forester sanctioned the irregularities.

Percy Jones advertised imported moss green waterproof crepe paper for $12.50 per 100 rolls about a month ago in THE AMERICAN FLORIST and sold out completely in a very short time. Manager Van Gelder says that the florists throughout the country must have been pretty well acquainted with the crepe paper market conditions then, for they did not stop to write, but telegraphed in their orders immediately and before he would have a chance to withdraw the offer if he cared to do so. He just wanted to clean up the one lot he had set aside, but did not expect to receive anywhere near the tremendous large number of orders that were booked.

Zech & Mann's store force bowled three games with the W. H. Amling greenhouse employees at Maywood last Thursday evening, April 13, when they lost two out of three games played. The Zech & Mann team consisted of Allie Zech, Joe Erringer, Ed. Vilter, Fred Ottenbacher, Michael Freres and Nicholas Mann, and the Maywood team of W. H. Amling, Walter Amling, Herbert Amling, Martin Amling, Ernest Amling and A. Frigo. The feature of the evening was the bowling Wietor Bros. are cutting a fine supply of roses and carnations and report a brisk Easter trade. American Beauty roses are seen in good supply at this establishment and clean up nicely every day at high prices. This firm has a fine lot of chrysanthemum plants ready to be benched and will start planting right after Easter.

Many of the local wholesale florists received an announcement last week from Timothy Smith in regard to the opening of his new store at 4601 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, O. His many friends in the trade here wish him every success in his new quarters.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is having its share of the Easter business and Manager Klingsporn reports a great improvement in the shipping trade. A fine grade of smilax is a leader here this week.

A. M. Anderson has returned from the East, where he represented the A. L. Randall Co. at the National Flower Show at Philadelphia and the big spring show at New York.

Ed. Hauswirth has resigned his position with Archie Spencer and will open a flower store at 220 West Berry street, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Gov. Dunne proclaimed April 14 as Arbor day this year and the pupils of the city schools planted thousands of trees on the occasion.

FLOWERS OF QUALITY

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has sold out completely in Easter plants and the sales will be considerably ahead of last year according to August Poehlmann, who is more than pleased with the large number of orders that were booked. The force had all they could do to get out all the shipping orders on time and the two large delivery trucks were kept going all day long carrying stock to the depot and making city deliveries. H. M. Oeser, superintendent of the palm department, reports a brisk demand for stock and is already well sold out on certain varieties. The supply department is again featuring Hughes' box for Mothers' day and has a large enough stock on hand to fill all orders. The outside cover has an illustration by the famous artist, Gabriel Max, done in exquisite four-color work, and a redolent quotation in decorative printing, combined in unsurpassed artistic effect.

A. L. Vaughan and family were the guests of Mr. Heddington, Tuesday evening, April 11, at his apartments at 742 Buena avenue when they and about 40 other people had the pleasure of seeing themselves in the movies which were taken on their recent trip down the Mississippi river from Cairo to New Orleans, La. Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan celebrated their eighteenth wedding anniversary Tuesday, April 18. Trade at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store was very good this week and they have plenty of stock on hand to fill all the late orders that may arrive.

A. I. Simmons, 242 West Sixty-third street, has been appointed depot quartermaster again this year by Governor Dunne and will be with the troops at Ft. Sheridan for fourteen weeks this summer. Mr. Simmons is an expert in this line and at one time fed 4,500 troops as easily as he would have fed 100.

Peter Reinberg had a nice lot of pot lilies for Easter which were in brisk demand owing to the splendid quality and cleaned up quickly at most satisfactory prices. Felix Reichling says that business is very good and that stock of all kinds is in good demand and is cleaning up quickly each day.

Bassett & Washburn are having a big demand for the Belle Washburn carnation for Easter, which is cleaning up early every day at $6.00 per 100. The demand in general for Easter is surprisingly large and Mr. Washburn says that their Easter trade will be the best in years.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are well pleased with their Easter business so far, which was much better than they expected it would be. This firm is issuing a new wholesale supply list and will be pleased to mail one to anyone in the trade upon request.

John Mangel, born in Greece and now a wealthy florist, will tell you how he came to this city in 1885 with $3.50 and fought his way to the top in an early issue of the Chicago American, under the heading of "What America Did for Me."

Weiland & Risch had an exhibit of gladioli and a vase of their beautiful new rose, Champ Weiland, at the meeting of the Women's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association at the Art Institute, April 13-17.

John Poehlmann, Jr., is back from a visit to the Culver Military Academy at Culver, Ind. He graduated from that school last year and is now on active duty at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s city salesrooms.

F. S. Howard who has been confined to the Alexian Brothers hospital for the last month with an injured leg is able to be about again with the aid of a cane.

Joe Marks, with the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., has returned from the east, where he represented his firm at the Philadelphia and New York flower shows.

Miller & Musser are handling large quantities of southern jonquils, which they report are in good demand and clean up almost as quickly as they arrive.

GOOD PRE-EASTER DEMAND.

This week just ended has been a very busy one, both cut flowers and supplies being in very good demand. Baskets, crepe paper, mats, tapes, ribbons, chiffons and corsage accessories heading the list. Southern smilax for decorations is moving nicely. Stock is improving and also increasing in supply, but the demand has been very good. Sweet peas, however, have been short of the requirements, especially the longer grades. Lily of the valley has also been scarce. String smilax for the coming week promises to be very scarce. Orchids have not been equal to the call the past two weeks. Roses of all kinds are in good supply, and stock is very good. Asparagus plumosus has been in short supply, but growers promise an adequate amount for Easter week. Easter and calla lilies are plentiful. Tulips do not seem over abundant, but daffodils are in good supply. Snapdragon is good stock and cleans up daily. Forget-me-nots, daisies, anemones and other novelties are equal to the demand. Fancy ferns have taken another jump in price.

NOTES.

F. Chott, Fleet street florist, has been ill with pneumonia for some time. He was up and around for several days when he suffered a relapse and is now again very ill. His little daughter is ill at the same time with typhoid fever, and the work and worry has nearly put Mrs. Chott down with a nervous break-down. At last reports, the sick ones were slightly better, but still dangerously ill.

The Park Flower Shop, 144 Euclid avenue, has been incorporated for $10,000. The incorporators are Albert B. Barber, John M. Fratus, Anna B. Barber, R. E. Elvidge and E. R. Cook. This company will also open a branch in Youngstown, O., at 7 West Federal street, under the same name.

Wm. Ostrodi, formerly with Smith & Feters Co., will go with Timothy Smith in the new store he is opening in the East 46th street and Euclid avenue market house building, and Geo. Schaub, now with the Crane Co., will go to the Smith & Feters Co.

Minneapolis.

From all indications there will be a good supply of stock for Easter, especially in lilies, rambler roses, hydranges and spireas. The only possible shortage will be azaleas and lilac plants. Carnations and roses are in full crop at a slight advance in price. Funeral work has been very heavy during the past week. Most of the trade found it necessary to work overtime to get it out.

NOTES.

The L. S. Donaldson Co.'s greenhouses were in gala attire on Palm Sunday. In response to advertisements which appeared in the papers the place was thronged with visitors who enjoyed a treat in the splendid display of Easter plants. Messrs. Desmond and Vasatka had the stock in the best of condition, and quantity, quality and arrangement were all noticeable.

O. J. Olson, of the well-known firm of Holm & Olson, St. Paul, has had three operations performed at St. Luke's hospital in that city. Latest reports are to the effect that he is now on the way to a speedy recovery. Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks of this city, visited him Sunday.

The St. Paul florists' bowling team defeated the Minneapolis team and Captain Hanson now wears the smile. Following the bowling match at the Elks' alleys in this city, a banquet was served which was enjoyed by about 60 of the florists and their friends.

Louis P. Dancik, proprietor of the Northwestern Wire Works of this city, has petitioned the city council to stop the sale of second hand or used wire designs from cemeteries, on account of the danger of spreading contagious diseases through the use of same.

Due to a typographical error in last week's notes, it was made to appear that Max Kaiser had only 3,000 Easter lily plants. This should have read 30,000 lily plants.

H. B. Whitted has returned from the Philadelphia flower show, with plenty of new ideas and a large stock of novelties which are on display at both stores.

Wm. F. Holmes has both of his windows decorated with the very latest

GOOD EASTER STOCK PLENTIFUL.

From present indications there will be a large supply of good cut flowers in this market that should prove adequate for the Easter demand. The supply of Easter lilies is exceptionally large, and, as a whole, is very good, and so far there has been very little "pickled" stock. Roses, too, including American Beauties, are in heavy supply. Carnations are plentiful, and will be available in good quantities. Sweet peas, too, are in a large supply. A good cut of jonquils, daffodils and poeticus is coming into the market, while the supply of Dutch hyacinths is fair. Tulips are not very plentiful. Enough lily of the valley may be had to take care of present needs. Other offerings include callas, snapdragons and marguerites. Greens are in a good supply. Southern smilax is meeting with a good call.

NOTES.

Tom Windram has purchased another auto, an Overland roadster, which he has converted into a delivery truck.

The Wm. Murphy Co. will have a heavy cut of Easter lilies and carnations for their Easter trade this week.

E. G. Gillett will have a large quantity of Easter lilies, roses and sweet peas for his Easter trade.

J. A. Peterson & Sons have an exceptional lot of pot roses for their Easter trade.

C. E. Critchell has arranged for a good lot of stock for Easter.

A. Miller is in town with his pencil and is booking orders for next year's crop of lily bulbs for A. Henderson & Co., Chicago.

Thomas Lynes makes it a point to have his windows attractive at all times—and of course Easter is no exception.

John Martins of Bloomington avenue has the newest automobile in town. It has the real grass green color.

Rice Bros. are crowded for space, but are taking care of a big spring rush in both flowers and supplies.

The Lake Street Florists have a very brilliant electric sign. The window arrangements here are very tasty.

Oscar Swanson has as usual a fine stock and the windows are filled with Easter flowers and plants.

Ralph Latham has every inch of space in his establishment filled with lilies and Easter plants.

The Eldridge Floral Co. have some attractive windows. These are arranged by Henry Barsch.

O. H. Carlson is enjoying his usual good luck. His establishment is in full crop for Easter.

James Mitchell of the Spa Floral Co. always has an attractive window display.

INDICATIONS OF IMMENSE EASTER DEMAND.

At this writing all signs point to the greatest, most profitable Easter trade ever experienced in this city. Retailers and growers alike report on hand a greatly increased supply of all kinds of seasonable plants. Lilies are in greater supply than ever before, but florists are trying to diversify the demand to all kinds of plants this year. There are plenty of sweet peas, carnations and roses. At seasons of the year like Easter, Christmas and Mothers' day, florists can advertise with much profit to themselves. At least that is the opinion of Toledo retailers and they are going in for a large ad in the daily papers. This method concentrates the attention of the buying public on flowers for Easter in a very effective manner.

NOTES.

The next meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club will be held the Tuesday after Easter. The Retail Merchants' Board has kindly donated the use of a very large room in the Nicholas building for all future meetings of the club. J. H. Coombs, the efficient secretary of this board, will address the florists at the next meeting on the value of organization and co-operation. A big attendance is looked for.

At the opening of the American Association baseball season here April 11, a huge baseball, standing fully five feet in height was given to Manager Bresnahan. It was made entirely of carnations and was the work of Earl Metz of Metz and Bateman. It was unique and attracted a great deal of attention.

Schramm Brothers are plunging heavily in advertising this season in the expectation of making a clean sweep. They are sending out thousands of handsome folders in colors besides using newspaper space liberally. Three delivery cars will be used to deliver Easter orders.

S. N. Peck who for many years has operated a range of houses on South street and a retail store on Superior street has sold his range to William Knowles, of New York, an experienced grower who has already started to make many improvements in his houses.

Jack Gardner, formerly employed by Harry Heini, will open a flower shop early in May in the building now being completed at the corner of Walnut and Bancroft streets. He is well known here and plans to have a first class shop in every respect.

Miss Helen Patten has purchased another delivery car to take care of her constantly enlarging business. Trade has been very lively with her for some time past and she predicts a fine Easter business.

Harry Turvey has been making great strides in his business in West Toledo which has just been annexed to this city. He is buying heavily for Easter and expects to greatly increase his trade this year.

Henry Barrow is sending in some splendid pansies. He is very busy and reports a lively trade in plants of all kinds.

GOOD BUSINESS CONTINUES.

The weather during the past week has been favorable, trade has been brisk, and there has been plenty of good stock to select from. Funeral work has not been as heavy as usual, but there has been a marked increase in orders for decorations. On Palm Sunday, every available palm in the city was in use in the churches. Pot plants are in greater supply than ever and find ready sale. Some very fine roses in variety, spiraeas, azaleas, hydrangeas, etc., are to be seen. Cut roses are more plentiful but Killarneys still lead in popularity. Carnations have shortened somewhat in supply, but sweet peas are plentiful and the quality is excellent.

NOTES.

Everything is all set for a big Easter trade at W. J. Barnes' establishment. The finishing touches have been put on the pot plants and all stock is in prime condition. He had several large palm orders for Palm Sunday; also a number of orders for large made-up pot plants for the mayor's office and council chamber.

Samuel Murray has been showing some especially fine Spencer sweet peas, novelties in different forms, in his windows. Fine rambler roses in various shapes are also a feature, as are splendid hydrangeas. A number of splendid floral arrangements from this establishment were seen at the city hall.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports first class trade with plenty of fancy stock to work with. Orders for funerals and decorations are plentiful. Some very good stock of home-grown Gladiolus America are a feature here.

A. Newell has been very busy with orders for funeral work and hospital flowers. He has a heavy stock of pot plants. Several elaborate arrangements went from this establishment for the mayor's inauguration.

H. Kusik & Co. received a shipment April 15 of 8,000 yellow jonquils. Their supply of roses and sweet peas is also large, but all stock is moving well.

T. J. Noll & Co. are handling immense quantities of cut stock. Heavy Easter business has been booked.

The Peterson Floral Co. had numerous orders for the inauguration of the newly-elected mayor, April 17.

Patrick Larkin reports business good in all branches.

E. J. B.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Immense quantities of bulbous flowers and plants have been a feature of the market during the past week. Pansies and Spanish iris are among the newer varieties of stock to be seen on the market. Roses are more plentiful, but are none too abundant, while carnations are in moderate supply. Large numbers of blooming plants are being brought into the retail stores, the trade is advertising extensively and a fine Easter trade is anticipated.

Several elaborate decorations for dinners and dances were executed during the week by the Flick Floral Co. A Saturday sale of spring flowers also brought good sales.

Some fine stock of Cattleya Trianae are being cut at the greenhouses of W. J. & M. S. Vesey both for the local and outside markets.

PREPARATIONS FOR EASTER COMPLETE.

The market is full of flowers; there is great variety, good quality, everything up to the top notch of efficiency from the productive standpoint. American Beauties are now in full crop, fine flowers coming to the market from all growers. All other varieties of roses are plentiful with prices ruling low. Sweet peas are easing up a bit; they have never been seen in such quantity or of as uniform good quality as offered this season. Carnations, while fine, are quoted at low figures—the cool weather favors them. Snapdragon is now at its best and has a fair demand. Gardenias are now the poor man's flower, being sold so low that this title fits them to a penny. Good lilac finds a ready market. The cool weather favors the violet, but the demand is light. Cattleyas—plenty of them at buyer's prices. Lily of the valley is in favor and will, the growers say, be one of the choice things at Easter. Easter lilies have been coming in ahead of the demand and promise to be plentiful at no increase in price throughout the week. A late Easter is as a rule subject to spells of hot weather which many a grower remembers to his cost. With this in mind the schedule time at which the various stocks were brought along this season, has resulted in many cases very unsatisfactorily. A number of the growers have whole houses of roses, which have been given great care and preparation in training in the various popular forms of pyramids, umbrellas, baskets, etc., which at this late day, April 15, hardly show color. Many hydrangeas are in much the same condition, being carried in a Turkish bath atmosphere in the effort to make them. There appears to be an abundance of the Easter lilies; these are about right as to time, although some growers are a bit anxious. The market is unsteady as to price, the offerings to department stores and other large buyers being as low as $7 per hundred flowers on the plants, $10 per hundred being the ruling price of hundred plant lots. A look around the stores shows considerable novelty in the various receptacles such as plant baskets, vases, decorated pots, trellis boxes, etc. Common earthen pots, with what might be called poster decorations, are very striking. These consist of broad black and white stripes of enamel, with in some cases, rose, tulip and other flower decorations. Blue and white, yellow and white, and other showy stripe combinations in all sizes of pots and bulb pans filled with plants, will be one of the novelties of the season. The trellis boxes are very prominent, while the trellis effect obtained in placing the square or diamond shaped frames, painted white or green, in pots of rambling roses or made up boxes and pans of assorted plants, adds very materially to the appearance and selling value of the article.

All the retailers expect a record breaking business; great preparations have been made, many empty stores being rented for the week to store the surplus stock and handle the deliveries. From the advance orders received the commission houses expect

NOTES.

There was at one time a question as to who ran the florist business of the Snellenberg department store. Those who were unfortunate enough to get caught with unpaid accounts at the time of the failure of this venture have discovered that the space was only rented, the business being conducted by the lessees on a commission basis, the house not being in any way responsible for bills contracted.

quantity immense. Other roses, carnations, sweet peas and Easter lilies are seen in unlimited quantities.

Harry Faust, of Merion, the Easter lily specialist, whose stock runs into the thousands of pots each year, has found a tissue paper strip or band 36 inches long by two in width is ideal for tying up the flowers when shipping them in the pots. The ends of the paper will hold like twine. Since adopting this plan there is scarcely any complaint of bruised flowers.

J. Wolff Moore put a 40-horse power Buick on the street last week that about tops the list of florists' cars in this city. The body has rounded lines, no sharp corners, is eight feet in length inside behind the seat, six feet two inches high and four feet two inches in width. It is a very commodious car, yet the lines and dark blue finish are so elegant, there is nothing van-like in its appearance.

Joseph Josephs, who purchased the business at 1722 Columbia avenue, to which he removed from 1906 Columbia avenue, is much pleased with his new location. He has just added a Ford car to his delivery service, which he finds of great assistance.

The Robert Craig Co. has immense quantities of spring bedding plants in variety waiting to take the place of their Easter stock. They have worked up a large business for this class of plants in the last few years.

The supply houses were rushed as never before up to the very last, the local demand keeping them busy with repeat orders.

Easter lilies are the feature with Berger Bros. Orchid sweet peas, select carnations and roses are also seen in quantity.

The plant boxes, painted white, and decorated in poster fashion with varicolored bubbles, are very striking.

H. P. Battles, who founded his retail cut flower business at 108 South Twelfth street about 25 years ago, will remove immediately after Easter to his own building, 114 South Twelfth street, which he now conducts as a vase shop. Modest as was his business in its first years, it has steadily grown until it is one of the greatest in this country, there being over 75 employees engaged in its various branches the year round, with greatly augmented force at holiday seasons.

At a meeting of the creditors of L. P. Vollers, 1725 Chestnut street, the offer of E. R. Martin, 1535 Pasayunk avenue to purchase the business and everything pertaining to it, including the book accounts of about $2,000, for the sum of $5,000, was accepted, he to take possession at once. Walter Davis has been added to the present force to represent Mr. Martin.

Easter lilies and American Beauty roses are leaders with Edward Reid's holiday business. High grade carnations and orchid sweet peas are also features.

Robert Kift has opened a retail store at 1726 Chestnut street, right opposite his old stand. K.

GOOD EASTER TRADE ANTICIPATED.

With the usual reaction that always follows a flower show, a continuation of bad weather and on the eve of a great holiday like Easter, it was to be expected that business would be bad during the past week and it even surpassed all expectations. There was very little doing until April 15, when the weather cleared and now gives promise of business for Easter. Stock will be plentiful, and as a rule, high prices will be impossible. Good cattleya orchids are an exception. The indications are that they will reach $1 per flower, wholesale, possibly higher, because they are scarce. There is a good supply of lilies, many of them being short, but it does not seem possible that the best can go above $10 and $12 per 100, bud and flower. The finest carnations may reach $3.50 per 100, but we doubt it. There must be a great stock of carnations in reserve that will glut the market a few days before Easter. American Beauty roses may reach $50 per 100 and the average of the best tea roses may reach $12 or possibly $15 per 100, but that will be the limit. Sweet peas and gardenias are very plentiful and will be cheap. Violets are not now arriving in great supply, but we recall other Easters. The plant business will loom large, as nearly everything in the plant line will be in bloom. Investigation at the retail stores shows that they are all making great preparations to handle plants. Weather conditions will have much to do with the sale of cut flowers.

April 17.—The market opened fairly active, but excepting in orchids, there are no high prices. The indications are that carnations were being held back. Lily of the valley is wholesaling up to $5 per 100. Special American Beauty roses are slow at $20 to $30 per 100. In lilies, both in pots and cut, there seems to be a great stock in sight and there will be no high figures. An immense stock of exceptionally fine sweet peas is arriving, but high prices are impossible. Indications point to a great plant trade for Easter, but nothing definite can be stated about cut flowers. Roses are cheap and hard to move. Carnations are wholesaling at $4 and $5 per hundred, but indications point to a big drop by Saturday.

NOTES.

Friends in this city of C. F. Bertanzell and wife of Roslyn, L. I., were greatly shocked, April 17, to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Bertanzell, which occurred on Palm Sunday. She had been to church and soon after returning home, collapsed and died in a short time. About 12 years ago, her husband, who had been a private gardener, established the Wheatly Gardens, at Roslyn, both growing and retailing. Mrs. Bertanzell was active in the business and they were successful from the start, both being well known in New York, where Mr. Bertanzell was a stockholder in the Growers' Cut Flower Company. She was a native of Switzerland, about 40 years old, and is survived by her husband and two children.

Herman Kuhn, the retailer of Sixth avenue and 50th street, had a birthday, Palm Sunday. Herman looks to be about 45, but old-timers figure that he is older. However that may be, he is a fine and active man. William Hanft, of Young & Nugent's staff, has also just had a birthday. William is "not as young as he used to be," but is yet very active as a designer and decorator.

Moore, Hentz & Nash, in the Coogan building, are handling very fine Killarney Queen roses. One hundred blooms of similar stock took first prize at the late show. They are all grown by the Bedford Flower Co., Bedford Hills, N. Y.

Henshaw & Fenrich announce dissolution of partnership, effective April 29. A. M. Henshaw will from that date operate the Henshaw Floral Co., Inc., at 127 West Twenty-eighth street and Jos. S. Fenrich will do business under his own name at 51 West Twenty-eighth street.

A force of workmen are active in remodeling the building at 503 Madison avenue, which J. H. Small & Sons will occupy as a retail store after May 1. It will be one of the finest stores in this city.

At the store of Drakos & Co., 2953 Broadway, which is controlled by J. G. Papademos, who also has another Broadway store, we have noted exceptionally fine rambler roses, hydrangeas and other plants.

D. J. Pappas, president of the Greek-American Florists' Association and a well known Broadway retailer, stated that he was well stocked and expected good business.

Herman Weiss, of 106 West 28th street, is well pleased with the sweet pea prizes taken at the show by his grower, A. E. Jackson, of West Summit, N. J.

SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

The eleventh annual spring flower show, held under the auspices of the Pasadena Horticultural Society, opened April 13, continuing to April 15, inclusive. The weather conditions were perfect; though a recent hot spell forced out many of the roses; the exhibition on the whole was good. In the cut flower division, of course roses and bulbous flowers predominated. Of roses, Gen. McArthur and the Cochetts were in greater abundance. The tulip display was superb, as was also that of ranunculus. A basket of the latter flower won first in the class of floral decorations. They were of the French variety and in yellow. Ixias were scarce and only fair in quality. The irises were good, but they were not very plentiful. Carnations were scarce and not what should be expected from the gardens at this time of year. Some of the best roses exhibited were not in competition, being shown by those who can be classed as simply lovers of this, the best beloved of all the flowers. There were fine specimens also in the amateur exhibit. In other varieties of cut flowers, we mention antirrhinums, and aquilegias, both good in quality. Canterbury bells were not to be seen nor were gladioli. Stocks were plentiful, as were sweet peas, there being some very good displays in winter flowering Spencers. There were also plenty of watsonias, both in white and pink.

The best general display of flowering and foliage plants was that of William T. Shields, gardener for Mrs. S. H. Allerton. The arrangement was good, and the assortment of the best. This display received the blue ribbon. Other displays were made by some of the commercial growers of which the most important was that of the Clemence Nursery, Pasadena. They had a large showing of standard roses and foliage plants. The Mentor Nursery, also of Pasadena, had a well arranged display of plants, many of them being more or less scarce. Everything they had was labeled. The Miller Rose Co. had a splendid display of roses of such varieties as Richmond, Mme. Chatenay, Sunburst, Milady, Shawyer, Gen. McArthur and Ulrich Brunner. They were outdoor grown, but all varieties grown for cutting.

Among the business firms represented there was the Campbell Seed Co., with a display of seeds, pansies and winter flowering Spencer sweet peas. Morris & Snow, Los Angeles, seedsmen, were showing seeds in packets, bulbous flowers and fertilizers. Germain Seed & Plant Co., also Los Angeles, was represented with a line of shrubbery and foliage plants from their nursery. The Patton Seed Co., of Pasadena, had a neat display of seeds, and flowers grown from their seeds.

The Orchid Flower Shop had a display of cut flowers. They were busy at the store, too, and the demand will keep them hustling the balance of the week. They had a beautiful specimen of Genista monosperma. John H. Teekamp, importer of Dutch bulbs, had a splendid display of bulbous flowers, especially of tulip and ranunculus varieties.

Probably the best representative display was that of Paul J. Howard, the landscape artist and horticulturist, of Los Angeles. It was arranged as a formal garden, with the lawn and brick walls surrounded by a neat hedge, while a border for the walk was made up of potted baby roses. Scattered here and there were set pieces of specimen conifer and flowering plants. Bulbous flowers, and a fine assortment of irises furnished the color.

BELLE WASHBURN

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT

BELLE WASHBURN won the silver medal of the Society of American Florists' at the 1915 Buffalo, N. Y., Exhibition, and again won the Society of American Florists' silver medal and American Carnation Society's silver medal at the St. Louis, Mo., Exhibition, January 26-27, 1916. This is the only variety that ever won the Society of American Florists' silver medal two years in succession, which is worth considering when buying new varieties. Results count—order accordingly.

The best red Carnation. Young plants in 2½ in. pots, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 500 at the 1000 rate.

The color is the most brilliant red of any carnation on the market. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. The calyx never bursts and all flowers grade first. Best of all it is a steady and constant bloomer giving just as many flowers as the Enchantress of which it is a seedling. Orders from the far west can be sent direct to our Mr. E. B. Washburn, 252 South Orange Grove Avenue, Pasadena, Calif., who will give them his personal attention. An inspection of our greenhouses either at Hollywood, Calif., or Hinsdale, Ill., is invited.

California Seed Crops.

Gilroy, April 14.—L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., advises as follows:

The general seed crop average promises only fair. Onion leaves are mildewed, but the stocks are not sufficiently developed to be injured. The next 30 days will be the critical period for this crop with the present estimate under normal and sales heavy.

Salsify is very poor and probably will be the shortest item this season.

Lettuce looks well, but is late.

Endive, parsnip and parsley are fair.

Carrot is late, but looks fair.

Radish, good.

Sweet peas, mixed, are short on account of the large tracts lost from floods.

Sweet peas, named, are very good.

French Bulb Notes.

NARCISSUS PAPER WHITE GRANDIFLORA.

Flowering in the local fields is reported to have been normal this year, even bulbs of smaller size than those shipped to the trade blooming satisfactorily. Regarding the report of non-flowering of bulbs in America, a careful representative in the south of France says that the non-flowering may be ascribed to several causes, such as possible lack of care in cultivation; the fact that after a year of very abundant flowering the bulb may have suffered a certain exhaustion influencing its bloom for the following year; bulbs lifted a little too early before they are completely matured are not likely to flower normally. As to the crop of 1916, it transpires that about 25 per cent of the bulbs of merchantable size that could have been shipped last season were left undug in the ground, and of these hardly 20 per cent will be suitable for shipment, the remainder being deformed. The acreage planted is about the same as last season, but there will be less bulbs fit for sale. The second size bulbs which ought to have been lifted and replanted have been left in the ground for lack of labor and will not develop normally. The lifting of the bulbs this season will be still more difficult than in 1915 because of even greater shortage of help. Since March 1 we have had too much rain.

Another French grower says: "If any percentage of narcissus bulbs delivered from this district the past season to America have produced only foliage, I attribute this to the season having been very rainy and humid, so that in the late fall of 1914, when the bulbs were planted the roots of these bulbs were started before planting out and the plantings were late. I can see no other explanation."

WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS.

The 1915 crop not having been large, the total acreage planted must be below the average and with labor shortage the bulbs have not had the usual care. The March rain has caused some re-appearance of the Roman hyacinth disease. On the whole, the crop of Romans is likely to be rather poor and difficulties regarding the lifting of the bulbs and labor shortage will no doubt interfere.

Packing cases will be invoiced at 3 francs instead of 2 and 2½ francs as before.

The Growers' Syndicate will meet May 6.

Plant Introduction Tract Gift to Gov't.

A government plant introduction station to succeed the bulb propagation station at Bellingham, Wash., was assured, April 13, through the acceptance by government officials of a tract comprising 60 acres of fertile land north of the city limits, the gift of the Mackay Realty Company, a local concern. The donor offered the government the opportunity of making a selection from among thousands of acres of land owned by the company, and the site selected is ideally located, having a frontage of three-eighths of a mile on a paved road, and the soil is well adapted to the purpose for which it will be used. Bulb propagation will be carried on as has been done at the present station at Bellingham, and the announcement that plant introduction will also be a feature gives promise that this station will become one of the largest of its kind in the United States.

Inoculating Seed.

Coating the seed of legumes with inoculated soil, before planting, is a simple method of insuring soil inoculation at slight cost. County agents in Illinois have found ordinary furniture glue effective in holding particles of inoculated soil to the seeds. This method gives each individual seed some of the particles of inoculated soil which it carries with it when it is planted. The scheme requires but a small amount of inoculated soil and costs but a few cents an acre. The method is described in Farmers' Bulletin 704 of the United States department of agriculture as follows:

Dissolve two handfuls of furniture glue for every gallon of boiling water and allow the solution to cool. Put the seed in a washtub and then sprinkle enough of the solution on the seed to moisten but not to wet it (one quart per bushel is sufficient) and stir the mixture thoroughly until all the seed are moistened.

Secure the inoculated soil from a place where the same kind of plants as the seed are growing, making sure that the roots have a vigorous development of nodules. Dry the soil in the shade, preferably in the barn or basement and pulverize it thoroughly into a dust. Scatter this dust over the moistened seed, using from one-half to one gallon of dirt for each bushel of seed, mixing thoroughly until the seed no longer stick together. The seed are then ready to sow.

THE new operation of the insecticide act of April 26, 1910, will be effective on May 1 in part and further and completely effective November 1 next. Neither the law nor the amendment No. 3 makes clear and plain the question as to whether the wholesalers, dealers or jobbers are protected against prosecution under the new provision of the amendment and seedsmen who are handling insecticides would do well to consult the Insecticide and Fungicide Board at Washington.

THE Daily Press reports that Germany has barred as luxuries the importation of plants and cut flowers. This is a great blow to Hollanders who have been making money this last year in German trade. The Dutch horticulturists have asked Holland's foreign office to do its utmost for permission to readmit plants and flowers. Meanwhile the Dutch horticulturists are trying to extend their market to Scandinavian countries.

FRENCH seed growers practically without exception decline to make contracts, owing to their inability to secure men to handle the crops.

Celery Sprayers Warned.

Celery growers are being warned again by the United States department of agriculture that the use of salts of copper in food products has been officially pronounced injurious to health, and that in spraying celery care must be taken to see that copper is not left upon the celery.

Bordeaux mixture, made of lime and copper sulphate, is used extensively to prevent the destruction of the Florida celery crop by blight. Carelessness in the use of this mixture sometimes results in leaving excessive amounts of copper on the stalks. Frequently this is due to the use of knapsack instead of power outfits. The knapsack outfits do not operate at a sufficiently high pressure to make a fine spray or mist. Under these circumstances the Bordeaux mixture reaches the plants in a number of fine streams which fail to cover the leaves as a mist or fog would do, but run down between the stalks and accumulate at the base of the plants. The presence of the mixture there is indicated by the blue-green appearance of the base of the celery.

This trouble may be obviated by the use of an efficient apparatus working under a pressure of 150 pounds or more. As soon as the leaves are thoroughly covered with a mist of the mixture, the spraying should be stopped. This allows the mixture no opportunity to run down the stalks. As for the leaves, when there are copper salts upon them they should not be eaten.

The investigations by the department show that with proper precautions there is no reason why spraying to prevent blight should result in the accumulation of copper. For this reason the department has warned growers against marketing celery with copper in undue amounts upon it. The consumer also is advised, in cases where there is any reason to suspect an accumulation of copper, to break up the bunches of celery and scrub the stalks thoroughly. This will remove practically all the copper and there will be no danger of bad effects.

Carrots in England.

A farmer at Besthorpe, Nottinghamshire, Eng., successfully demonstrated during the 1915 season the value of carrots, both for home use and as a money crop. The experiment, according to Consul C. M. Hitch, was made on nine and a half acres of light, sandy soil, although the results would have been better on a heavier soil.

In February, 10 tons of manure were scattered broadcast over the land, and thoroughly plowed in, and in the following month 500 pounds of salt per acre was applied. A top dressing of fertilizer was applied at various points during the month of June. Where there was no top dressing, the yield was 16 tons of carrots per acre. On that portion of the land where a top dressing of 250 pounds of superphosphate and nitrate of soda was applied, the yield was 18½ tons per acre. The top dressing was applied on June 22, and on another portion of the land a second top dressing of 100 pounds of nitrate of soda was applied on July 15, which brought the yield up to 20½ tons per acre. These weights are all for good roots marketed, and do not include small roots that were kept for farm consumption.

The price obtained for the carrots was $15 per ton, which is considerably below what they are selling for at the present time. Based on an average yield of 18 tons per acre, the farmer realized $270 per acre or a total of $2,565 for the 9½ acres.

Northampton, Mass.

A unique feature in Butler & Ullman's show window last week was a Shakespearean garden, which appealed strongly to admirers of the immortal bard. It was a fine piece of advertising, for "Hamlet" was played to crowded houses all the week in the Municipal theatre, opposite their store. The various plants and flowers were neatly labelled with Shakespeare's reference to them. Amongst those noted were the box and bay trees, bachelor's buttons, carnations, cowslips, daffodils, lilies, marigolds, pansies, pinks, primroses, roses and weeds. It was a very happy idea and called forth much favorable comment. Business has been very good, with the parcel post service a growing feature. On Sunday last, the public was invited to view the display of Easter plants at their greenhouses, and a good number availed themselves of the opportunity.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President;
John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite Bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

BANGOR, ME.—Samuel R. Prentiss has been appointed park commissioner for this city.

FARMERS' BULLETIN No. 709 is devoted to Muscadine grapes, 28 pages with numerous illustrations.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The Westover Nursery Co. has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $5,000.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—An office and show-room at 412 South Salina street will be opened by Chas. A. Stewart, who conducts a nursery on Glen avenue.

NORTH ABINGTON, MASS.—W. H. Wyman, proprietor of the Bay State Nurseries, has acquired 30 acres of land at Rockland, Mass., and will use same for nursery purposes.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Gust V. Peterson and Eugene N. Sandahl, both well known in the nursery business here, have consolidated and will have headquarters at First avenue and Denny way.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The Roeding & Wood Nursery Co. will concentrate all its efforts at its extensive establishment at La Habra, having disposed of its ornamental nurseries at Laguna.

SCOHARIE, N. Y.—F. A. Guernsey & Co., Inc., with a capital stock of $25,000, have engaged in business. In addition to nursery stock, there will be departments for seeds and florists' supplies.

"THE Cherry and Hawthorn Sawfly Leaf-Miner" is the title of Bulletin No. 411, issued by the New York agricultural experiment station, Geneva, which treats of the history and methods of control of a pest that makes its appearance during early May and causes damage to sour cherries, especially the English Morello variety.

Royal Grapevine Has Record.

James Jack, keeper of the famous grapevine at Hampton court palace, near London, England, has retired after 32 years' active service as chief custodian of the king's vine. The vine was planted in 1768 by "Capability" Brown, the famous landscape gardener of the eighteenth century. The vine is now considered one of the finest in the world. It stretches in wide, perfectly trimmed squares, 80 feet by 26, the whole length and breadth of the greenhouse. Two hundred bunches of grapes from it are sent to King George at Windsor every year. The grape is the old Black Hamburg. Some years ago 12 bunches were shown at an exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society and were awarded the Hogg memorial medal for special excellence and culture. Two of the bunches weighed three pounds and fourteen ounces each, and the whole 12 weighed about 42 pounds, an average of three and one-half pounds each.—General Press.

Nursery Trade Terms.

The uniform trade terms advocated by the American Association of Nurserymen are as follows:

"All bills payable net 60 days from date of invoice with discount two per cent 10 days, one per cent 30 days.

"Late fall shipments intended for spring trade, June 1, net or four per cent discount 30 days from date of invoice.

"For cash in advance, a three per cent cash discount is allowed.

"All wholesale prices are for goods in nursery, packing extra.

"No claims for rejections or deficiencies will be entertained unless made within 10 days after arrival of goods."

Washington, D. C.

BUSINESS HOLDS UP WELL.

As a rule, business always takes a drop before Easter, but at present writing it is exceptionally good in all branches. Stock has been plentiful and at prices that satisfied everybody. American Beauties could be had at prices ranging from $1.50 to $5 per dozen, the latter price for the very best stock. Other roses, such as Kil-larneys of all kinds, Ophelia, Ward, Radiance, Shawyer, Mock and Russell were quoted from $3 to $12 per 100. Carnations of the best quality sold for $3 per 100. Gardenias were plentiful, as were also jonquils and tulips. Orchids were the item that was scarce. There seems to be plenty of flowering plants for Easter, such as azaleas, ramblers of all kinds, fine lilac plants and the rhododendron plants are extra fine. The stores look forward to a heavy sale on this special plant. Each year the department stores stock up with azaleas and pot lilacs, but during the past week, one of the local 10-cent stores had a special sale of jonquils at 10 cents per dozen.

NOTES.

The two bowling teams representing the florists in the Atlantic Coast bowling tournament were those of Gude Bros. and Geo. C. Shaffer. They failed to get in the money, but there was a good excuse—there were so many ladies present it kept the "boys" busy giving out roses and carnations to the fair sex.

In a contest for window decoration arranged by one of the local newspapers, George C. Shaffer won first prize, Gude Bros. being second. Competition was keen and all who entered deserve credit for the excellent showing made.

Theo. Diedrick is sending in some of the finest pink and yellow snapdragons ever seen in this city. G. C. D.

ROSES.YOU NEED THE BIG MONEY MAKER, CHAMP WEILAND.

In color the most exquisite pink ever seen in a rose. Here is a rose, Mr. Grower, that caused the critics to shake their heads, but it was an up-and-down nod instead of the doubtful negative shake.

DO YOU ASK WHY?

Because in this rose they found their ideal, in the qualities that tend to make a truly grand variety, namely, color, foliage, size, beauty and freedom of bloom.

Small wonder—for in this rose we find a color unequalled by any other "sport" creation of recent years. Take the tip—grow "Champ Weiland." Now ready, grafted plants, 100 for $35.00; 250 for $82.50; 500 for $150.00; 1,000 for $300.00.

MRS. CHAS. RUSSELL.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the above society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., Wednesday evening, April 12, at 7 o'clock. Through the summer and autumn months the meetings will be held at this time instead of in the afternoon as has been the custom during the winter. In the absence of President James McDonald, Vice-President Joseph Adler presided during the meeting. A letter was received from Harry Jones, who has been secretary of this society for the past year and a half, stating that as he had moved to a point some distance from Glen Cove, he felt it advisable to resign from that position. Mr. Jones has been a most efficient and hard working official, and it was with the sincere regret of all the members that his resignation was accepted. Henry Gibson, of Roslyn Heights, was elected secretary for the remainder of the year.

A letter was received from the International Garden Club, requesting the co-operation of this society in regard to the open air flower show, which the Garden Club is arranging to hold in June. Offers of two prizes were received for our coming rose show; one for a collection of 12 peonies, and the other for a collection of vegetables. An essay on "Estate Management and College Education," by Morrel Smith, of New York, was received from the National Association of Gardeners. It was listened to with great interest and a lively discussion followed its reading.

Samuel Trepas read a most interesting paper on "Peaches Under Glass." He went into his subject in a most thorough manner and it was full of practical information. At the conclusion of the essay, Mr. Trepas answered a number of questions pertaining to peach growing which were asked by some of the members. He exhibited a grafted peach tree and also some fruiting wood and non-fruiting wood of the peach.

Schedules for the tulip show and the rose show, which had been drawn up by the executive committee, were read and adopted. It was decided to hold the tulip show during the week of May 14, the exact date to be announced later, and to hold the rose show June 14.

Henry Gaut, George Gilder and Thomas Twigg were appointed as judges of the exhibits and made the following awards: Best three heads of lettuce, Harry Goodband; best 12 roses, John Everett; best 12 sweet peas, James McCarthy. Vase of Spencer sweet peas, exhibited by Peter McLeod, certificate of culture. Bunch of violets exhibited by William Noonan, honorable mention.

JAMES MCCARTHY, Cor. Sec'y.

The Dream of May Time.

Let's dream of the May time,
When, after the snow,
We'll reach the green meadows,
Where white daisies grow,
And hear the birds singing
Just all that they know!

Let's dream of the May time,
When earth shall be bright
As it was in its morning
When God gave it light,
With its roses of red
And its lilies of white.

MOTHERS' DAY.

First Suggested by The American Florist, May 16, 1908.

An Interview With the Founder.

In a recent interview with Miss Anna Jarvis, the founder of Mothers' day, it was apparent that she has lost none of her enthusiasm for the movement, is still engaged in getting up and having published, window cards, programmes of exercises for the proper celebration of the day in churches and Sunday schools, and other literature, in addition to attending to much correspondence from all parts of the country in connection with the Mothers' Day International Association. The official window card, badge and programme are copyrighted, as are the words Mothers' day, when used in connection with any literature or celebration of the day. She now sees more possibilities and a greater future for the day than at any previous time.
Unassisted, and practically without financial assistance from any quarter, she has carried on this work, giving up her whole time and energy at certain seasons at an expense of thousands of dollars. Financially she has not been benefited in the slightest degree, being satisfied with her success when the movement became popular and country-wide in its obse-rance.

She feels now, however, that the time has arrived when those who have profited, florists particularly, should come forward and assist in the further advancing of this beautiful custom.
She has plans for future exploitation, the result of past experiences, from which she expects great publicity. She not only gets every piece of matter that she sends to the papers published, but is obliged to decline requests for articles from magazines many of them with large circulation, on account of the great pressure on her time. Had she a small office organization, very much more publicity matter could go out.

Florists should become associate members of her association, and by their dues help in the great work. Instead of getting out literature of their own they would be furnished with official advertising matter, window cards, etc., bearing the official stamp, that will be found much better than any gotten up by personal effort. If the florists of the country would contribute annually, according to their volume of business, even a very small amount each, the total would make a sum that in the aggregate would run into the thousands. No one would feel it, but the resultant increased business would prove the money invested to have been wisely spent.

McKinley day is cited as a movement that failed because it had no organization behind it. Memorial day, beautiful as it is in its patriotic sentiment, is already beginning to die out in some sections of the country. It has never been brought out to its full possibilities, and should have an organization looking after its interest, working up sentiment until it becomes one of the nation's greatest holidays, not only for the decoration of soldiers' graves, but making it the custom for all others, as is the practice in the neighborhood of Boston.

Referring to the efforts of some to change the emblem chosen by Miss Jarvis, the white carnation, to any other flower just as good, she was very outspoken. It was the white carnation that had built up their business; when they were all sold, then people would buy other flowers—their mother's favorite flower—but, the white carnation was her mother's favorite flower—and she would always insist that this is to be the Mothers' day flower. The following letter was received from Miss Jarvis a few days prior to this interview and is inserted here as it embodies her views in her own words:

"The Mothers' Day Association should first be asked for facts, and florists should remember that this association is their best Mothers' day friend and try to meet its wishes. Let the people who have made Mothers' day a big success, keep on making it a greater success. Do not attempt to run the Mothers' day movement yourself by getting out printed matter, changing an emblem that has made a big opportunity for you, or increasing the association's work by your opposition to its wishes. Great expense is required for the Mothers' day movement as a big affair, and not only should the leaflets, official poster, etc., be used by florists, but they should annually help the cause through generous contributions."

With the prestige of Miss Jarvis' name, together with her entree to the press of the country, it would appear to be very good business for the trade to get together, and in recognition of the great work she has done for the craft, contribute liberally to the support of her organization. Miss Jarvis is capable, willing and very enthusiastic in all movements for the expansion of Mothers' day, but is handicapped for lack of money. Were a movement to collect such a fund inaugurated—and right now is the time—every member of the craft should be anxious to contribute as he has felt benefited and thus lay the way for still greater prosperity. With these facts before you, florists of the country, what say you? Who will be the first to send in his contribution?

Shipping and Delivery Labels.

The florist with a shipping and delivery trade is very liable to run out of address labels when business becomes brisk at any special season, and it is well to look into the stock now and order a new supply to cover the busy season close at hand. When there is occasion to use shipping labels they are needed in a hurry, and there is no time to print them. For the purpose of florists, wholesale and retail, there is no more serviceable article than the Red Rose Leaf label adopted by the S. A. F., with the legend "Fresh Flowers" in large white lettering. This is a very attractive label and the size commonly used is $6\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ inches. All special sizes can be made according to order. The American Florist Co., 440 South Dearborn street, Chicago, supplies the above size printed in two colors, red and black, on good gummed paper, your business card and the leaf, at \$4.50 per thousand, 500 for \$2.85. This label is known to express and railroad men all over the country and they fully understand the perishable nature of packages bearing this label and deliver them quickly to avoid the costly risk of losses caused by delay.

Aeroplane Mail Service Proposed.

The United States postoffice department has advertised for bids upon contracts for providing for aerial mail service between various points in Massachusetts and also in Alaska. The action is taken to improve mail service and to stimulate the science of aviation. The proposed route in Massachusetts is from New Bedford to Nantucket with stops at Woods Hole and Oak Bluffs, the total distance being 56 miles. Seven routes are proposed in Alaska, the distances varying from 110 to 380 miles. October 1, 1916, is named as the date for beginning service.

University of Illinois Exhibition.

Nearly 4,000 persons attended the fourth annual exhibition of floral arrangements staged in the Floricultural building, Urbana, Sunday afternoon, April 16. Not a better day could have been chosen, as the weather was ideal.

There were on exhibition many types of corsage bouquets made of various sorts of flowers. Wedding bouquets were also in evidence, including everything from the bridal bouquet to the flower girl's basket. The table decorations illustrated the use of different types of flowers. Besides this there were numerous baskets, funeral designs and sprays, box and vase arrangements, and feature bouquets.

This show is the work of students in Horticulture 32, a course in floral decoration required of all floricultural students. It is merely to give them an idea of what work of this type would be in a florist's establishment during a rush season. The students were assisted by Miss Emily Dörner of Lafayette, Indiana. A. G. Co-Operative Advertising in Louisville.

One of the most attractive advertisements on the co-operative plan that we have seen for some time was a splendidly arranged full-page which appeared, April 19, in the Louisville, Ky., daily papers, over the names of a number of the "live wires" in the trade of that city. We have on previous occasions observed that the florists of Louisville thoroughly believe that "if you want business go after it," and all of their advertisements are so bright, well-illustrated, and so snappy as to text, that there seems no reason to doubt but that they are bringing the fullest measure of results. Flowers today—not for any special kind or for any special occasion—but today, to carry sunshine into the sickroom, to spread sunshine among friends, to gladden the hearts of the aged, to remind the wife with a few of her favorite flowers that she is still the sweetheart as of old, was the keynote of this advertisement. To quote a section of the text:

"Better do it today—tomorrow may be too late. It does not require a fortune to carry on the good work of flowers. A dollar will buy an abundance of fair blossoms—a dime will buy a rose, and remember—one rose now is better than a thousand later."

The names of the following well-known florists, with street and telephone numbers, followed: August R. Baumer, F. Walker & Co., Jacob Schulz, S. E. Thompson, E. G. Reimers & Son Co., The Rosery, M. D. Reimers and C. B. Thompson & Co.

John Mangel, Chicago.

The Chicago Evening American of April 21, in its "What America Did for Me" series, gives the following account of John Mangel, the well known Palmer House florist, of Chicago, with his portrait:

"I came to America from Sparta, Greece, in 1885, starting for Chicago the evening of the day I landed in New York. I was 18 years old and my total assets amounted to just $3.50 after paying my railroad fare. Facing a new country with funds at such a low ebb, I remember distinctly, did not tend to depress me in the least—for I was completely carried away with America.

"Chicago seemed to me a paradise and I sensed in the wonders which crowded before my eyes—opportunity—a thing not to be dreamed of in my own country.

"I rented a room at the corner of State street and Jackson boulevard (known later as The Hub, but then a rooming house) and occupied it with three other foreigners. I lived on 25 cents a day for the first two weeks, but it did not seem a hardship. The day after my arrival here I invested $2 of my $3.50 in bananas, rented a cart for 25 cents and started in business on the sidewalk at the corner of Jackson boulevard and State street. The first day my profits were 40 cents, the next day 50 cents and so on until I was making from $1.50 to $2 a day. I enlarged my stock accordingly, and although I saved zealously I lived a little more substantially.

"At that time there was little provision for the immigrant to learn English. I was ambitious to talk 'American.' To accomplish this I listened intently to every word spoken on the street.

"A newsboy on the same corner with me assisted me greatly. He would read the headlines in the newspapers and I would repeat the words after him. In a year I could speak English, poorly, of course, but I felt that I had accomplished a great deal.

"As my capital increased I abandoned bananas for flowers and after the World's Fair I opened a florist's shop in the Stewart building. The late Marshall Field was one of my first and most encouraging patrons, frequently giving me an order for $15 or $20 worth of flowers.

"As the years passed and I moved into new quarters, Mr. Field followed with congratulations and big orders. About this time I began to dabble in real estate, and it proved as profitable as bananas and flowers, my present ownership of several buildings on the North Side being the result.

"Making money, however, was not my sole object in life. I had time for romance—and I married a German girl and an immigrant, as glad to get to get to America as myself.

"I have been back to Greece three times. The utter impossibility for the poor to better their condition in that country seemed to me more deplorable each time. I congratulated myself on my escape and when sighting American shores again my heart overflowed with gratitude and patriotism.

"I owe to America much more than I can ever repay, but I have a boy who will be trained in a military school and if America ever calls him to fight for her he will be prepared."

Easter in New York Retail Stores.

Easter being so late, it was but reasonable to expect that much stock would be well advanced—and that was the case. We believe it was more noticeable in the pink roses, such as Dorothy Perkins; nevertheless, there was fine rose stock to be seen. In the training of the pot or rambler roses, many clever features were noted. There were many grown as standards, the shapes of the bushes varying with the taste and fancy of the grower. A man must have a good memory to keep in his mind's eye everything that he saw, one, two or three years ago, but the writer believes that along several lines, the plants were superior to any ever before seen in this city. We have heard much said about flower shows and "educating the people" in the use of flowers. Now, far be it from us to criticise the flower shows. They have their good features and are admirable in their way, but if education is what is needed, we can think of nothing more instructive than at Christmas or Easter, to go from one flower store to another in a great city, and view the handiwork, not of forty or fifty, but of hundreds of men. Returning to leading features, the acacias, bougainvilleas, rhododendrons, azaleas, genistas, hydrangeas and other plants were very fine, and thus far we refer to single plants. We shall again refer to various combinations. The word novelty may cover a wide range. In cut flowers it is supposed to mean a new and rare variety. While in plants, neither a geranium nor a fuchsia is a novelty, they are certainly novel when grown as standards six, eight or even ten feet high and beautifully flowered. At the store of Wadley & Smythe, 491 Fifth avenue, there was a fine collection of such plants, and many other good features.

Keeping up with the Easter business, and moving to a new store all within 10 days, is rather a strenuous undertaking, but J. H. Small & Sons managed it very well. They had from their Washington, D. C., greenhouses, an exceptionally fine stock of plants, crimson and other rambler roses and bougainvilleas being particularly noteworthy. If there were roses any better than theirs we did not see them.

G. E. M. Stumpp, Fifth avenue and 58th street, has an established reputation as a floral artist and illustrations of his work have frequently been seen in THE AMERICAN FLORIST. It is enough to state that he was fully up to, if not a little ahead of his previous efforts. He also carried a great stock of novel accessories and supplies, such as baskets, vases, flower dishes and other features.

Alexander McConnell, Fifth avenue and 49th street, it may be said in passing, is one of the features in the retail business. When we reach his store we are sure to find interesting features, as he handles the best of stock. He had a large annex, that when Easter business opened, was filled with fine plants, noteworthy being lilies. However, they soon thinned out as business was good throughout the week. Many good features in baskets and combinations were seen in the main store.

At the store of Chas. A. Dards, Madison avenue and 44th street, there was a splendid display of fine stock which sold fast. At his other store, Columbus avenue and 72d street, the display was also very fine.

When we see Charles Thorley, Fifth avenue and 46th street, we are reminded of George Washington, because there are triumphs in peace as well as in war. Thorley is a big, brave and upstanding man in the florist business, who has made a success of it, and he never talks unless he has something to say. It is needless to add that he had a splendid Easter stock.

Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, had very fine stock, better, we think, than he ever before handled. We shall later give more extended notice to his leading features. We may add, however, that as a graduate from Alexander McConnell's school, he could not go far wrong.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons, 2139 Broadway, many admirable features in plants and plant combinations were noticed. To drop into figurative language, the Clarke's are, "all wool and a yard wide" and if anybody can do business at Easter or any other time, they are sure to be among the leaders. Their Easter sales started early in the week and they had a great business.

Max Schling, 22 West 59th street, is a little fellow, but you should see him in action. He is yet a young man, but by persevering industry, he has established a great business. He is a live wire. He had a great Easter stock and was completely sold out on the night of April 22.

At Henry Hart's, 1000 Madison avenue, many fine features were noticed. This store is in the centre of a very fine residential district and good stock is always in demand. Fine bougainvilleas, genistas, hydrangeas, azaleas, lilies and other stock were very noteworthy and the window and other arrangements were fine.

Alfred Kottmiller, 426 Madison avenue, has an established reputation as a designer and decorator. He is public spirited, always exhibits at the flower shows and always takes prizes. He had an exceptionally fine stock and good business.

In the florist business, the name of Galvin is one to conjure with. We have known the Galvins at Boston and Newport, R. I., for many years. Now at Fifth avenue and 46th street, we find Thos. F. Galvin, Inc. Their clever manager, Mr. Deery and his assistant, Bob Clifford, had window decorations that caused all the people to stop and take notice.

The Easter display of Malandre Brothers, Broadway and 72nd street, was unsurpassed by anything seen in this city. They had the finest quality of stock and their arrangements were equally fine.

Costos Sakelos, the Colonial Florist, Broadway and 157th street, is another florist who knows his business and had fine stock.

N. Christatos, Sixth avenue and 55th street, is an admirable man and his wife is a sunbeam. Their store was a great attraction. A. F. F.

Easter Stock in Philadelphia Stores.

A visit to the leading stores showed them to be fully up to the times. Novelties were noted here and there, but beautiful made up baskets and handsome specimen plants in pot covers, fancy jars, or decorated with mats were the rule. Ribbons and chiffons were extensively used to good effect. Uptown, downtown, Germantown, West Philadelphia, and the central city section, were all dressed in their best, each store a beauty spot, a delight to the visitors.

John Gracey presented a well selected stock, with lilies, hydrangeas, spireas, azaleas and roses predominating. Both his Twenty-sixth street store and Columbia avenue establishments, to each of which are attached large greenhouses, were filled with choice plants in medium sizes. Tulips and hyacinths in pans and pots were seen in quantity. Trellis boxes and well-filled baskets were a feature. Watering cards were attached to all spireas, hydrangeas and some other plants—an "anchor to windward" in case of trouble.

Julius Wolff, Jr., Nineteenth street below Columbia avenue, had his store, and greenhouse in the rear, filled with choice stock. Prettily arranged baskets, good color combinations, decked with appropriate ribbons, choice rhododendrons and azaleas, the pots covered with white mats, looked very salable. A skeleton willow basket with a white and green enamel finish and solid green inside tin, and a number of others of the same pattern in various colors, looked very good and were not at all expensive. Trellis boxes planted with heather and vines looked very chic.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Twenty-second and Diamond streets, have an ideal place to handle an Easter business. There are some eight or ten greenhouses with a wide connecting or corridor house, which with the large show house in the rear of the store, gives a grand chance for decorative effects. Prominent here were some large French hydrangeas in 14 to 16-inch tubs; these had been imported in the tubs in a dormant state and flowered in their houses. They were full of large heads of bloom, making wonderfully showy plants. Azaleas, spireas, lilies, blue hydrangeas, with a large stock of bulbs in pans, together with choice rambler roses, rounded out a splendid collection. A house full of elaborately filled baskets and boxes were or should be a matter of pride to the establishment. These supplied the needs of their select trade at the Bellevue-Stratford, Ritz-Carlton hotel stores, and the Orchid Flower Shop. These creations were correct in every detail; the latest style baskets and boxes only were used, a white box with vari-colored bubble decorations being very effective, as was a wide, low basket with side handles finished in blue and white planted with pink hydrangeas. Watering cards were on all the heavy drinkers.

William Berger's Sons, in Germantown, do a large holiday business. Their greenhouses are very commodious, to which is connected a well appointed store right in the midst of things between two large theatres. Well-flowered ramblers, trained to the rear, and over the inside of the show window, presented an inviting appearance. All the popular Easter stock, most of it grown on the place, was offered to suit all purses. This was displayed in the large show house in the rear of the store. Very choice baskets with 1916 all over them were there for those who desired the best.

Charles Grakelow, that live wire of North Broad street, was celebrating his first Easter in the new store. He was there, and he had the goods—a well-balanced stock. His baskets and choice plants for the automobile trade, with all the finishing touches of mats, ribbons, etc., filled the store, while the large greenhouse in the rear contained a great variety of medium-priced plants. Trellis boxes were an important item. These are made up on the place from materials cut to size at the mill. He finds them very popular and salable. "Water wagon cards," as Mr. Grakelow called them, were seen on many plants, "put on when they come in, because we don't have time to do it as they go out," he added. A large building across the street was used as a delivery depot.

J. Wolf Moore's stock was very classy. The large greenhouse in the rear, connected with the store by a wide corridor, gives him the necessary room for a holiday rush. His hydrangeas and rambler roses were exceptionally fine, as were a number of well-made newer style baskets.

Richard Umfreid, who succeeded Chas. Fox, should call his shop "At the Sign of the Cibotium," for the window here always contained splendid specimens of this handsome fern. Choice Easter plants and well-filled baskets were arranged about the store and in the commodious greenhouse in the rear.

In the central city stores things are different; there are greenhouses, to be sure, but the word commodious does not apply. The Battles' shop, on Twelfth street, which does the largest business, is almost the smallest in town. How this great volume of trade is handled at these rush times is the wonder of the craft. Reserve stock is held in convenient empty stores in the vicinity, plants sold are sent there for delivery, and others are brought in to take their place. Much is sold from sample. Splendidly arranged baskets were a feature, as were choice, well-flowered specimen rambler roses, rhododendrons, azaleas, heather, gardenias, etc. Nearly all were in some fancy container—jardinieres, basket covers, gilt tubs, and the like. Wired ribbon bows in the proper blending of colors were much in evidence. The Century Flower Shop, also a Battles' store, featured good-sized hydrangeas, azaleas, lilies and medium-sized roses. Ribbons and other "fancy frills" were left to the other store. Their lowest price cut flower box was quoted at $2.00 for Easter delivery.

Pennock Bros.' Easter stock was quite up to their reputation. Elegant baskets, and combinations of plants in fancy covers, terra cotta jars and pots, completely filled their large store. Large trellis boxes, a number with the painted wooden silhouette figures of women, and others of children, inserted in the framework or on top, were a very attractive addition. Hand-painted telescopic chip covers were fitted with zinc pans and made admirable containers for hyacinths. Their window feature was a pair of chairs and a table, all of trained tulips and and table of well trained and splendidly flowered Tausendschon were also seen. Business here was reported very good.

The E. R. Martin shop, formerly Vollers', was strong on rambler roses, azaleas, hydrangeas, spireas and large pots of Easter lilies, all of which were very effectively arranged.

All the newest pottery, flower bowls, fancy baskets and pot covers were prominently displayed at the London Flower Shop. The vase department is on the second floor, while the third was reserved for stock plants. Nearly all seasonable plants were seen in fancy poster colored painted pots, baskets, jardinieres, etc. A very good business was reported.

Richard Heron was crowded to the doors with a good variety of plants and was much pleased with business.

The Eleventh street contingent all reported good business. Chas. B. Stahl, whose store was full of good Easter stock, and who makes a specialty of church decorations, never was as busy before. With George Craig, in his cozy store, the outlook was good. While keeping up to the times, he does things in the good old way. Tall white painted trellises, made at spare times in the shop, helped the sale of his rambler roses. He also used them to good effect in his combination baskets and pans. Gilt baskets were a feature with Robt. Crawford. Hydrangeas, lilies, azaleas and bulbous stock were all from his Secane greenhouses. Everything was done here with system, there being little if any waste.

Charles Henry Fox, who likes to surprise his customers with something new each Easter season, introduced what he called his Pollyanna basket. It was very striking in appearance, having all the colors of Joseph's coat. The material was hickory splint—shapes both round and square in several sizes, some with handles. All were fitted with zinc pans. Their unique coloring was the distinctive feature. This was in light and dark shades of purple, blue, pink and yellow, each alternate section of material being a different color. This sort of harlequin effect appeared to blend nicely with all the flowering plants that were placed in them. These made a fine appearance in his beautiful store and were a decided novelty. A line of corsage bunches, samples, were seen in their open boxes in the flower case. When it comes to these arrangements, Mr. Fox finds the art brings as much as the flowers, as, if a dollar's worth of sweet peas or roses were purchased to be made up, very little more, if any, could be charged for the work, but when presented finished, it looks worth the two dollars which is cheerfully paid.

Victor Ridenour, of Ridge avenue, had a very up-to-date stock. The latest in basket arrangements and specimen plants decorated the store, while the large greenhouse in the rear was filled with a great variety of Easter stock. The business was coming in faster than he could properly handle it.

Easter in the Chicago Stores.

The Easter trade this year was very good and the sales were considerably ahead of those of 1915. The weather the opening of the week was very warm and a large quantity of bulbous stock, particularly tulips in pots and pans, suffered considerably and were almost a total loss. Plants were handled on a large scale and everyone stocked up heavily, the principal offerings being hydrangeas, azaleas, rhododendrons, rambler roses, spireas and lilies. Lilies never were so plentiful and probably never sold so cheaply at wholesale as they did this Easter. The demand started in very late and for a time it appeared as if there would be very little doing but things took a change for the better on Friday and Saturday and it is doubtful whether there was ever as much business done in any two days before as there was then. The weather was anything but favorable but taken all in all, trade was much better than the florists in general expected it would be and no complaint was heard from anyone. Cut flowers sold well, but violets, orchids, lily of the valley and gardenias were very scarce and it was impossible to secure enough stock to fill all the orders. Sweet peas sold well, but they were also a little on the short side. American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses were scarce and so were Cecile Brunner, Baby Doll, Geo. Elgar and Fireflame. There were plenty of all the other roses, carnations, Spanish iris and it is seldom that the retail florist had the opportunity to select from such a large and fine supply of miscellaneous stock as he did this year.

O. J. Friedman cleaned up completely in both cut flowers and plants at his store at 522 South Michigan avenue, and never had such a good trade before. On Sunday noon every plant was sold and the refrigerator was as empty as could be. Mr. Friedman had one of the finest collections of plants in the city and the stock was as usual arranged in Victor Bergmann's artistic style always so pleasing to the many customers. Hydrangeas, rambler roses, lilac, rhododendrons, azaleas, lilies and spireas were the leaders in plants and in cut flowers a complete line was carried including the many novelties that Tom Fogarty could buy in the local market.

George Wienhoeber was more than pleased with trade at his South Wabash avenue store and experienced a grand clean up in both cut flowers and plants. Mr. Wienhoeber says that trade was very good on Saturday and that he never experienced such a rush since he has been engaged in the florist business. He sold a large number of Max Schling's Easter novelties which made such a big hit at the recent New York Flower show and sold all he had to offer at an early hour and could have disposed of many hundred more. Mr. Wienhoeber handled everything in blooming plants and cut flowers and had a magnificent window display all week. On Sunday morning his store looked as if a cyclone had struck it for there was hardly a plant or cut flower left when the last order was filled. In cut flowers, roses and sweet peas were his best sellers.

A. Lange's East Madison street store was filled with customers at all times and while the heaviest demand started in rather late everything cleaned up nicely and many extra trips were made to the wholesale market to secure stock to fill the many extra late orders that kept coming in. Lilies were handled on a large scale here and so were azaleas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, spireas and bulbous plants in pots and pans. He handled a tremendous supply of cut flowers and the increased store force had all the orders that they could properly handle and there is no question but what his sales will compare most favorably with 1915, which was one of the best Easter trades that he ever had. Manager Mohr and his assistants worked like beavers early and late and certainly handled a mammoth bunch of orders Sunday morning and the two days before.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, never had a finer lot of plants to offer for Easter than he did this year. His large conservatory in the rear of his beautiful store was completely filled with stock, chiefly lilies, rambler roses, heather, rhododendrons, azaleas, spireas and hydrangeas. In cut flowers everything seasonable was handled and there was an unusually good demand for roses, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell and American Beauties. Sweet peas and orchids sold nicely and taken all in all Mr. Mangel is well satisfied with the business he did and advertised extensively in the daily papers and sent out special folders to get it. His $3.50 that he started in business with when he first came to this country would about pay for one of the panes of glass in the large dome of his conservatory, of which he is very proud and is the only one in the loop.

J. C. Craig and his sons had their share of the business at their Wabash avenue store, which is one of the oldest stands in the city and cleaned up completely in cut flowers and plants. Mr. Craig is one of the fellows that believes in sawing wood and saying nothing, but his force is always busy whenever one calls at his store.

George Perdikas handled a tremendous supply of plants and cut flowers at both of his South Wabash avenue stores and his sales for Easter week were surprisingly large and the best since he has been in business. He took a big chance by stocking up so heavily, but cleaned up practically everything and is more than satisfied with the amount of business that he did. Lilies and azaleas were his best sellers in plants and roses and carnations were his leaders in cut flowers.

Fleischman had a magnificent display of cut flowers and plants at his Jackson boulevard store and particularly attractive to the many buyers were the large, beautiful specimens of bougainvilleas and acacias. Hydrangeas, heather, rambler roses, spireas, lilies, rhododendrons, and other blooming plants, artistically arranged in baskets, were handled extensively and cleaned up splendidly before the week was over. Combination baskets of blooming and foliage plants, in which fancy leaved caladiums and cut flowers, particularly Spanish iris, played an important part, sold like hot cakes. Cut flowers of every description were handled on a large scale and were in good demand. Trade at this store was much better than it was expected it would be and the total sales were very satisfactory. Dick Parker and several others helped out Manager Graham and the regular force during the rush and they had all they could do to handle the many orders that were booked. Considerable advertising was done in the daily papers and the results were most pleasing to the proprietors.

The White House Florist, of which Wm. Kotsonis is proprietor, had a splendid trade and sold a large number of rambler roses, which were his leader in plants. Cut flowers were handled extensively here and the sales for the week were considerably ahead of last year. Funeral orders were plentiful on top of the holiday rush and the force had to hustle some to get out all the orders on time.

H. N. Bruns had a fine trade at his West Madison street establishment and his beautiful store and conservatories were filled to the brim with lilies, spireas, hydrangeas, rambler roses, rhododendrons, azaleas and other blooming plants. Business was very good and the sales were away ahead of last year. Cut flowers were handled extensively also, but plants were his leaders and sold surprisingly well. He had a splendid cut of lily of the valley and sold out completely at an early hour each day and did so well in this line that he had many of the wholesale florists make special trips to his establishment trying to secure an extra supply so as to meet the heavy demand which they were unable to fill. Mr. Bruns' daughter, Madelaine, and son, Herman, who is taking up a floricultural course at Urbana, helped out during the rush and proved of much assistance to the regular force.

C. Frauenfelder, 3343 West Madison street, handled a large supply of rhododendrons, lilies, hydrangeas, azaleas and rambler roses, in addition to a fine lot of tulips in pots and pans. His right hand man, Chas. Werner, had about 25 per cent more stock on hand this year than last and everything pointed to a grand clean-up and a whirlwind finish the day before Easter. Large quantities of cut flowers were sold also, and a large number of baby rambler roses, planted in birch bark boxes, were disposed of at an early hour. Trade at this establishment has been very good since last July and there is no sign whatever of a lull in business. Mr. Frauenfelder has a large force of capable assistants, including his daughter, Edna. R. J. Coultejohn always gives the regular force a lift during the holidays and was on the job again for Easter.

J. F. Kidwell Co., 3530 South Michigan avenue, had a splendid supply of plants from their own greenhouses at Downers Grove and some of the finest specimens of hydrangeas, rhododendrons, lilies, azaleas and rambler roses in the city were seen at this establishment. Roses and hydrangeas were their sellers in the plant line, but everything cleaned up completely, and the sales were away ahead of 1915. Cut flowers were handled extensively, but this firm pushed plant sales because they had a large stock and were satisfied to clean up in this line. Particularly attractive were the combination tubs of Dorothy Perkins roses and lily plants, which took well and retailed at prices ranging from $20 to $25. J. F. Kidwell says it was surprising how many plants were sent to the hospitals on Easter this year, and he is more than pleased with the week's business. They had unusually good success with their lilies and tulips this season, and could have sold many more if they had had them to offer.

W. J. Smyth, 3101 South Michigan avenue, was very enthusiastic over his Easter trade and sold out almost completely in plants, which he handled on a large scale. Hydrangeas, azaleas, rambler roses, spireas, lilies and rhododendrons, artistically arranged in fancy baskets, were splendid sellers and his sales for the week will compare most favorably with those of last year. After all his plants were sold he stocked up heavily in cut flowers and also experienced a clean-up in this line. Roses and carnations sold exceptionally well.

The Alpha Floral Co. made a tremendous showing of plants of all kinds at its South Wabash avenue store, and had a very satisfactory Easter trade. Lilies, rambler roses, azaleas, hydrangeas, and tulips in pots and pans sold quickly, and Andrew Cronis and his large force of assistants feel rather happy, because they cleaned up what stock they had as completely as they did. Everything seasonable in cut flowers was handled and their sales all told were surprisingly large. The firm carried advertisements in the daily papers every day for over a week, and one cannot help but admit that the liberal use of printer's ink pays and adds many new customers to their list.

John T. Muir had his usual fine and large showing of plants and cut flowers at his store and conservatories at 4647 Grand boulevard, and enjoyed a splendid trade. Lilies, rhododendrons, rambler roses, hydrangeas, azaleas, spireas and tulips in pots and pans were his leaders in the plant line and in cut flowers everything was handled on a large scale, especially roses and carnations, which were in brisk demand. Mr. Muir was ably assisted by his sister and A. E. Knecht, who worked like beavers early and late, so that the many orders could be delivered on time.

Chas. A. Samuelson never had a better trade at his establishment at 2134 South Michigan avenue, and was pretty well sold out in the plant line early Saturday when several large delivery trucks were kept on the go taking out the stock as fast as it was wrapped up. Everything available in cut flowers was handled, and Mr and Mrs. Samuelson, Ed. Enders, Arthur Weatherwax and the rest of the regular force were ably assisted by Miss Ida Evert and Mrs. John Enders during the week. Mr. Samuelson had a very complete line of plants, but one item in particular that was missed here this Easter was the bougainvilleas, which were handled on a large scale in previous years. He says that they did not give very good satisfaction last Easter, and he pleased his customers by replacing them with other plants, which proved to be more acceptable and gave better results.

Walter Kreitling & Co. sold a large quantity of blooming plants and cut flowers at their store at 77 East Van Buren street and were well pleased with their trade. Scotch heather of fine quality sold well in the smaller sizes and cleaned up at an early hour at prices ranging from 75 cents to $4 each. This firm has been located in their present quarters for over 19 years, and in the loop for 33 years, consequently they have a good steady trade which is always carefully looked after.

The Bohannon Floral Co., 57 East Monroe street, did a splendid business and sold out completely in all lines. Azaleas, rambler roses, hydrangeas, rhododendrons and all other blooming plants were their leaders and were arranged in their usual artistic style. Cut flowers were handled on a large scale and sold well, their leaders being principally American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses. Sweet peas, orchids, gardenias and Spanish iris had a good call, and, taken all in all, everything moved surprisingly well and they had all the orders that they could conveniently handle.

Miss Charlotte Megchelsen made a big showing at her new store at Forty-seventh street and Grand boulevard and carried a fine line of plants, particularly rhododendrons, hydrangeas, rambler roses and hyacinths in boxes. Trade was very good at this store, and while it started rather late the demand was very good on Saturday, and she cleaned up practically all the stock that she had to offer, and did much better than she expected to. She was ably assisted by Ed. Eisner and wife, who have spent many years in the retail business, and are well and favorably known to the local trade.

Hirsch had a nice showing of plants and cut flowers at his new store at 37 East Van Buren street and enjoyed a splendid trade, notwithstanding the strong competition that he had to contend with. Azaleas, lilies, single and double hyacinths and made up baskets were his leaders in plants and in cut flowers a complete line was carried with roses and carnations the principal offerings.

Harry Rowe was well pleased with the Easter business at his new store on East Monroe street and was ably assisted during the rush by Harry Conn. Blooming plants of all kinds were handled on a large scale, especially azaleas, rambler roses, spireas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas and lilies.

Victor Young & Co. were very enthusiastic over their trade and were more than satisfied with the amount of business that they did at their North Clark street store. This is their first Easter in business, but they stocked up heavily in cut flowers and plants and came through with a clean slate and did not have any stock to speak of left when the last order was filled.

The Ernest Wienhoeber Floral Co. was on deck as usual with a fine line of azaleas, hydrangeas, lilies, spireas, rhododendrons and made-up baskets of blooming and foliage plants at their Elm street store. Their trade exceeded all expectations and they were sold out completely. Everything sold well in plants and cut flowers, especially sweet peas, lily of the valley and fancy roses. Wm. Wienhoeber made special trips to the market in his new car to replenish the stock as it was needed and found that it came in very handy during the rush.

Walter Adams did splendidly at his 1021 Rush street store and must have had one of the best Easter trades ever, for his store was filled with customers at all times and he was well sold out before the rush was over. Azaleas, lilies, hydrangeas and rambler roses were his leaders in plants and in cut flowers a general line was carried, with roses and carnations the principal offering.

The George Wittbold Co. sold out in all lines at Easter and had to replenish their stock several times. Everything in cut flowers and plants were handled on a large sale and large advertisements were carried in the daily papers for nearly a week, consequently the orders cover a wide territory. The sales were much larger than last year and the principal offerings in plants were azaleas, hydrangeas, lilies, spireas, rhododendrons and marguerites. Roses sold exceptionally well and there was a heavy demand for lily of the valley and sweet peas. Their delivery service worked like a charm and all orders were gotten out on time.

The Atlas Floral Co. had a big run on lilies and rambler roses and sold out early Friday afternoon. On the same evening Mrs. Williams brought a fresh supply of stock and had her store packed to the doors, but on Easter morn there was hardly a plant left in the entire place. Herbert Stone worked like a beaver and was on the job until nearly midnight every day and was ready to quit Sunday noon when the big rush was over. Cut flowers sold well and a complete line was handled, the best sellers being roses, sweet peas and lily of the valley.

Paul Blome & Co. had their usual fine trade at their North Clark street store and were cleaned out completely in both cut flowers and plants, which, to make a long story short, means that their Easter trade was the best ever.

Schiller the Florist had a fine Easter trade at their West Madison street store, where George Asmus is in charge, and at their north side store, which is looked after by Herman Schiller. The downtown establishment, in charge of R. E. Schiller, also did splendidly and everything cleaned up well at all their establishments, considering the extra heavy supply of plants that were bought. One thing in particular that attracted much attention was the baby chicks that adorned all their plants and which made quite a hit with their many customers. Azaleas, lilacs, lilies, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, spireas and genistias were their leaders in plants, and in cut flowers everything was featured, although more attention was paid to pushing the sale of plants, which were handled in larger quantities than ever before. Everything went along without a hitch and the sales were much better than those of 1915. This firm had one of the finest lots of tulips and other bulbous stock in pots and pans that were offered for Easter, and Manager Asmus took great pride in showing them to all the trade visitors. R. E. Schiller was ably assisted at the downtown store by Fred Ronsley.

ANAMOSA, IA.—Hoyt, Hunter & Bagley have purchased a tract of land near the city limits and will grow plants, cut flowers and nursery stock.

HOUSTON, TEX.—Miss E. V. Atwood will add two new houses, each 30x70 feet, to her range. She has made heavy plantings of tuberose, gladioli and outdoor roses this year.

ABERDEEN, S. D.—Richard Strohmeier and his sisters, Misses Alice and Clara Strohmeier, will assume active management of the Strohmeier Greenhouses at 909 North Lincoln street, about May 1, having leased same from their father. A retail store in the business district will also be opened in the near future.

Recommendations made by the treasurer in regard to certain of the society's securities were approved and adopted. The reports were referred to an auditing committee.

The committee on proposed amendments to the constitution and by-laws, Theo. Wirth, chairman, presented a lengthy report covering changes recommended at the San Francisco convention. After considerable discussion these amendments were all adopted for submission to the Houston convention. The following are the articles and sections as amended:

The secretary shall cause official ballots to be prepared according to the "Australian" form containing the names of all candidates nominated for the various elective offices. Balloting shall take place at the morning session of the third day of the annual meeting. The secretary shall prepare four election books, in which the names of members eligible to vote are alphabetically arranged.

Book 1 to contain all names from letter "A" to letter "D" inclusive.

Book 2 to contain all names from letter "E" to letter "K" inclusive.

Book 4 to contain all names from letter "S" to letter "Z" inclusive.

The secretary shall provide one ballot box for each book. The president or presiding officer shall appoint one checker for each book, and one receiver for each ballot box, and one judge of election, who shall have charge of the checkers and receivers, who, together with him, form the election board. They shall, after the close of the polls, assort and count the votes cast and report the results to the convention. The polls shall remain open from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m., or until all legal voters in line at that time shall have an opportunity to cast their votes. A majority of all the votes cast shall be necessary for an election; and the president or presiding officer shall declare who is elected. In case of failure to elect on the first ballot, the president shall order a new ballot immediately, polls to remain open one hour; should this ballot fail to elect, the president shall order a third ballot, polls to remain open one hour; this ballot shall be limited to the two candidates receiving the highest vote on preceding ballot.

Election and appointment of officers, directors, and committees, and their respective duties. Section 4. Standing committees and their duties. Paragraph (a). Standing committee on convention garden. The president assuming office January 1, 1917, shall appoint three members, one serving three years, one two years, and one one year. The president assuming office January 1, 1917, shall, and each next elected president upon taking office shall, appoint three members to serve one year. It shall be the duty of this committee to advocate, induce, promote, and assist in every possible way the production in this country of horticultural products now imported from foreign lands."

Section 3. Duties of officers: (a) President.—The president shall preside at all meetings of the society, and exercise a general supervision of its affairs. He shall report from time to time such measures as seem necessary for promoting its objects and extending its usefulness. He shall annually, on the first day of January, appoint one botanist, one entomologist, one vegetable pathologist, and one state vice-president for each state or territory represented in the society; he shall act as chairman of the executive board at its meetings and sign all diplomas and certificates of the society.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE III.

"Government. Executive board. Between the sessions of the society its government shall be vested in an executive board, consisting of the president, junior ex-president, first vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and the board of directors, etc., etc."

NOTE.—The committee believes that all other standing committees created by the society at its different annual meetings should be classed under this new section 4.

Vice-President Kerr made a lengthy report, covering the plans and arrangements made for the housing of the Houston convention and trade exhibition. The convention hall, he said, would provide an area of 20,000 square feet for display space, which he thought would be ample. The hall was located three blocks from Rice's hotel, which would be headquarters and five blocks from the convention garden. Work on the convention garden, he said, was in active progress, and its success was practically assured. Some action had been taken, he said, in regard to getting low railroad rates to Houston, and it seemed quite probable that a one and one-third rate would be secured over all railroads in the United States. The committee on convention garden was appropriated a sum not to exceed $500 for purposes of the garden. Adjournment was then taken until 10 o'clock a. m. Wednesday.

The first business at Wednesday morning's session was the reading of the report of the auditing committee, which found the report of the secretary and treasurer to be correct, and complimented these officers upon the efficient work shown in the reports. The matter of arrangements for the trade exhibits at Houston was again discussed, and it was decided to make the rate for exhibition space 40 cents per square foot. The publicity committee, through its chairman, Irwin Betermann, reported progress. The committee had not had a full meeting, consequently, a report could not be presented at this time. Mr. Betermann, however, made a short address in which he embodied his personal ideas. It was evident that the prevailing idea as to a publicity campaign was that its cost was not within the reach of the society. He was of the opinion that a small beginning might be made through the employment of a capable man, well versed in matters pertaining to the business, with compensation of $500 to $1,000 per year for his services, and he made this recommendation. A very lengthy discussion of this proposition ensued. Finally, on motion, it was decided that a publicity man be engaged to operate under the direction of the secretary, at a salary of $15 per week, with the approval of the publicity committee, any legitimate expenses to be vouched for by the chairman of the committee; and, further, that if the committee should see fit to send out an appeal for funds to carry the campaign further, it is authorized to do so.

A communication from the Mother's Day International Association, Inc., was read asking the society to co-operate with the association in giving publicity to the proper day for the celebration of "Mother's day" the second Sunday in May, and the fact that the emblem of the association was the white carnation. On motion of Mr. Kasting, the board unanimously acceded to the request, and a copy of the resolution was immediately given out to representatives of the daily press and Associated Press.

The following appropriations were made:

Office of entomologist.....	$100.00
Office of pathologist.....	100.00
Office of botanist.....	100.00
Members' buttons.....	100.00
Clerical assistance at convention	100.00
School garden committee.....	100.00
Legislative committee.....	100.00
Sergeant-at-arms.....	15.00
Sports committee.....	50.00
Secretary's office, as usual.....
Official stenographer, (traveling expenses additional).....	125.00

The question of further support of the Mother's day movement instituted by the association headed by Miss Anna Jarvis, was discussed at length, and, on motion, the secretary was instructed to send an appeal to all the members of the society for a subscription toward the Mother's day fund. The secretary was directed to invite the presentation of two essays at the Houston convention. Adjournment was then taken until after luncheon.

At the final session many matters tending to make the work of the society of greater service to its members were considered, among them the compilation of a trade directory which should be reliable and strictly up-to-date. Some earnest discussion upon the subject ensued, resulting in the carriage of a motion that a committee of three be appointed to look into the advisability of the issuance of a trade directory by the society, or any other publication, the committee to report at the Houston convention. The secretary was instructed to prepare an order of business for the convention, and another one for the meetings of the executive board, anything not covered to be proceeded with under Roberts' "Rules of Order."

Prof. H. B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, Urbana, was present, and was given the privilege of the floor. Professor Dorner explained that he appeared before the board as the representative of members of the society connected with the faculties of different universities and colleges who desired, in the interests of the society, to organize a section to be composed of all members interested in educational and research work pertaining to the profession. The group was strongly interested along certain lines, the work being sufficiently important to warrant the support of the society to the extent of making it a section and furnishing accommodations in the way of quarters for its members at the society's different exhibitions, where contact could be had with florists and others having problems which merited the active interest of such a section. Such a section, he suggested, should be known as the "College Florists' Section." The proposition proving favorable to the board, the section as stated was on motion authorized.

Other matters were considered informally, taking up the time of the board until adjournment. At the close of the meeting Mr. Welch pointed out that his membership on the board was practically then expiring and in a graceful speech expressed the pleasure he had experienced in meeting at different times with his brother members and his regret at not being able officially to continue with them, but he was satisfied that the affairs of the society were in good hands and the organization would be kept moving along progressive lines. After a motion directing the secretary to transmit a letter of thanks to the local organizations for courtesies shown to the board, adjournment was taken to Monday, August 14, at Houston.

RAIN PREVENTS RECORD BUSINESS.

Easter business showed a substantial increase over last year, notwithstanding the fact that weather conditions were far from favorable. The day preceding the great floral holiday greeted this city with a continuous rain, and the telephone played more than its usual important role. Stocks of all kinds were very good, and everything sold well. Prices were reasonable and if the weather had been favorable, the record for Easter sales would have been in danger. In plants, there was a plentiful supply, and the call was all that could be desired. Corsages were as popular as ever, but sweet peas and violets were short of the demand, and with a scarcity of orchids and lily of the valley, late comers were disappointed to a certain extent. Carnations and roses had their usual call. Easter lilies, boxes of pansies, daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, acacias, azaleas, spireas, genistas, ferns and basket arrangements sold well—and while it cannot be said that trade was good—the weather certainly played against us—all of the growers had their stocks well timed, and the quality was everything that could be desired.

Boston:

EASTER PLANT SALES BREAK RECORD.

The Easter trade was very good this year, but in some cases there were reports of poor business. The heavy rain storm Saturday, April 22, did much to hurt the transient trade, and cut flowers on the whole suffered. A few lines, however, went exceptionally well. Sweet peas, violets and lily of the valley were very scarce and sold at top notch prices. Roses and carnations sold well the first of the week, but steadily declined in price. Snapdragons were plentiful and large quantities found no market at all. The bulbous stock brought good prices, and there was a fair supply, considering the late season. Yellow marguerites were plentiful and did not sell well; although good quality flowers found a fairly good market, poor flowers were very hard to dispose of. The plant trade was a record-breaker. Nearly every grower practically cleaned up his entire stock. Lilies sold at higher prices than last year, 8 cents to 12½ cents being received for them. Rambler roses also were among the leaders, varying in price according to size. The French hydrangeas were exceptionally good this year, there being a large variety of colors. The trade as a whole was better than last year, even though a few lines of cut flowers suffered. The market on Monday, April 24, was very poor, practically no buyers being present.

NOTES.

The wholesalers seemed to be the busiest line of business during the whole week. Welch Bros. were kept busy day and night to keep up to the orders. They used an exceptionally large quantity of flowers this year.

John McFarland was fortunate in having a large crop of lily of the valley for the Easter trade; in all, about 20,000 flowers, which sold readily. He also had 35,000 buds of Easter lilies which were all cleaned up.

J. K. Chandler & Son, of Tewkesbury, Mass., had a fine cut of irises for the Easter trade. They also had a large cut of yellow marguerites and calendula.

Thos. Roland, Nahant, Mass., reports a very good Easter trade, his plants being all sold out. His rambler roses were among the best seen in Boston.

Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., will grow one house of roses next season to care for his rapidly growing retail business. He had a very good Easter trade.

Robert Montgomery of Natick has laid the foundation for his new greenhouse. He will devote it to chrysanthemums and rose stock.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, had a very fine lot of French hydrangeas, which were notable for the variety of coloring.

The largest shipper of sweet peas to the market was Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale. In all he had 300,000 for the week.

YONKERS, N. Y.—W. J. and M. M. MacDonald have incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000 and have opened the MacDonald Floral Co., Inc., at 52 Elliott avenue.

EASTER TRADE.

An almost unprecedented demand for cut flowers and plants of every variety, with an unusually plentiful supply at moderate prices, is reported from nearly all sections, the increase in sales for the 1916 Easter period showing gains varying 10 to 100 per cent. In many instances, unfavorable weather conditions alone prevented an even greater showing. Notwithstanding the fact that great preparations had been made for an exceptionally heavy demand, Monday morning saw most establishments completely cleaned out in all lines, and more sales could have been made if stock had been available. The demand for flowering plants surpassed all expectations and in most instances the call was for the better grade of stock. Easter lilies were of course the favorites as usual, and while spireas and hyacinths seemed to be the least in demand, they were missing when the stores closed. In the cut flower class, everything sold fast, and although the stocks were the largest in years, there were shortages in several lines, notably sweet peas and violets. Carnations, too, were not overplentiful. Corsages were never in greater demand, even though the weather throughout the country generally was such as to interfere with the usual Easter promenade.

Attractive window displays had much to do in stimulating sales of basket arrangements and novelties, all of which sold better than ever before, and advertising in the daily papers, both on the co-operative plan and by individuals, aided much in the making of the wonderful Easter sales record of 1916.

DAYTON, O.—Wm. G. Matthews, reports Easter sales this year as being 30 per cent greater than those of the 1915 period. All kinds of stock was plentiful and everything that was well grown found quick sale. There was a wonderful call for lilies the last day. Baskets of plants, moderately priced, were in great demand. With other good roses in evidence the demand for American Beauties seems to be waning, where the prices range from $1 to $5, the other roses being sold at half the price. Every industry in this vicinity is working full force and overtime, paying the highest wage scale ever known and the local florists feel the benefit of these gratifying conditions.

MONTREAL, QUE.—Julius Luck reports that the Easter trade of 1916 was about equal to that of last year, both in volume and prices. Plants were in good supply with the exception of azaleas and ferns. Cut flower stock was also short in some items. Everything sold, carnations being the most popular. Reports from several other establishments show substantial increases in sales while other state business was not as good as in 1915. Some stores had an oversupply of lilies, while in others a complete sell out or shortage of supply was the case.

OMAHA, NEB.—With a plentiful supply of both cut flowers and plants and with prices on a par with last year, Hess & Swoboda report Easter business this year was about 40 per cent better than in 1915. Everything in the plant line sold well, while in cut flowers, the bulbous varieties and those used in corsage arrangements had the call. Department stores sold lilies for nine and ten cents, but good stock was in good demand and this firm had no difficulty in disposing of their stock which was of fine quality for 25 cents per flower.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Easter sales this year were about equal in money value to those of a year ago, according to Macnair, Florist. Prices on some varieties were higher. The supply of plants was more than equal to the demand, while in cut flowers the same might be said except in the case of violets and sweet peas, the receipts of which were below the requirements. Carnations and lily of the valley had a brisk call. In plant sales hyacinths were most popular, while foliage plants seemed to attract the least attention.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Gust. Rusch & Co. report 1916 Easter business about 20 per cent greater than a year ago. Prices were no better and while the supply of plants was not equal to the demand, the supply of cut flowers was abundant with the exception of sweet peas and carnations, and blooms of all kinds sold well. In the plant section spireas did not sell as well as in former years. The local trade generally enjoyed a fine business and sold out complete in almost every instance.

EAST AURORA, N. Y.—Fred W. Wise estimates the 1916 Easter trade as being about 10 per cent better than that of a year ago. Prices were about the same, the supply was plentiful and of good quality, and it is thought better business would have been recorded but for inclement weather. High-priced plants were not in very great demand, the most popular being lilies and bulbous plants of medium price. All cut flowers sold well, especially carnations, sweet peas and pansies.

CANAL DOVER, O.—With just enough cut flowers to supply the demand, but a shortage in pot plants, the 1916 Easter sales showed an increase of 100 per cent over the corresponding period of 1915, with usual prices. There seemed to be an abnormal demand for flowers, according to C. Betscher. Hyacinths and lilies were the leaders in plant sales, while carnations, violets, sweet peas and roses were favorites in the cut flower division in the order named.

CINCINNATI, O.—The supply of Easter stock this year was greater than in former years and prices were lower than a year ago, and while it is impossible to give an accurate statement of 1916 Easter sales, Otto H. Hoffmeister estimates an increase of about 10 per cent in volume of sales as compared with those of a year ago. Blooming plants were in great demand, while there was also a fair demand for the decorative sorts. Cut flowers of all kinds sold readily.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Furrow & Co. report a 50 per cent increase in sales as compared with the Easter trade of 1915, with prices 25 per cent better. High grade stock sold first. Plants were in good supply and variety and sold up close. In cut flowers there was a shortage of the bulbous varieties, with lilies, roses and carnations the best sellers. Tulips had little call.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Arthur Todd reports little difference in volume of sales or prices in comparing the 1916 Easter trade with that of a year ago. The only shortage noted in pot plants was in lilies in some cases and in cut flowers; carnations could not be had in sufficient numbers to meet the call. Both cut flowers and plants had a good sale and there was little left over. The trade generally is satisfied with the results.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—With a plentiful supply of plants but a shortage in cut flowers, and prices somewhat higher than a year ago the 1916 Easter trade shows an increase of 20 per cent in volume of sales, according to G. Van Bochove & Bro. Medium-priced lily plants were most in demand in the plant class, while in cut flowers, violets, sweet peas and carnations found ready sale.

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA.—J. C. Steinhauer reports a 15 per cent increase in the volume of 1916 Easter sales as compared with those of a year ago. Prices were about the same, but there was a shortage in cut flowers and also in hyacinths and tulips in the plant class. Money was plentiful owing to good business in the oil industry and the demand for flowers was never better.

CENTRALIA, ILL.—With the supply of plants not quite equal to the demand, but with plenty of cut flowers, Easter sales were about on a par with those of 1915. Prices were about the same as a year ago. Lily plants had a heavy sale, while in the cut flower class lilies, narcissi, roses and carnations vied as favorites, according to J. W. Ross & Co., who also report that ORANGE PARK, FLA.—With prices the same as last year, Easter business was 50 per cent better with Schulze & Obermaier. Plants and cut flowers were equal to the demand. All varieties of flowering plants were popular, foliage plants being the least salable. In cut flowers, roses, carnations and daffodils were the leaders. The general business outlook is reported good.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—With prices better than a year ago, but counteracted by a shortage of stock both in cut flowers and plants, the Alpha Floral Co. had an 18 per cent increase in the volume of Easter business as compared with 1915. In cut flowers the bulbous varieties led in popularity, while in plants, the lilies, hydrangeas and azaleas in the fancy grades sold first.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—With the supply of both cut flowers and plants short of demand and prices on about the average, S. A. Anderson reports 1916 Easter sales as showing an increase of 20 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago. In plants everything sold, and while in cut flowers every item was in demand, those suitable for corsages had the first call.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—With Easter prices about the same as a year ago and a plentiful supply of stock of all kinds, 1916 sales showed a slight increase over Easter, 1915, as reported by A. Washburn & Sons. In plants lilies led in popularity with hydrangeas least in demand. In cut flowers the demand for all varieties was well balanced.

DECATUR, ILL.—Easter sales for 1916 were $200 greater than for the corresponding period last year at the establishment of John N. Bommersbach. Prices were about as usual and stock of all kinds was plentiful with the exception of Easter lilies, which were favorites, closely followed by hydrangeas. In cut flowers roses sold first.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Henry Smith reports 1916 Easter trade about equal in volume to that of a year ago, with little change in prices. Plants were in good supply and the call for cut flowers could be satisfied in most instances, all varieties moving well. In plants, lilies, roses, hydrangeas and azaleas were the favorites.

TORONTO, ONT.—H. G. Dillemoth reports sales as a trifle short of those of last year. While the supply in all lines was plentiful prices were below normal and individual purchases were smaller with a tendency to buy the lower priced offerings. Select roses of all varieties were hard to sell.

MERIDIAN, MISS.—Mrs. N. G. McKinney sold out everything in her establishment. Plants were in plentiful supply but cut flower sales would have been better if more stock had been available. Usual prices prevailed and business was about on a par with that of Easter, 1915.

The Late Frederick Bolze.

Frederick Bolze, aged 69 years, a grower and retailer of Pleasantville, N. Y., died at his home there, April 17. Many years ago, he was gardener on the estate of John D. Rockefeller, near Tarrytown, N. Y. After he relinquished that position, he for a time conducted retail stores in New York City, having been located at Fifth avenue and 42d street and at Lexington avenue and 54th street. He finally settled at Pleasantville. He was a native of Germany. A man of fine character, he was highly respected by all who knew him. His funeral was held April 19. New York florists attending were Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., and W. G. Badgley, of Badgley & Bishop. He is survived by four daughters and one son. A. F. F.

OMAHA, NEB.—Chas. Ederer is adding four houses to his range.

CADILLAC, MICH.—A flower store will be opened in this city by Percy Snell.

SOUTH NORWALK, CONN.—Davis Moore has purchased the range of Mrs. James Patience.

HORNELL, N. Y.—Kennedy & Son will build a retail store in front of their greenhouses.

OROVILLE, CALIF.—A new flower shop has been opened under the management of R. H. May.

CAMDEN, N. J.—A new house, 24x85 feet, will be added to the range of A. C. Stack in the near future.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—Lawrence Cotter, of the Lakeview Rose Gardens, who has been on the sick list, is again at business.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—A. H. Dailey has removed to more commodious quarters on Market street within a block of his former location.

LEWISTON, ME.—August 24-25 have been decided upon as the dates of the annual flower show of the Gardeners' Union to be held in this city.

MERIDIAN, MISS.—Adolph Arp, well-known to the trade here, has resigned his position at Highland park, owing to ill health. He will go to the coast and engage in citrus fruit growing.

WINONA, MINN.—The Winona Floral Co., which recently purchased the Kirchner Greenhouses and leased the establishment of Mrs. Dora Voelker, on Huff street, has opened an attractive retail establishment downtown.

MOLINE, ILL.—Julius Staack has agreed to accept $6,000 from the city for damages to his greenhouses, resulting from floods on the street above his establishment. A suit against the street car company is still pending, it is understood.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that, as no objection has been filed, the following registration becomes complete: Rose Bedford Belle, by the Bedford Flower Co., Bedford Hills, N. Y.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

April 16, 1916.

McHutchison & Co.

In May, 1915, McHutchison & Co., New York, purchased the building at 95 Chambers street, running through to 77 Reade street, a full block long. The building consists of five floors, basement and sub-basement. They will occupy the full first floor May 1, 27x150 feet, which will give them room to grow. Since they commenced business 15 years ago they have moved four times, and each time they have doubled the occupied space.

The Easter Business.

The Easter business of 1916 was a record breaker. All indications pointed to an unusual demand, and the trade made greater preparations to handle it than in possibly any previous year, but at that, in many instances, the exceptional call for flowers and plants of every seasonable variety exceeded their anticipations. Prices were reasonable, stock was good in quality and plentiful, the public responded to the Easter spirit liberally, the better class of plants and cut flowers selling first, with the result a clean up of everything within the shops is the general report from all parts of the United States, with increases in the volume of sales over 1915, varying from 10 to 100 per cent.

Association of Kew Gardeners in America.

The first meeting of the above association was held at Shanley's, 117 West Forty-second street, New York, on the evening of April 5, in the form of a banquet and reunion. There was a large attendance of Kew men, accompanied by their ladies, and all present spent a most enjoyable evening, as members from many states were present and many old friends met again. It was decided to hold the next annual banquet and reunion in New York during the week of the 1917 spring flower show.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: M. Free, Brooklyn, N. Y., president; James MacPherson, Trenton, N. J., vice-president; S. R. Candler, Southampton, N. Y., secretary. S. R. CANDLER, Sec'y.

McDougle Loses Greenhouses.

W. T. McDougle, of Van Buren, Ind., now over 74 years of age, who lost his greenhouses in the recent storm there, will not rebuild. Mr. McDougle desires us to convey this information to the numerous advertisers in our columns with whom he has transacted business for many years past and to assure them of his appreciation of their many courtesies.

Women's National Agri. and Hort. Ass'n.

The third conference of the Women's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association and an exhibition of members' work and a garden sale to be conducted by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., May 18-20. Mrs. George U. Crocker, chairman, 378 Marlborough street, Boston, announces the following programme:

THURSDAY, MAY 18.

FAVORABLE EASTER INDICATIONS.

By the time these notes are in print, Easter will have come and gone, so that all we can say as to the trade for that day of days is conjecture. However, the dealers are expecting a good trade and they will be disappointed if it is not forthcoming. Conditions seem to be somewhat reversed from what it was thought they would be a few weeks ago. Then it appeared that Easter lilies would be scarce and that more dependence would have to be placed upon various plants. But on the eve of Easter we find that the stock of Easter lilies will equal all demands, and plants like rhododendrons, azaleas, etc., are very scarce. About all that is seen in that line are a few rhododendrons, a nice showing of hydrangeas and rambler and Dorothy Perkins roses. The stock of roses, especially out-door stock, is plentiful and of good quality. This is true also of sweet peas. Some of the dealers have a nice showing of orchids and lily of the valley. Gladioli are coming on, some very good America being seen at this writing. Just now ordinary business is quiet and the dealers are putting in their time decorating for the Easter trade, and putting up baskets for that day's business.

NOTES.

O. C. Saakes seemed to have the biggest stock and almost the only stock of rhododendrons in the city. Besides the usual supply of roses and carnations, he has a nice line of heaths, hydrangeas and spireas.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldensen have their windows banked high with Easter lilies, gladioli, spireas, long-stemmed sweet peas in all colors, lily of the valley, etc. They are well prepared for big business.

Darling's Flower Shop has opened up another flower establishment at 210 West Sixth street. The old stand at 216 is still doing business. Probably the new place is to handle the overflow trade, of which there seemed to be a plenty.

Wright's Flower Shop, Inc., has hundreds of nicely arranged baskets containing Easter lilies, ferns, decorative plants, etc., to retail up to $15. They certainly are prepared for a big Easter trade.

The California Florists, now located in the Gates hotel building, seem to have found their permanent location at last, as they report an increasing trade at their new location.

The Redondo Floral Co. will have a big stock for the Easter trade in all lines of flowers, with a good supply of baby roses, callas and other bulbous flowers.

The Broadway Florists are not behind other dealers in their stock and in their display. They have some of the finest American Beauty roses to be seen.

William Shields, manager of the recent Pasadena flower show, departed, April 21, for an extended trip to Chicago, Boston and other eastern points.

S. Murata & Co. report a big shipping business in Easter stock and expect to be well cleaned up. They are the largest wholesalers in the city.

J. W. Wolters, the Hill street florist, is well stocked up as usual, and will no doubt get his share of the Easter trade.

G. H. H.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Cash prizes in amounts varying from $1 to $25 will be awarded to the successful contestants in the city beautiful contest this year. There are classes for yards, vegetable gardens for adults and vegetable gardens for children.

ALL FORMER EASTER RECORDS ECLIPSED.

"The greatest Easter business ever experienced by the local trade" is the consensus of opinion of all florists here, based upon actual records of former years. Great preparations were made by all for the tremendous call that was indicated by the interest shown by the public in the early part of the week, when the purchases were heavier than ever before and increased constantly as the days passed, until Saturday, when an unprecedented demand fairly swamped all, who despite increased facilities, were unable to cope with it. In plants, lilies were by far more popular than any other variety, and these were in the higher priced plants, closely followed by azaleas of all sizes and colors. Bulbous plants were more plentiful than generally expected, and the cool weather of the preceding two weeks greatly improved the quality of them and great numbers were sold. Crimson Ramblers in large sizes were conspicuous items in the more expensive effects and found ready sale. Baby rambles were quite plentiful and the stock in good condition and sold well. Some hydrangeas were found in many of the stores, but these as an Easter plant are not as popular as they are later in the season, though quite a few were sold, chiefly the pink variety. Plant baskets, daintily trimmed, were important factors among the higher priced effects, and their popularity was maintained, though it is doubtful if the sale of these equalled that of last year. In cut flowers, it would be hard to say which item led in popularity, as the assortment was so varied and complete. The stock of roses was not large, and in fact, a shortage of these was felt by many, but carnations were available for all requirements and an ample supply of bulbous stock made the filling of cut flower orders quite easy. Sweet peas were fine, but many more could have been sold, and violets were as popular as ever, where the stock was reliable, but many on the market were old and repulsive to the prospective customer. The weather on Saturday was cloudy and rainy and much apprehension on this account was felt early in the day, but this was dispelled late when the flower buyers thronged the stores to the limit of the room and facilities afforded. Sunday the weather was much the same, but those stores that kept open had a big trade to handle throughout the day and rounded out a most satisfactory Easter business, which will be hard, if not impossible to equal, in future years.

BIG EASTER SUPPLY SELLS FAST.

Easter business was most excellent. Nearly all of very large receipts cleaned up, while in some lines more might have been used. Prices were reasonable. Blooming plants sold well. Roses were in a heavy supply, but, with the exception of American Beauties, ran short of actual needs. More carnations would have sold had they been available. Easter lilies were very plentiful and some were left over at the close of the business. This, however, was caused by some large cancellations at the last minute. Sweet peas were plentiful, but more of them could have been used very easily. Smaller bulbous stock sold well. Other offerings included lily of the valley, violets, callas, and snapdragons, and all sold well. Greens, with the exception of smilax, are in a good supply.

NOTES.

C. B. Jones had his store arranged very effectively to display his plants. They were banked on tables and stands in the center of the store and were accessible from all sides.

J. A. Peterson & Sons had an excellent lot of pot roses and hydrangeas for their Easter business.

E. G. Gillett disposed of a large assortment of handsome flowers last week.

C. E. Critchell had a very fine lot of Easter lilies for the Easter trade.

Visitors: Geo. Frisch, Jr., and M. Anderson, both of Dayton, O. H.

MORRIS, ILL.—R. G. Simmen, proprietor of a flower shop at LaSalle, Ill., will open a branch in this city.

EASTER TRADE VERY GOOD.

The Easter trade was very good and much better than anyone expected it would be. The warm weather the early part of the week brought the stock on in large quantities and it is safe to say there were more flowers sold last week than there ever were during any Easter week before. The shipping trade was very heavy and stock was shipped out as fast as it reached the store at good prices considering the tremendous supply there was to offer. The demand did not set in as early as in previous years, and for a time it looked very discouraging, but when the orders did start coming in there was a heavy steady demand and a whirlwind finish with a grand clean-up in practically everything but lilies. The local demand was good the last day and Easter morning and many of the out-of-town florists re-ordered—so taken all in all, trade was very satisfactory and the total sales were far ahead of 1915. Roses especially were in heavy supply and cleaned up nicely, especially American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Cecile Brunner, George Elgar, Baby Doll, Fireflame and Ophelia. Richmond, Rhea Reid, Hadley, Milady and Hoosier Beauty cleaned up at an early hour and there were not any too many Prince de Bulgaria, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst, or Mrs. Moorfield Storey to go around. Killarney and Killarney Brilliant were in good demand but White Killarney could have moved better. Carnations were more plentiful than anyone expected they would be, but all fresh stock cleaned up quickly at good prices, especially red and pink. Enchantress did not move any too well and there was as usual a large supply of pickled stock seen which kept the price of first class stock down. Orchids and gardenias were very scarce and it was impossible to fill anywhere near the demand. Lily of the valley had a splendid call and while there was a good supply offered it cleaned up early and all the dealers had to refuse orders. Sweet peas were in large supply and of fine quality and cleaned up at an early hour at high prices. Lilies were in exceptionally large supply and sold in large lots at low prices and there were too many left over. Jonquils, daffodils and tulips were none too plentiful and the same holds good for violets, which were in short supply and cleaned up quickly. Snapdragons, Spanish iris, single and double stocks, lupines, pansies, daisies, candytuft, calendulas, lilac, anemones, sweet alyssum, swainsona, feverfew, mignonette and other miscellaneous stock cleaned up nicely at good prices especially the Spanish iris and stocks. Ferns sold well and so did smilax and all the other green goods. Wild smilax was very scarce and it was impossible to fill all the orders. Trade since Easter has been very good and so far very few complaints have been heard from out-of-town in regard to the quality of the stock shipped, consequently everyone is happy and more than pleased with the amount of business that was done. The wholesale plantmen report a clean up in all lines and the supply houses had a very good Easter trade. Mothers' day is next on the list and if the readers appreciate a friendly tip they will place their orders well in advance for at present it does not appear as if stock will be any too plenti-

Good Supply of White, Pink and Red.

While we will have a good supply of Carnations, there will not be enough flowers to supply the demand so push roses on that day. You will find that the public in a great many cases prefer them to carnations, so make allowances for the scarcity of carnations and substitute roses. They will move just as quickly. NOTES.

The annual Easter flower sale, held April 22 at the Congress Hotel for the benefit of the Home for Destitute Crippled Children, was a great success and large quantities of plants and cut flowers were sold to leading society people. The sale has been severely criticized by the leading local retail florists, who believe that the committee would have the united support of all the wholesale and retail florists if it was held on any other time but Easter, when the trade has to depend upon the sale of flowers and plants for a living. O. J. Friedman attended the sale and proposed to the various officers of the committee and the directors of the home the advisability of abandoning the Easter flower sale and have the society women co-operate with the Horticultural Society and the Chicago Florists' Club at the annual flower show, if one will be held this year. Mr. Friedman's idea tersely explained is that the profits of the show be given to the home of the crippled children and has been invited by the president to give his idea in detail so that it can be given consideration and has promised THE AMERICAN FLORIST a copy as soon as it is ready. He is not looking for any publicity or glory and his name will not appear in any way with the affair, and if no one objects he will present them at the next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, to be held at the Morrison Hotel next Thursday, May 4, at 8 p. m.

J. A. Budlong says that their Easter business was fine, especially the shipping trade, which was very heavy. Manager Schupp reports an excellent call for lily of the valley and states that it was impossible to fill the demand, although their regular customers were all pretty well taken care of. This firm is busy planting and is devoting considerable bench space to the new rose Champ Weiland and the miniature roses, Baby Doll, George Edgar and Cecile Brunner. Mrs. Chas. Russell will be grown more heavily and the American Beauties thrown out and Milady will take the place of Richmond. Hoosier Beauty is well liked and will be grown on a large scale next season.

Mrs. Marie Winterson, Miss Jane Winterson, Mrs. M. Wilbur, W. Wilson and T. B. Winterson are helping out the regular force at Winterson's Seed Store during the rush. E. F. Winterson says that the E. F. Winterson's cut flower department showed a big increase in the Easter sales over last year, but that trade in the seed department was not quite as good, but the gain fully offset the difference and left a substantial balance on the right side of the ledger.

Weiland & Risch are showing some fine blooms of their pretty new rose, Champ Weiland, which has every other variety backed off the boards when it comes to color. Several of the large growers in this vicinity have devoted considerable bench space to this variety and they all claim that it is going to be quite a factor in this market next season.

Gunner Nelson, 25 years old, gardener for Frederick Sergeant, of Glencoe, was instantly killed Sunday evening, April 23, when struck by a fast local-bound train on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad at the Green Bay road crossing in that suburb.

Hoerber Bros. had a good call for their fancy snapdragons and gladioli for Easter and sold out completely in roses at an early hour. Judging from the way their stock moved one would say that they had a splendid Easter trade.

Claude H. Remagen, formerly with the Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash., helped out the Alpha Floral Co. during the Easter rush and is now open for a situation with some reliable retail florist.

Nick Speropoulos, proprietor of the Wabash Flower Market, 106 South Wabash avenue, has built up a good trade and reports a very satisfactory week.

Morgan Jensen, 3345 West North avenue, is busy with landscape work and had good retail trade since he bought out L. Hoeckner last year.

H. C. Blewitt of Des Plaines had a fine crop of sweet peas for Easter and realized unusually good prices for all the stock that he cut.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Morrison Hotel, Thursday evening, May 4, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Wm. American Beauty Dittman of New Castle, Ind., was a welcome visitor April 25.

Peter Reinberg's Easter sales were the largest in years and Felix Reichling and his able assistants had no trouble in disposing of the stock as fast as Emil Reichling sent it in from the greenhouses, and so far no complaints whatever have been received in regard to the quality of the stock that was shipped out. Emil Reichling has finished planting all their carnations out in the field and is almost through planting the roses.

Wietor Bros. have not had time yet to compare their Easter sales with last year, but there is no doubt but what they will be greater than in 1915, for they sold out nicely in all lines at an early hour. They had a splendid supply of carnations and filled all their orders in full, and supplied several of the other wholesalers with stock. They are busy as bees planting this week and the work is already well under way.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have enjoyed splendid business all through April and the total sales, including Sunday, April 23, are $1,100 ahead of the entire April sales during 1915. The shipping trade last week was exceptionally heavy, especially on Thursday and Friday, April 20-21. The demand this week is starting off good and it appears as if it will keep up the balance of the week.

Zech & Mann handled a tremendous supply of sweet peas last week and sold out completely at an early hour at good prices. Allie Zech says that he does not remember a time when such a large quantity sold so well and gave such good satisfaction as they did then. Last week's business was exceptionally heavy and shows a big gain over last year's.

FLOWERS OF QUALITY

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has had a banner Easter trade in all departments of their business, especially as far as cut flowers and plants were concerned. This firm is cutting a splendid supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses which are unsurpassed for quality in this market and are also showing some splendid cut lilies. In the supply department the force is busy making up magnolia and cypress wreaths for Memorial day. T. E. Waters is of the opinion that these wreaths would be a splendid seller for Mothers' day if they were pushed and his idea seems to be a very good one, for it opens a new avenue of business and there is nothing that would appeal to one's sentiment more than the placing of a wreath on his mother's grave on this occasion. It would be well worth trying and would surely result in good business if presented to the customers in the right light.

John Popesiu, a watchman at the George Wittbold Co.'s store and greenhouses on Buckingham place, was tied hand and foot and beaten with an iron bar early Sunday morning, April 23, by three safeblowers who became angered at his refusal to tell them the location of the safe. The men left without obtaining any valuables, leaving him lying in the basement, where he managed to liberate himself and notify his employers. He was taken to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital and is reported to be well on the road to recovery.

Manager Van Gelder says that Percy Jones' Easter sales last week were the best in years and surprisingly large. The entire store force worked early and late so that all the orders could be filled on time, and many testimonial letters were received this week from their customers complimenting them for the splendid shape in which they handled their orders.

Bassett & Washburn had a big call for their new carnation Belle Washburn for Easter and sold out all the stock they had to offer in this variety at the highest market prices. This firm never had a better business nor such a large supply of stock to offer as they did last week and are more than pleased with the total sales, which proved a record breaker.

Miss Greeley is again in the employ of the John Kruchten Co. and will have charge of the wholesale plant and supply department which has just been added to their line of cut flowers. She is well experienced in this line and needs no introduction to the trade. Baskets, boxes and a general line of staple supplies will be carried and will be on display in a few days.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. sold out as clean as a whistle for Easter and the sales were very large, especially as far as the out-of-town orders were concerned. They had a fine supply of roses from the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette and a large quantity of carnations from their regular shippers. Pyfer & Olsem had a fine trade at their Wilmette store, where H. E. Philpott helped out during the big rush.

The Central Floral Co. spent their first Easter in their new store on North State street and had all the orders that they could handle. While plants were handled on a large scale, cut flowers were the principal offering and sold much better than the proprietors had any idea of. Peter Duris kept making trips to the market as quickly as the stock was disposed of and kept the place looking like a first class store all the time.

Joseph Ziska, Jr., a member of the firm of Joseph Ziska & Sons, stole a march on his many friends in the trade Wednesday, April 26, when he was quietly married to Miss Rose Sula, a pretty young west side society girl. This is leap year, so we cannot blame him for taking a sudden plunge in the matrimonial sea. Who is next?

Erne & Klingel had a very fine Easter trade and cleaned up nicely in all lines with the sales running considerably ahead of 1915. The shipping trade especially was very good and their customers must have cleaned up pretty well, for orders have been numerous since Sunday.

The E. C. Amling Co. had a dandy supply of sweet peas for their Easter trade and sold out almost as quickly as the stock reached the store. The varieties Anita Wehrmann and Yarra-wa sold best and brought the highest market prices.

At Kyle & Foerster's store a heavy demand was experienced for gardenias for Easter and the shipments were quickly disposed of. Sweet peas also sold exceptionally well and a cleanup in these and all other lines was experienced.

Bernard Schmirer, proprietor of the North Shore Floral Co., had such a splendid trade last week that he is going to install a complete set of new store fixtures so as to keep step with the times.

George Manos, the Union Depot Florist, says that he never had such a splendid trade before as he did last week and that he could have sold more plants on Saturday if they were obtainable.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports the best Easter trade in the history of the firm. Fred Stielow is shipping a nice supply of feverfew to this firm of which he is a member.

Chris. Pederson says trade could not have been any better at his East Randolph street store and if it was he would not have been able to handle it, and that he sold out completely as it was.

Miller & Musser had a heavy run on Southern jonquils all last week which they handled in quantity and brought very satisfactory prices. Narcissus poeticus is a leader here this week.

At O. A. & L. A. Tonner's store the report is that their Easter trade in both the cut flower and supply departments was very good and much better than they expected it would be.

W. H. Kidwell & Son never had a better Easter trade and sold out well in all lines. This firm handled a large supply of cut flowers as well as plants which they grow themselves.

Robert Northam says that Richmond roses were very good property at George Reinberg's store last week and that it was impossible to supply anywhere near the demand.

M. C. Gunterberg was well pleased with her Easter business and experienced a general clean-up until the morning of April 23, when the demand first began to slacken.

The Chicago Floral House had their share of trade and did splendidly at both their East Randolph and North State street stores.

The A. L. Randall Co.'s traveling men are getting ready to start out on the road again after helping the regular store force out with the heavy rush last week.

Curtis Kindler of the Raedlein Basket Co. says that the demand for Easter baskets was better than ever this year, but that the orders did not arrive as early as in 1915, consequently six weeks of business was practically crowded into four.

Al. Fischer says that his Easter sales were very satisfactory and sold out completely. He was in the market bright and early Monday morning buying stock to start another week with.

Sinner Bros. had a good Easter trade and while the sales were very satisfactory John Sinner says that they could have been much better.

Kennicott Bros. had a nice supply of stock to offer for Easter, particularly fancy sweet peas, which were in brisk demand.

Wm. T. Shield, president of the Pasadena Horticultural Society, Pasadena, Calif., was a visitor this week.

BUSIEST WEEK IN HISTORY.

The past week has been the banner one in the history of the trade in this city, with an abundance of all seasonable plants, with the exception of azaleas in small sizes. Cut flowers were plentiful with the exception of sweet peas, violets and lily of the valley. Roses brought from four cents to 20 cents, with carnations priced from three cents to eight cents for fancy stock. Sweet peas sold at from $1 to $2.50 per hundred, while violets were not to be had except in the case of a few favored customers. Sweet peas cleaned up Saturday and by Sunday violets were nowhere to be seen. Lily of the valley was another article that closed out Saturday.

NOTES.

The L. S. Donaldson Co. had three large windows filled with large azaleas, rhododendrons and lilac, while another window display consisted of rambler roses. W. D. Desmond says this was the best Easter trade in the history of the firm. Thirty-two extra salespeople were employed and they had to turn down orders in some lines, especially lily of the valley and sweet peas.

Reports from St. Paul are most flattering. Holm & Olson report the largest Easter business in their history. Sunday morning they used 140 extra boys as special messengers to insure prompt deliveries.

Oscar Amundson added 12 extra people to his force and used four extra automobiles in his delivery service. A new stenographer and a cashier are additions to his store force.

H. B. Whitted filled the windows with empty pots, accompanied by a sign, telling the after-effects of the Easter demand at both stores.

Will Bros. were swamped with orders, but managed to divide the supply and satisfied their customers. Their stock sold at sight.

A suit was filed this week for a receiver for the Kentucky Nursery Co., Inc., Borne Gardener, R. I. Cullen and others, alleging mismanagement and of disposing of 30 acres of land in such a way as to injure the stockholders and the assets of the concern.

On April 20 this city and vicinity was visited by a heavy rain storm and hail. While the hailstones were large they seemed to be soft and not much damage was done, although it gave the florists a scare.

Milwaukee, Wis.

1916 EASTER TRADE WAS A HUMMER.

A deep breath, and everybody is thankful that Easter is a thing of the past, for with few exceptions it was a hummer, practically everything worth while cleaning up in great shape, the most unpleasant feature being that most of the retail business was done the last two or three days. It took folks a long time to get started, but "all's well that ends well." In general, blooming plants took the lead, with cut flowers a close second. In plants, Easter lilies predominated, while the supply in roses, azaleas, lilac, spirea, hydrangeas, daisies, etc., was so great that one really felt dubious as to the outcome at first. But as before stated, Friday and Saturday cleaned up everything in a hurry. In cut flowers, lilies, as usual, came to the front at regular prices. A very large quantity of roses were also disposed of at nearly regular prices. There were just about enough good carnations to fill all orders at $2 to $5 per 100. There was an unusually heavy demand for some of the smaller flowers fit for corsage bouquets, etc., such as sweet peas, lily of the valley, Spanish iris, daffodils and the like, and supply in this line was not overabundant; in fact, good lily of the valley was a rather scarce article by Saturday evening. On Tuesday preceding Easter, the weather turned very warm, softening up the exposed stock, which was no benefit; after that, though the weather for the most part was cool and cloudy, the thermometer going down to 36 degrees on Friday night, kept stock in A-1 shape. On Saturday, it was cool, with a little rain now and then—just enough to expect the flower buying public to stay away, but results proved just the opposite.

NOTES.

On April 19, between 5 and 6 p. m., one of the most destructive hail storms for many years past swept along the northern end of our city, doing considerable damage to glass and stock of those florists located in that vicinity. Starting on the west end, Fred Ernst lost most of his glass and Easter stock, of which he had his full supply at that time. Chas. Menger, near-by, suffered the same as Mr. Ernst. As we go down the way, Rudolph Preuss, Gust Holtz, Kummer Floral Co., E. Haasch, A. Tasky, Fred Gutermuth, Schroeder Floral Co., Emil Welke—all within the city limits—were hit hard. Kamp & Spinti, wholesale growers, on the Green Bay road, were the only ones who reported any loss up to now. North Milwaukee and Brown Deer plants were left intact. The storm path raging from west to east, it seems remarkable that F. Schwebke, G. Baerman & Sons and the Heitman-Oestreicher Co., who are located on the extreme west end of this area, were left undamaged. Fortunately, the weather following the storm was mild for had it gone down to the freezing point the loss in most cases would have been total.

All our wholesale houses, namely, Holton & Hunkel Co., Gust. Rusch & Co., and the C. C. Pollworth Co., handled immense quantities of cut flowers and report shipping trade in both flowers and plants are very satisfactory.

It was impossible at times to give satisfactory attention to the crowds who waited for service at the Gimbel Bros. flower stand, according to Archie McDonald, who has charge of this department.

J. M. Fox & Co., Inc., utilized an extra large window for displaying made-up baskets and specimen plants, and the results were very satisfactory. The sale of cut flowers was ahead of last year.

The funeral of our esteemed ex-mayor and governor, Geo. W. Peck, who through his literary ability won a national reputation, called for many floral tributes Tuesday, April 18.

The few retailers visited on Saturday late in the afternoon were pretty well cleaned up in the plant line, with most of the cut flower orders still on file.

The Baumgarten Floral Co., Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., M. A. McKenney Co., and Currie Bros., all put on extra fine window displays, which undoubtedly was the cause for a most favorable report from all.

Wm. Zimmermann, who moved only a short time ago, reports an increase all around over the Easter of 1915. More lily of the valley could have been disposed of had the supply been ample.

Some of the finest pot plants seen in the market for the holidays came from the greenhouses of A. M. Dettmann & Son.

Walter M. Maas & Co. report moving an enormous lot of pot plants, with cut flowers a close second. E. O.

Cleveland.

COMPLETE CLEANUP OF EASTER STOCK.

Every florist heard from, reports the biggest Easter trade in years; this is also affirmed by wholesalers and growers of both cut flowers and plants. Although it rained almost continuously, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and also part of Sunday, there was an enormous amount of cut flowers and plants sold. Corsages were seen everywhere, although the only time they could show them to advantage was a few hours Sunday afternoon when the sun shone for a short time. Violets were very poor, the later shipments arriving somewhat better as to quality, but did not arrive until late Saturday afternoon. Lily of the valley was scarce, and what did arrive locally, was of poor quality. Of sweet peas there were not nearly enough to go around. Carnations cleaned up entirely and were short of the demand. Roses were more plentiful; some wide open stock went to the street fakers, but good stock was in good supply and cleaned up nicely, a few white Killarney being the only thing left on the tables by Sunday noon. Greens of all kinds were plentiful, but cleaned up. Southern smilax was used quite extensively for decorations, but the season is late and stock was poor. From now on huckleberry will be used. Snapdragon was plentiful, but in good demand. Bulbous stock, tulips and daffodils were in good supply and sold well. Easter and calla lilies as usual sold well and the supply was good. Long American Beauties and Ward roses were far short of the demand. As usual some growers had pickled stock, or stock that should have been cut the week before, and

NOTES.

Tim Smith, in his store just opened at East 46th street market house, reports a very satisfactory Easter business. As he has been open only a week or two, the results show that the location is a good one, and future business looks very promising. This store was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers, the balcony in particular being decorated very artistically.

At Westman & Getz', Miss Getz reports business way beyond any former Easter. Plants sold best for this day, but cut flowers, especially corsages, increased in proportion, and only about a dozen plants remained Monday morning. Not enough corsage flowers could be had to fill some of the late orders.

Frank Ritzenthaler, of Knoble Bros., reports they could not take care of all the business, especially in corsage work, not enough stock being obtainable to fill. Late orders were turned down. Best business ever.

C. W. Wagner reports that plants were leaders with him, although cut flowers sold well. He says violets were poor, sweet peas good, and stock of all kinds plentiful. All deliveries were on time.

Wm. Bramley, of Bramley & Son, said it would take several days to figure up how much increase in sales, but he cleaned up on plants and cut flowers. Corsage sales were also very good.

Wm. Kruzen, the new manager of the Smith & Fetters Co., was a very happy but tired man as the result of his first holiday. Business was better than ever, and everything sold.

The Jones Russell Co. reports double the business of any previous Easter, with not enough stock for corsage work. Some stock was quite poor; later shipments better as to quality.

At the J. M. Gasser Co.'s retail store, F. C. W. Brown says: "The very best ever." Stock was good and plentiful, except sweet peas.

Graham & Son report a very good Easter. Some stock was poor, but everything sold well—both plants and cut flowers.

BIG GAIN OVER 1915 EASTER SALES.

A canvass of leading florists shows that there was a gain of about 25 per cent in the volume of Easter trade, as compared with a year ago. More than at any previous time the demand ran to corsage flowers. This created a famine in most everything entering into such use, except roses. Though the sale was heavy on the latter, there was a great supply to draw from. Lily of the valley was perhaps the scarcest article of stock, and was early exhausted, readily commanding $1. Violets were also limited in quantity, and the quality poor, at $1.50 a hundred. Florists regret that they could not have foreseen the great demand for sweet peas. Cuttings were large, but not equal to requirements. They sold from 50 cents to 75 cents a hundred. In the more standard flowers, prices were not so good as last year, florists fearing a glut because of the larger supply in almost everything. Carnations which brought $1 last Easter sold this year for 75 cents. Roses, which sold from $1 up, were on the whole cheaper than normal. Cuttings of lilies were the slowest feature of the cut flower trade. In pot plants, the Easter lily trade was enormous, but had been met with unusual preparation. Former prices of 25 cents a bloom prevailed. They are still a plentiful feature of stock. Azaleas moved freely at $1.50 up. Snapdragons proved to be very active at 75 cents to $1.50. Miscellaneous bulbous stock was quite well cleaned up, tulips being the most lifeless. Daffodils and spires were also a little weak as compared with other plants. Early buying was more in evidence than usual.

NOTES.

Several florists were having a Monday morning rush following Easter, as the result of heavy orders for the funeral of W. A. Hopkins, prominent business man and clubman, which occurred on the afternoon of that day. A blanket of pansies, swainsonas and lily of the valley, costing $100, was furnished by the Livingston Seed Company, also between $200 and $300 worth of smaller orders. Another florist had orders aggregating $100 for the same funeral.

Opening of the new Z. L. White department store was marked by 65 floral offerings from business friends, mostly out of the city. One Columbus florist furnished 28 of these pieces, running up to nearly $400. The same firm also furnished six elaborate pieces for the opening of a new shoe store last week.

Early on Easter eve the Munk Floral Company was obliged to close its doors against customers for a time until the crowd inside could be waited upon. There was an unprecedented demand from people living or going out of town who were hurrying to trains.

Two new machines, a Reo and a Ford, have been added by the Livingston Seed Company, giving that company a delivery force now of five motors.

Despite unfavorable weather conditions, Easter business far exceeded that of a year ago, in fact, went ahead of the record for several years previous. The demand was for cut flowers and plants of the better grade and higher prices. The plant sales surpassed those of any previous year. Everything in the way of a flower was in demand, and as the supply was plentiful, sales surpassed all expectations.

NOTES.

The Doswell Floral Co. were completely sold out of plants, and had a big call for cut flowers. The stocks of sweet peas, roses and carnations, all of which they cut in large quantities, were high in quality.

Ed. Wenninghoff opened a temporary store for his Easter trade in addition to his permanent establishment. He made splendid displays at both locations and did a record business.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey report a complete sell-out of bulbous stock. They cut quantities of fine cattleyas, but did not have nearly enough to supply the big demand.

Ed. Hauswirth, formerly with the Bradley Flower Shop of this city, and more recently of the Chicago market, will open a store at 220 Berry street early in May.

A. J. Lanternier featured fine azaleas, rhododendrons and ericas, among a good assortment of other stock, and reports business far ahead of 1915.

The sale of plants at the Flick Floral Co.'s establishment was unequalled. A large force worked day and night in getting out orders.

Markey Bros. had a splendid trade in their new store, both cut flowers and plants selling well. H. K.

Pittsburgh.

"BANNER BUSINESS" UNANIMOUS REPORT.

"The best Easter ever" is the unanimous sentiment of all the Pittsburgh florists, which is in turn endorsed by all the trade in the contiguous territory, the majority of the happy ones reporting to have sold everything in stock. There was plenty of money in circulation in the city, which may attribute an explanation of this banner holiday of all times. Our factories and mills have been operating, both night and day, with the result that prosperity is more than evident everywhere. In most cases business ran far ahead of expectations, and much more could have been done had there been more stock to offer than was had. A marked scarcity prevailed in violets and sweet peas. The former were very good, considering the lateness of the season, but the shippers were able to supply only about 40 per cent of their estimates made a week or so before Easter. The sweet pea growers fell down badly on their promises also, as crops failed to produce when they were needed. Serious disappointments were caused on this account. The supply of carnations, yellow daisies, lilies and bulbous stock was plentiful, while lily of the valley and roses were very shy. Pot stock of all kinds sold well, and some very fine plants of lilies, hyacinths, azaleas and spireas were displayed by the retailers. Monday found hosts of stiff joints and sleepy eyes, but there will be plenty of time to rest until the next big rush on Mothers' day, Sunday, May 14.

NOTES.

During the Easter rush, Jack O'Leary had the misfortune of losing a highly coveted diamond ring, but was much relieved when an honest man returned it the following day, in answer to a newspaper advertisement. Hereafter Jack intends leaving his valuables at home during a holiday business, which is not a bad idea.

Thomas Joyce reports an entire cleanup on everything he had in Easter stock. He is now featuring a small basket of artificial roses at his stand in the Pittsburgh market.

The Highland Flower Co. has opened for business at Wellesley avenue and Farragut street, East End, in the greenhouses adjoining the old Peacock estate.

In the Diamond Theatre building, East Liverpool, a flower shop has opened under the name of The Diamond Floral Co.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. cut heavily on lilies, daffodils, tulips and lily of the valley for their Easter business. M.

EASTER SALES SET HIGH RECORD MARK.

There are 300 or more flower shops in this city, every one of which was taxed to the utmost to handle the business of this great season. In addition there were countless numbers of small dealers—squatters, whose stock overflowing from temporarily vacant stores, lining the curbs in all the busy commercial residence centers. The department stores had their usual large quota, while all the 5 and 10 cent palaces sold lily plants at 10 cents per flower and bud, handling them in some cases in thousand lots. The wonder is where all the stock came from, yet on Saturday an immense lot was dumped on the city hall pavement by some of the growers who had not sold out, much of it not being ready in time, and offered to the passing throngs at their own price. The weather was good all week, cool but pleasant. It rained hard late on Friday, cleaning up the streets for Saturday's business, which was immense. Everybody in all the various branches, stores and street men, appear to have sold out. The growers who had their stock in, moved it without trouble. Owing to the continued cold weather, a few of them missed with their roses and hydrangeas. Easter lilies were sold in quantity at low figures—$7 per hundred flowers and buds on the plant was the price to the department and 10-cent stores. This was mostly for short plants and much of such stock was seen. An effort was made to have the better department stores agree to sell at 15c per flower and bud, but 10 cents and 12 cents was the ruling price.

NOTES.

Across the river in Camden flowers were everywhere. All the storekeepers carried large stocks and the report was general that it was the largest business ever experienced. The Quality Flower Shop enjoyed an excellent business, cleaning up everything saleable, a great increase over last year. An Overland truck has been added to their delivery service. Edward Reid sent over his Vim car for Saturday deliveries. J. M. Thoires had an excellent business, as did Wm. Vogt Jr., both of whom carried a splendid line and had very little left.

The wholesale cut flower men enjoyed a splendid business. Edward Reid, the "sage of Ranstead street," declared it to be the best ever. Cattleyas were among the scarce articles. Bruce Griffin was there with the goods and sent him almost 1,000 flowers. Lily of the valley, another favorite and shy, was handled in quantity, some 30,000 sprays going out; also Easter lilies by the thousand. On the Monday following he was all smiles from a large bunch of Southern orders just in.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. had a wonderful business. Easter and calla lilies, white daisies and snapdragon were in too large supply, but the market cleaned up with most everything else. There were plenty of double violets, but few good ones, and there was a great demand for everything fine. A shipment of peonies, the first, were a novelty. They came from South Carolina.

Edwards Floral Hall Co., of Atlantic City, had a splendid trade. As an experiment this firm sent out telegraph blanks with its address printed and also a notice that all orders could be sent collect, and it would allow the usual commission. These were sent to all F. T. D. members and other prominent florists. Many responses from this new field was the result.

Splendid business was the word with the Berger Brothers, there being a great demand for everything. Because of the quantity easter lilies appeared to hang fire, but a lot were moved late in the day. Sweet peas were in great demand, as was lily of the valley.

The Leo Niessen Co. turned over an immense stock. American Beauties and other roses were handled in large quantities; sweet peas by the hundred thousand, carnations the same. There

These little figures attracted great attention. Choice Easter plants were also a feature.

In the Pennock Brothers' store, together with made up plant baskets, there were used birds' nests and bird sticks, a very pleasing combination.

T. Nelson Geiger was well stocked with Easter plants in his beautiful store and business was very satisfactory.

Albany, N. Y.

The reforestation of 8,000 acres of land in the state was begun last week. Of the amount, 5,000 acres are owned by the state, and 3,000 acres by private individuals. The planting this spring on the part of the state will include 3,000 acres at Saranac Lake, Indian Lake, Lake Clear Junction, and Mountain Pond in the Adirondacks; 2,000 acres more will be completed in the fall. The number of trees set out on state land this year will total 5,000,000; on private land, about 3,000,000.

Among the bills passed by the state legislature, which adjourned April 20, was one introduced by Senator Henry M. Sage to authorize the purchase by the city of Albany of a tract of land on New Scotland avenue, owned by the county, on which to erect a greenhouse. The greenhouse will be a part of the equipment of the park department.

At the meeting of the Albany Florists' club on the evening of May 4 an illustrated lecture on "Orchids" will be delivered by Prof. Edward A. White of the department of floriculture, Cornell University. The lecture will be held in the auditorium of the State Education building.

EASTER RETAILERS' HOLIDAY.

Another Easter with its varying incidents, has passed, and the wholesale district has settled down to a season of hum-drum monotony. Relating to the results of the Easter business, there are different views. One veteran wholesaler has said: "It was the retailers' holiday", meaning that the retailers had the best of it. Along certain lines, that is correct. Cattleyas were exceedingly scarce and the wholesale price was at the rate of $1 per flower for the inferior grades, to $2 per flower for the best C. gigas. It does not appear that the latter price was paid for a great number, but we believe there were instances where it was paid. Probably $1 to $1.50 was what the bulk of the stock sold for. Lily of the valley also went high. Five dollars to $8 per 100 is a reasonable statement, but there were sales at $15 per 100, a record price for these late years. American Beauty roses were either too plentiful or their former charm has waned. On April 21, specials reached $40 per 100, but if there were any higher prices they were few and far between. On Easter morning there were thousands of American Beauties in the wholesale district that could have been bought for $10 to $15 per 100, but there were no buyers. As predicted in these notes, a week ago, carnation prices dropped April 22, though they held up longer than we expected. From the middle of the week up to Saturday night, $4 to $5 per 100 was the ruling price, when they dropped to $3 per 100. In the general run of tea roses, there were occasional sales of select stock at $15 to $20 per 100, but $8 to $12 is what the bulk of specials sold for depending on variety, with No. 1's and No. 2's going at from $2 to $5. Considering the fact, that for some time, violets have been practically in the "has-been" class, they made a great run. A practical man of the street said, on the night of April 22: "I saw some slips where 'Bill Jones' paid $1 per 100 for violets. When 'Bill' will pay that price, I am certain that there is something doing in violets." There was a surplus of cut lilies, and though they started at $10 per 100 for good stock, $6 to $8 is a more reasonable statement of sales. Sweet peas were plentiful and sold well. As previously noted in these columns, a remarkably fine quality of sweet peas now reaches this market. We of course refer to the orchid flowered varieties, as the old ones are down and out. There were some sales at $2 per 100 for very long stemmed stock, but $1.50 per 100 is a good average. Gardenias were plentiful and cheap, as compared with prices of some other years, $3 per dozen being the top price for selected stock. There was a fair movement in narcissi, tulips and minor stocks at normal prices.

April 24.—The usual reaction that follows a great holiday is here, and there is very little doing today. Orchids and lily of the valley continue scarce and high, but in other stocks there is a surplus. A review of the Easter trade in the wholesale cut flower district, shows that it was fair, but nothing to boast of. The rain, both Saturday and Easter, had a depressing effect on cut flowers. If the weather is fine on, and the day preceding a great holiday, thousands of people are on the streets, which greatly improves counter or bunch trade. Taken in the aggregate, that cuts a large figure in the sale of cut flowers. Relating to stock not heretofore specifically mentioned, snapdragons were a surprise. Though there was fine stock on the market, it practically went dead, and thousands are now about with no buyers. Good double stocks did not fare much better; with the snapdragons, they seem to be going out of fashion. Reports that have come in from all the five boroughs of New York, from Newark and Jersey City, N. J., and from other neighboring towns, indicate that the plant trade was exceptionally good, better than Easter, 1915. All the New York retailers that we have, at this writing, been able to reach, say that they sold out in plants. Philips Brothers, prominent retailers of Newark, N. J., state that they had a very excellent business and are well pleased with results. William H. Kuebler, the well known Brooklyn wholesaler, who knows Brooklyn about as well as a mother knows her child, says that business was good there.

NOTES.

As announced in our issue of April 22, the dissolution of the firm of Henshaw & Fenrick goes into effect on this date. We have known both these "boys" for a number of years, have eaten and drank, and occasionally "scrapped" with them. That is the humorous view of it. From the business viewpoint, they are both clever and able men, and so far as we can judge, have made a great success in the wholesale business. Their reasons for dissolving partnership is a matter that is of no concern to the public or to us, but as they go their several ways, we take this opportunity to tender them kind feelings, and sincere good wishes for their future prosperity and happiness.

All the stores of the wholesale district kept open throughout the night of April 22 and Easter morning and there were many humorous incidents. The scriptural saying: "It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer, but afterward he boasteth," was exemplified. Long lines of florists' automobiles were ranged along the curbs. They were from Brooklyn, Yonkers, Jersey City and neighboring towns and cities of this state and New Jersey. Toward Easter morning it was no unusual sight to find a number of the "boys" taking "forty winks" while one stood guard.

It would be impossible to find a more complete display of everything in the horticultural line than is to be seen at the rooms of the MacNiff Horticultural Co., 52-56 Vesey street. Although its three stores afford considerable space, what is not taken up with stock is filled with buyers, both on auction and other days.

CHICAGO

Paul Rigo, who for the past eight years has been head salesman for Henshaw & Fenrich, and who for one year previously was with A. M. Henshaw, will be with the Henshaw Floral Co., Inc., when it opens May 1 at 127 West 28th street. Paul is a clever and capable man.

John Young, who figuratively speaking was almost worked to death with two flower shows, is now having a breathing spell, and we can talk to him. When John is busy, the wise policy is to keep away from him. His company had good Easter stock and good business.

The Ulrich Brunner roses are now coming in strong and we have recently noticed fine stock at the store of Guttman & Raynor, Inc., 101 West 28th street. At present the specials are running neck and neck with American Beauty, with a chance of being first.

It has been said, and is a fact, that the retail business keeps moving uptown, but Young & Nugent, 42 West 28th street, had a remarkably fine business in plants and plant combinations and cleaned out a great stock.

At William P. Ford's, 107 West 28th street, we noticed a very fine stock of Hadley and Killarney Brilliant roses; also exceptionally fine sweet peas. This store is always well patronized and it had fine Easter business.

In the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co., Moore, Hentz & Nash had a very fine stock of all the best roses, American Beauty and Killarney Queen being particularly noteworthy. They had good business.

It is reported that Thomas Martin, former head salesman for Traendly & Schenck, who some time ago, went to a sanitarium at Saranac Lake, N. Y., is getting along nicely. He had an affection of the chest.

H. W. Thomas, secretary to D. C. Arnold & Co., Inc., 112 West 28th street, has been at Saranac Lake for several weeks for the benefit of his health, and is reported to be rapidly improving.

George J. Polykranas, 104 West 28th street, put in a fine stock of plants, lilies, rhododendrons and hyacinths being noteworthy. He had also an excellent stock of cut flowers and sold out well.

For Easter, M. C. Ford, 121 West 28th street, had a fine stock of carnations and many other good features in the cut flower line. "M. C." is one of the "reliables" of the wholesale district.

Paul Meconi, on the ground floor of the Coogan building, had a fine stock of orchids, gardenias, roses, carnations and other good features. Paul and his clever and amiable little wife are hustlers.

Miss Mabel Conkling, bookkeeper for H. E. Froment, who some time ago relinquished her position on account of ill health, has fully recovered and is back at her desk.

Horace E. Froment, as usual, had a great stock of roses and sold out well. It has got to be a saying in the street: "If you want roses, go to Froment."

William Kessler, 113 West 28th street, had a fine stock of plants and sold out well. He also had good roses, lilies and other cut stock.

John J. Coan, Inc., 115 West 28th street, had a fine stock of Easter plants as well as cut flowers and had good business.

As usual, Traendly & Schenck, 436 Sixth avenue, had a great stock of fine roses and carnations and sold out well.

JACKSON, MICH.—S. M. Isbell, of S. M. Isbell & Co., is reported seriously ill.

WAR risk insurance rates, New York to London, advanced last week to three per cent.

IT is stated the Holland-America line the past year made a profit of 100 per cent on its capital stock of $1,824,000.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, passed another milestone April 24, celebrating the occasion by close attention to business.

VISITED CHICAGO: Waldo Rohnert and wife, Gilroy, Calif., ten years having elapsed since Mr. Rohnert's previous tour of the east.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, left April 22 for his Indiana summer home to unlimber his motor boat on Lake Wauwausee.

C. A. BOLLER, Chicago representative of the Stecher Lithographing Co., Rochester, N. Y., who has been ill at a sanitarium, is said to be improving.

FREE SEEDS were again voted the annual appropriation by congress last week, notwithstanding the urgent need of the money in the government's preparedness scheme.

THE annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association was held at the Rome hotel, Omaha, Neb., Saturday, April 22. After the meeting, the seedsmen sat down to a five-course banquet and later enjoyed an auto ride about the city.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The National Seed Co. recently celebrated its fiftieth year of continuous business in one location, 101 West Main street. Henry T. Jefferson, who is still active in the management of the firm, was one of the organizers.

FRENCH reports of April 7 are to the effect that persistent rains have been very unfavorable to the crop of White Roman hyacinths. In some sections the leaves have begun to dry and the prospects are for a poor crop in quantity and quality.

ONION SETS are well sold up at Chicago. Western brown stock at $3 per bushel is about all that can be had. Most of the onion seed for sets in this district was in the ground last week. The acreage is estimated at 15 per cent below that of 1915.

NEW YORK.—Visiting the seed trade district during the week preceding Easter one might well believe that "back to the land" was a popular cry. The business done, not only by the regular seed houses but also the auction concerns, was enormous.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, April 26, were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.75 per 100 pounds.—Vaughan's Seed Store reports liberal re-fill orders from seedsmen on all spring bulbs for counter trade, gladioli, tuberose, caladiums, etc.

Holland Parcel Post Suspended.

Washington, D. C., April 19, 1916.—By order of the Postmaster General, the parcel post convention between the United States and the Netherlands was today suspended. Lack of steamship transportation facilities to provide service as required by the terms of the convention is the cause. The governments of the United States and the Netherlands have made every effort to maintain parcel service. Last fall, however, the Holland-American Line, the only available carrier, declined to handle parcel mail addressed to the Netherlands government, and stipulated that this mail must be consigned to the Netherlands Oversea Trust.

This action of the Holland-American line in effect denied the use of its steamships to parcel service. Parcel post is handled by special treaty between nations. The Netherlands Oversea Trust is a private corporation. Hence service stands suspended until means are available to exchange this class of mail direct between the United States post office and the Holland post office. Since last fall large quantities of parcel post shipments have accumulated both in Holland and in this country and receipts of parcels from Holland have been negligible. For some time Holland has been returning its parcels to the senders. The suspension of the convention will prevent further accumulation of parcels at New York for which ocean carriage cannot be obtained. Postmasters will refuse parcels hereafter offered and those now in the hands of the postal authorities will be returned and postage refunded.

Seeds of Discord.

(From the Honey Grove, Tex., Signal.)

Our first consignment of new congressional garden seed has arrived. The package bears the signature of Jeff. McLeMore, one of the congressmen from the state at large. We have examined the seeds and find all of them to be of the 1916 model, with the latest self-sprouting attachments, and in the right soil and season they would doubtless come to a full and beautiful fruition. But—they are watermelon and turnip seeds. Here, my countrymen, are some of the evils of electing incompetent congressmen. Any man making body knows that it's too late to plant turnips and that watermelons grown on black land are n. g. Yet, here is Mr. McLeMore drawing $7,500 competent to sit in our national law-a year and mileage for serving the people in congress, with no knowledge of when or where to plant government seeds. The people had an opportunity to select as their congressman at large a man who knows all about garden seeds—one who perhaps would have sent his constituents seeds that would have yielded abundantly without work—but they selected in his stead a crusty bachelor, who knows as little about garden seeds as he knows about babies.—Chicago Tribune.

Sugar Beet Seed.

Willett & Gray's latest (April 13) estimate of the European beet-sugar productions for the 1915-16 season places the total yield at 5,190,387 tons, against their earlier (January 6) figure of 5,511,105 tons. In the new estimate Germany is credited with 1,500,000 tons, Austria 1,011,400 tons, France 140,000, Belgium 100,000, the Netherlands 230,000 and Russia with 1,588,872 tons.

Attache Baker, Petrograd, Russia, says, concerning beet-seed exports; "Unless guaranty bonds are properly filed by May 1 (14) all export permits become invalid. Further permits unlikely until next crop is determined."

Taking Chances.

"I think our congressman is taking long chances."

"How so?"

"He is actually making a tour of the district to inquire how the free seeds he distributed turned out."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A. B. C. of Transplanting.

At this time of the year, notes on transplanting should be of interest. We have always taken great pains in all transplanting work, so much so that many compliments have been received for perfect stands. We do not only believe, but find it quite possible, to obtain an absolutely perfect stand on a large scale. Such perfection can only come from mastering the many details connected with the business. A search for these would take us all the way back to the preparation of the soil for the seed-sowing, and then forward through seed-sowing, watering, temperature, ventilation, lifting of seedlings, etc. It has been our lot to instruct a large number of beginners during our commercial career, and recently as instructor in one of our large universities this phase of the work is again brought out. At this time we will dwell only briefly on some of the points actually involved in transplanting growing plants. To begin with, we believe in preparedness. To this end we arrange that at the proper time the seed beds or plant beds holding the plants to be moved should be at the proper moisture, which means neither wet nor dry. In this condition the plants will suffer the least, the best root system is obtained and the work is a pleasure. Given such conditions, we also see that the beds to receive the plants are in that same condition—neither wet nor dry. With mechanical watering this has become an easy matter. A wet soil will never close tightly around the roots and a dry soil will injure the rootlets before water can be given them. If compelled to plant into surface dry fields outdoors, we use the trowel and scratch the upper layer away, entering the plant into moist earth.

Next of importance is to lift the plants by means of a tool of ample strength, which may be a knife or trowel or spade, as the case may be, and under no condition pull the plants. After this, comes immediate protection from air and sun. Here is where many fall down—they expose their plants before planting, which cannot be recovered by care afterward. It is often necessary to water plants after lifting to get them into shape to withstand handling during sunshine hours, but in this case it is generally best to carefully pack plants upright, one layer deep into shallow flats, boxes or baskets and immerse the roots only into tubs of water for a short while only. All surplus water should drain off readily, as any soaking of long duration is a damage to the plants. As regards the actual methods of planting there are probably but three tools to consider: (1) The pointed stick or iron dipper; (2) the trowel; (3) the spade.

The underlying principles are the same in each case. We want first a perpendicular wall for our plant to rest against; ample depth for the roots to be suspended, and then a complete soil contact to exclude free air and to transmit soil moisture. How few operators accomplish these simple rules one can easily determine by a careful examination of work done. In the majority of cases we find poor work and only by constant application and exhortation can the operators be educated to the required standard. We have always held that the old method of planting strawberry plants with a spade covered the points perfectly.

To return to the actual methods of operation, we find that most persons strike a hole of insufficient depth; that they damage the straight side needed for the plant roots, thereby reducing soil contact; that they take a low hold on the plant with one hand, bringing their fingers into obstructing the view; that they tighten the plant near the surface instead of down at the roots, and that they attempt to firm from both sides. This latter is a grave mistake; the best and most rapid work is only possible by a deft, firming from one side, pushing the roots firmly against a straight wall. Last we might mention that planting with the fingers is out of the question, no matter how many may do so. In our apprentice days we were told that we were neither dogs nor chickens; that we should respect our bodies, and use tools for our work, which is a sane view.

If water is needed, it is well to arrange for a depression around each plant in field work, apply the water to the roots, and at once, or as soon after as possible, cover this depression with loose earth. Under trying conditions, plants should not go into field before 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and from then on the work should be pushed with all speed obtainable. Thus the plants will have the benefit of one night to get a partial hold before facing a day's sunshine, which may turn the case in our favor.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President;
John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

THE thirtieth anniversary of Arbor day in Massachusetts will be observed April 29.

RAISIN DAY will be celebrated in California by the San Joaquin Valley Counties Association April 28.

NEARLY 300,000 trees were planted by Chicago school children during the exercises attendant upon Arbor day this year.

ORLAND, CALIF.—The Smith-Lachenmyer Nursery Co. has been incorporated by J. H. Smith, J. J. Lachenmyer and J. J. Flaherty. The capital stock is $10,000.

GENEVA, N. Y.—Arthur Hammond, the oldest resident of this city, and for many years a prominent nurseryman in this section, died at his home here, April 4, aged 91 years.

VISITED CHICAGO: P. Berbee, representing W. J. Eldering & Son, Overveen, Holland; John Radder, of J. Blaauw & Co., Boskoop, Holland; William Satter, with Ebbinge & Van Groos, Boskoop, Holland.

AMONG the courses in the 1916 summer session of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, is included that of landscape design, an introduction to the study of landscape work, trees, shrubs, flowers and civic improvement. The session opens June 30 and closes August 25.

THREE bulletins recently issued by the University of California experiment station at Berkeley are entitled "Phenolic Insecticides and Fungicides," "A Spotting of Citrus Fruits Due to the Action of Oil Liberated from the Rind," and "Growing and Grafting Olive Seedlings."

Johnny Appleseed's Burial Place.

E. R. Smith, president of the Indiana Apple Show Commission, has prepared a most interesting history of Johnny Appleseed, whose grave in the David Archer graveyard, northeast of Fort Wayne, is soon to be marked with a monument to be erected by the Ohio and Indiana horticultural societies. Mr. Smith tells of Appleseed's death in the following language: "Forty-six years Johnny Appleseed traversed the forests and prairies of Ohio and Indiana caring for his trees, teaching farmers apple culture, and assisting them in planting and caring for orchards. And today it is a rare thing to find a farm in the country he traversed that does not have its orchard.

"He had several nurseries in northern Indiana. One day he heard that cattle had broken down the fences about one of them near Fort Wayne. He started there on foot to put it in repair. The weather was cold and disagreeable—snow was falling. At night he stopped at the home of Mr. Worth for shelter. It was readily granted to him. He declined a bed and prepared to read and pray. He read the chapter beginning, 'Blessed are the pure in heart,' then prayed for blessings upon all men and nations and for comfort for all who were crippled and distressed. He prayed for universal happiness and peace, then lay down to sleep. In the morning pneumonia had developed and a few days later he died as he had lived, at peace with all the world. This was in 1847. Mr. Worth and neighbors buried his body in the David Archer graveyard near Fort Wayne."

American Association of Nurserymen.

Nurserymen are waking up to the fact that this association is to become bigger, more aggressive in management, broader and more valuable hereafter. Under the new constitution, the usefulness of the association is to be greatly enhanced and the outlook for greater future success is very promising. Notwithstanding that the new schedule of terms for membership requires some to pay larger fees than hitherto, the registration for 1916 at this writing equals that of last year, with more than double the revenue. A few pessimists predicted failure, being unable to grasp the vision of the future possibilities in the line of achievement. But there is encouragement in the tone of the correspondence accompanying remittances of membership fees. One writes: "Have not done $10,000 of business the past year; I did before the war, and expect to do again; but I see no reason why an active member doing a business of less than that amount should get off with a smaller fee than an associate member." Another, a New Englander, writes: "I am in sympathy with the effort to raise the standard of membership and increase the value of the association, so that it will mean something," and he enclosed a check for $65 as his fee. Such declarations furnish illustrations of unselfish loyalty. The attendance at the forty-first annual convention at Milwaukee, Wis.,

June 28-30, ought to be a large and inspiring one. The new constitution will be further discussed after its first year of action, and the programme will include items of most vital interest to the trade. The management of Hotel Wisconsin have been liberal in their proposals, and members should write early for rooms.

Not many days remain in which to send in memberships, and, busy as members doubtless are, we urge them to take the few minutes necessary to attend to this item of business, and thus facilitate the work of preparing the badge book for publication. ROSES.YOU NEED THE BIG MONEY MAKER, CHAMP WEILAND.

In color the most exquisite pink ever seen in a rose. Here is a rose, Mr. Grower, that caused the critics to shake their heads, but it was an up-and-down nod instead of the doubtful negative shake.

DO YOU ASK WHY?

Because in this rose they found their ideal, in the qualities that tend to make a truly grand variety, namely, color, foliage, size, beauty and freedom of bloom.

Small wonder—for in this rose we find a color unequalled by any other "sport" creation of recent years. Take the tip-grow "Champ Weiland." Now ready, grafted plants, 100 for $35.00; 250 for $82.50; 500 for $150.00; 1,000 for $300.00.

BIGGEST EASTER TRADE ON RECORD.

The biggest Easter business known in the history of the trade in this city has been credited to 1916. The weather was pleasant, the florist shops thronged with purchasers from morning until night and when closing time came it showed a general cleaning up. Stock of all seasonable varieties, both in cut flowers and pot plants was plentiful and the prices were reasonable. Roses were in good condition, with American Beauties more plentiful. Carnations also showed improvement. Sweet peas and lilies were abundant and the quality was excellent. Made up plants and basket arrangements made a big hit. In pot plants, roses, hydrangeas in white, pink and blue, and spireas in white and pink were the leaders in popularity. Funeral work during the week was also very heavy.

NOTES.

Mr. Elberfield of the Alpha Floral Co. reports the best and biggest trade in the history of the firm and a complete sell out. Some very fancy American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses were noteworthy features and they sold fast. Pot plants and basket arrangements which attracted much attention by their novelty also were prime favorites.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. sold out to the last plant and flower and they had an enormous quantity of stock in anticipation of an extra heavy demand. One item of their sales record was the delivery of over 900 made-up baskets and novelties. This firm reports all previous records for Easter sales broken by a big margin.

W. J. Barnes kept his force on the jump both day and night. Church and wedding decorations were numerous and his sales of pot plants and basket arrangements were exceptionally large. The call for corsages was the heaviest in the history of this establishment. He reports the best trade he ever had.

Samuel Murray reports a big increase in sales over his trade a year ago. He sold out completely in all lines. The hydrangeas seen at his establishment were the finest in the city and the call for corsages was a big item in the total sales.

The G. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. sold an enormous quantity of both flowers and plants. Funeral work was especially brisk, in addition to the Easter rush and many out-of-town shipments of stock kept the force busy at all times.

T. J. Noll & Co. report the best Easter trade in the history of the firm. Both shipping trade as well as local was especially brisk and stock cleaned up daily. Their force worked day and night to keep up with orders.

Miss J. E. Murray reports that she was glad when it was all over. She and her force worked incessantly and her stock was cleaned up completely. Pot plants in different arrangements were a feature at her shop.

A. F. Barbe cleaned up in all lines and reports a record breaking business.

The Peterson Floral Co. is very well satisfied with sales both in cut flowers and plants. A heavy run on corsage work was a feature of the Easter trade here.

H. Kusik & Co. report the heaviest Easter business they ever handled. Stock cleaned up daily. Their supply of cut ferns during the week was 125,000.

Mrs. T. A. Mosely, of Kansas City, Kan., had pot plants for her leader and these, together with a big stock of cut flowers, sold in splendid shape.

Arthur Newell reports a complete sell-out. He had an enormous demand for corsage work and a very heavy call for plants and baskets.

The Rosery reports trade far beyond expectations. Rustic baskets and boxes in various styles were good sellers here.

E. J. B.

Oklahoma City.BEST EASTER TRADE ON RECORD.

Contrary to expectations, the fact of Easter being so late did not affect the volume of business detrimentally. Florists here say that it was the best Easter on record, and this applies to the sales of both cut flowers and plants. All of the best stock cleaned up very well indeed, and there was no perceptible change in prices from those obtained in previous years. The bedding out season is commencing now in good earnest and the call for flower beds and window box filling is unprecedented.

MEMORIAL DAY PREPARATIONS.

Bedding Plants.

The period between Easter and Memorial day being so short this year makes an extra busy time to get the stock in shape for the latter occasion.
The Easter plants have occupied a great deal of the bench space at the expense of the bedding stock, which has been crowded to some extent to give the extra space for the proper development of the plants for Easter.
Now that this stock is moved out, the bedding plants should receive attention just as quickly as the bench room becomes available. At this season of the year root bound plants harden up in a very little while and quickly get beyond control. It may seem an extra, unnecessary expense to shift along such plants as petunias, coleus, ageratum and sweet alyssum, now well advanced in 2¼ or 2½-inch pots, but if left another month in these same pots there would be a different story to tell about them.

The one very important point to consider regarding bedding plants is to keep them in a steady growing condition while in the greenhouse, hot bed or cold frame; then, when they are planted out they will go right ahead without any check. Customers expect a showy plant when planted out and good results from the very start. The gardeners at the cemetery greenhouses are now busy getting the stock in shape so as to be on time with it when needed for outside planting, and the steam-heated hot beds are about the most important part of these establishments at the present time. Alternantheras require a strong bottom heat to bring them along, and if they are not already in the hot beds, there must not be any delay in getting them there. Some gardeners follow the plan of planting their alternantheras out in the beds, but we have found that when the plants are taken up for outside planting that they suffer considerably, so prefer potting our plants into 2 or 2¼-inch pots and plunging the pots to their rims in the hot bed. The principal details of their care after this is to keep up a bottom heat of 80 degrees, pay close attention to the airing and watering, and when they have made a good growth, be on the watch to guard against any dampening from close damp conditions.

As soon as the plants have attained sufficient size they should be hardened off by giving more air and a lower bottom heat, and during bright warm days the sash can be removed to keep the plants compact and give them good color.

If the echeverias have not been cleaned up this spring they should be attended to and the side growths removed and transplanted in flats ready for planting out in frames later on.
These young side growths make the best stock for next season's work.

In the middle west it is not safe to do any planting out before May 20, and then only the very hardiest of stock, so the best place for the flats of echeveria until that time is on the greenhouse shelves where they will get plenty of light and air and held a little to the dry side. When given an over abundance of water the growth is too succulent and the plants get too big for fine work.

Geraniums.

The great need of the geraniums from this time on, is ample space for their proper development as sturdy, well flowered plants. The growth is very rapid, quickly becoming drawn and stalky when the plants are crowded together. It is necessary to ventilate freely and essential to pay close attention to the watering. On bright days, many of the plants will need going over morning and afternoon.
Well established 4-inch stock is what is needed for Memorial day and they should be now well on toward this condition; but when it is necessary to prepare a supply to meet a demand well on into the summer, smaller plants worked along make the better stock for later planting—3-inch plants, potted into 4's about May 15, will be in fine shape for planting out by June 15. Be sure and have the plants in a presentable condition at all times; this is the time of the year when a great many of the customers come to the greenhouses to select their plants, and it looks bad to have a lot of yellow or decayed leaves hanging over the plants—it gives them the appearance of being old stock.

Floral Arrangements by Students.
Pansy Corsage.

Pansies.

These should be in condition for sales from May 1 on. The fall transplanted stock is now in nice bloom, being very satisfactory for immediate planting. We find that every warm spring day, people are anxious to do some planting and to be able to get some nice pansy plants is very satisfying to them. There is a good sale for them just now. The January sown stock of pansies for sales the last of May and for later flowering should have been transplanted in the cold frame by this time and encouraged to come along into bloom in every possible way. These late sown plants are what we depend on for our Memorial day trade and are better than the fall transplanted and consequently larger plants.

Begonias.

The Vernon and Luminosa varieties of begonias are used largely for bedding, and while they are slow to get started early from seed, they make up for it from this time on. Do not allow them to become pot-bound and greenfly is one of their worst enemies, particularly while the plants are very small. Should the plants still be very small, they can be hurried a little in a mild hot bed.

Lobelia.

These two plants are called for largely, and in some sections of the country are very satisfactory, but with us they are only reliable during the early part of the season and about the only place we now use them is in mixed planting. As soon as they have attained the required size, they are better off plunged in a cold frame after May 1.

Hydrangeas.

A good supply of these should be arranged for there is a good call for nice flowered showy plants of every description, hydrangeas and roses being the most popular. Give them plenty of room to develop and attend to their wants to get them in on time.

Heliotrope.

There is a limited demand for plants of these, nicely in flower in 4-inch pots, nice plants that can be sold for 25 cents each. They need room for their proper development and must be kept free from insects.

Coleus.

When these plants are well established in 2¼-inch pots so that they can be shifted into 3-inch about May 1, they are in the best of condition. Give them a light soil of a sandy nature and attend to the potting of them right away which will give them nearly a month's more growth before it is time to plant them out. One very important point with these plants is not to allow them to become spindly, but nip the tips of the shoots out to keep them dwarf and stocky.

Cut Flowers.

Peonies are the popular flowers for Memorial day and there are none better than the home-grown stock if they can be brought in on time. As soon as the growth is well started, it is a good plan to spade into the beds a good dressing of well rotted manure and prevent the weeds from getting a start. There is also a very heavy demand for carnations at this time, so that it is well to take this fact into consideration when clearing out any plants to make room for the bedding stock. The greatest call with us is for the white and deep pink colors. We find Rosette one of the best for this season of the year and it is one of the last that we throw out. There is a good demand for cheap bouquets of mixed flowers, such as stocks, pansies, aquilegias or anything of the same character that can be sold cheap.

One of the great helps in handling Memorial day business is to have everything on hand, such as baskets, trowels, etc., and also to have the plants set well ahead so that the work will run smoothly in the very few days there is to do it in.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Roses of Fifty Years Ago.

To the florist and gardener, professional or amateur, the rose is always one of the most interesting features of horticulture. Contrasting the rose culture of today with that of 50 years ago, we may well point with pride to what has been accomplished. In 1866, a noted writer, who it is presumed was considered an authority of his time, on roses, mentioned them as follows: "Roses may be forced in the greenhouses, but not to advantage, because the conditions of success will be inconsistent with the requirements of many of the other plants. The process is best carried on in a small glass structure made for such purposes and called a 'forcing-pit.'"

When we consider the acres of glass that are now exclusively devoted to rose forcing, the above may cause a smile. He gives minute directions for the preparation of the pit, saying: "A pit 10 or 12 feet long and 8 or 10 feet wide will commonly be large enough."

These directions, it will be understood, were for forcing roses in pots. Great as the writer was, he could not foresee the future development of rose forcing. But it is not for us to criticize the methods of the "fathers" for they paved the way. There can be no doubt, that regardless of the methods employed, very fine pot roses were grown even earlier than the time mentioned above.

FORMAL ENTRANCE AND VIEW OF INTERIOR OF MACRORIE & MCLAREN'S NEW STORE, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
A Feature of the Opening Day was the Presentation by the Firm of a Corsage of Phalaenopsis to Each Patron.

At a flower show held in the Crystal Palace, London, England, in the 60's, many fine roses in pots were shown. There were, for instance, Madame Willermoz, seven feet high, with more than 100 expanded flowers; Souvenir de la Malmaison, with 30 expanded flowers, the largest more than five inches in diameter; Paul Perras, six feet high, with nearly 100 expanded flowers, Coupe D' Hebe, six feet high, covered with a mass of bloom.

In a list of new roses, said to be promising, published in 1866 we find the once noted Marechal Niel and the originator's description of it follows: "Flowers beautiful deep yellow, large, full and of globular form, very sweet, tea-scented, growth vigorous, the shoots well clothed with large shining leaves." If we may judge by numbers, the originators were even busier than they are today, for in this list there are over 50 named roses of the hybrid perpetual Bourbon and tea-scented varieties. Another list of roses that seem to have been generally cultivated contains approximately 500 names. General Jacqueminot was brought out by Rousselet, a Frenchman, in 1853. This rose has had a remarkably long run and is yet generally known to the present generation of florists and gardeners and grown by not a few, which is more than can be said of most of the other old varieties. No doubt some of our more modern red roses carry a strain of the old "Jack."

Gloire de Dijon was brought out by Jacolot in 1853. Of this rose, Dean Hole, an interesting writer, said: "Were I condemned to have but one rose for the rest of my life I should ask before leaving the dock to be presented with a strong plant of Gloire de Dijon."

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Floral Arrangements by Students.

The work of the class in horticulture, University of Illinois, Urbana, a feature of which is a course in floral decoration, is becoming more popular each year, and the increase in the attendance at the exhibitions where the work of the students is staged for public inspection, is marked. Mention was made in our last week's issue of the fourth annual exhibition, which was held in Floricultural hall, and which was attended by nearly 4,000 visitors. We present herewith illustrations of a few of the many interesting features staged, included in which were corsage bouquets in large variety, numerous basket arrangements, funeral designs, table decorations, artistic arrangement of cut blooms in vases and inviting assortments in boxes. One of the most pleasing displays was that of the wedding bouquets, which included everything from the bride's shower to the flower girl's basket. Miss Emily Dornier, of Lafayette, Ind., assisted the students in their work.

Edward J. Byam's Model Range.

The finishing touches are being put to the handsome new office building and salesroom and the greenhouse addition at the range of Edward J. Byam, Rome, N. Y. The latter contains 30,000 feet of glass, making this establishment one of the largest and best equipped in central New York, lighted throughout by electricity and heated by steam. The new salesroom is a model of elegance, being finished in fumed oak, with leather upholstered chairs and settees to match. The display case, which has a handsome glass front has a capacity of one ton of ice. Back of the salesroom is the private office of the proprietor, also equipped with attention to every detail of comfort and completeness.

Edward Byam started the business 15 years ago on a very modest scale, and is to be congratulated on the well deserved success that has crowned his efforts, and made his establishment an object of pride to the residents of Rome. At an informal opening of the new buildings, Sunday, April 16, the range was visited by more than 1,500 persons, who saw a wonderful display of Easter stock.
U. G.

After Easter.

Now, right now, while it is fresh in your mind, if you have not already done so, is the time to set down in black and white all about your 1916 Easter business, and plan for the largest season that is sure to be yours in 1917, if you profit by the experience of the period just past. You have it in your mind, all the details, big and little—the plants that sold best; the stock you should have had, but missed; how Smith disappointed you; what fine hydrangeas Brown sent in—they went off faster than you liked, as you had not nearly enough of them; Easter lilies sold well, particularly Brown's lot, which were just right in size and time. You can go over your stock, item by item, in this way; it is an open book to you now, but how about next February? Can you recall all these details; will they be as fresh in your mind as now? "Yes, I know you are right, and I will do this at the first opportunity." Well I can only say that if not done at once each day will make it more difficult, and next spring may see you trying to find out with a great deal of trouble, using up valuable time, that which you could now make into a perfect record with certainty and dispatch.

A successful retailer who has a chain of stores, relates that the day after Easter, a record of just how many plants of every kind were sold, was received, from each of his managers. In azaleas, there were so many $1, $1.50 and $2 plants, and so on all through the list; what were left was also noted, as well as the little details of management that were worth jotting down. These records are filed away, and as his business increases he can order with the greatest confidence and certainty for next season.

Many ideas come to a man while the business is on, that if he does not put down, are lost. A prominent hotel man carries a book in which he makes memos of the day's experiences, as they occur, which he says is of the greatest help. Many things that need repair; things here and there, out of order; stock of this or that running low. He always makes a point of checking up this book each night before he retires. How few florists carry a memorandum book. Many put their reminders on backs of envelopes and slips of paper and afterwards turn their clothes inside out in endeavors to find them. It is this habit of system and detail that spells success in business, particularly that of the retail florist, whose stock is so perishable, that all left unsold after a great demand like that just past, is almost a total loss.

The window box demand should now be in full height—push their sale, display them filled and empty. Mothers' day will soon be here. Plan to make it the best you have ever had. Get enthusiastic about it—prepare something novel in window decoration. The possibilities of this flower day are tremendous, for the surface has only been scratched. If the demand was for only one flower for each person, to be worn on that day, there would not be near enough to go around. Keep this in mind, boost the day, and interest others in the trade. Flowers for the cemetery should be one of the features. This is a great field—work it and reap the harvest.

New York Shops During Show Week.

Charles Thorley's "House of Flowers," 562 Fifth avenue, is one of the finest cut flower stores in the United States. Boxes of plants are on every ledge of the entire four-story building, from which they stand out in bold relief from the white walls. Low hedges of box are also set into the pavement below the show windows, which extend the entire length of both street fronts. Thorley's store is celebrated for its high class window decorations; they are at all times striking and often elaborate in the extreme. A feature at this time was a square log cabin style box with high trellis, all finished in blue enamel, and planted with yellow callas, some dozen or more plants, each with a flower. A gorgeous wide yellow ribbon was tied and festooned about this trellis—it was a stunning piece of work. Large hanging baskets of ferns and ivies filled the tops of the windows, with specimen foliage palms, ferns, rambler roses, immense marguerites, rhododendrons, etc., artistically arranged below. A vestibule entrance prepares one for the air of elegance which pervades the store. Long, marble-topped display or working tables are arranged against the wall on one side, and windows on the other. Down the center are tall specimen palms. On the display tables are seen choice flowering roses, heather, rhododendrons, etc., together with baskets of foliage and blooming plants. No plain pots are seen; all are covered with fresh green sheet moss. One beauty spot contained made up miniature colonial bouquets, artistic to a marked degree in their arrangement of colors, fancy ribboned papers and laces. Small fruit bouquets of lady apples, raisins and almonds, with papers and other fancy trimmings, looked novel and inviting. Fancy round boxes in keeping with the bouquets were a feature. Well-flowered blue clematis in pots, trained to lattice work, which was decorated with shaded blue ribbon, were unusual. The flower case, or treasure room, as it appeared to be from its massive oak door, to which was hanging a bunch of large keys, was indeed a room full of treasure. Customers are taken in here to make their selections. Artistically arranged on tables, pedestals and shelves is seen in quantity the cream of the flower market—everything from the smallest rose to the choicest orchid. At this time there was also stored for the moment a wonderful variety of made-up pieces of funeral work. A blanket of double violets was as even and smooth in appearance as the velvet to which the flowers were pinned. Wreaths in artistic combinations, many with dark galax ground; clusters in which Easter valley on handle. A large wreath of heather and spot of Sunrise roses was an effective piece. While there was no overcrowding, a generous fullness appeared in every design. It was all for one funeral at a price close to $2,000.

Thos. F. Galvin's, across the avenue from Thorley's, on the northwest corner, is a very pretty store, with glass on Fifth avenue and the intersecting street side, from ceiling to bottoms of show windows, which makes the store very light. The windows were decorated in lavender and yellow effect on green velvet. Rose floats filled with yellow lupines, yellow daisies, lavender iris, etc., with choice plants of heather, blue hydrangeas and lavender rhododendrons as a background. The upper part of the windows were filled with large baskets of luxuriant looking ivies. All this fitted in well with the blue and white decorations of the interior, which is beautifully fitted up. The ice box is unique with its latticed doors instead of the usual plate glass. Handsome specimen Easter plants, suitable for Fifth avenue buyers, were decked in the latest fashion, and in large assortment. Vari-colored rose floats were being featured, there being good sale for them this season.

Alexander McConnell's, at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-ninth street, is always noted for its luxuriant windows. The top was filled with ivy and fern baskets, while below was an array of choice specimen flowering plants with large vases of forsythias.

George E. M. Stumpp, one of the most enterprising of the younger generation, has in his handsome store examples of up-to-date retailing. The store is very light, with glass on Fifth avenue and also the entire depth on Fifty-eighth street. Blue rose floats with Hadley roses and violets were a feature of the front window, which, together with choice flowering plants, lilies were combined with roses, violets and other flowers; lily of the valley was also prominent; a cluster of Tausendschon rose sprays with lily of the valley was striking, as was a large basket of pink roses and lily of the valley with cattleyas and lily of the made an attractive display. In the basement store there was a bewildering collection of all the up-to-date accessories for the arrangement of cut flowers that have been introduced so fast the past year or two—rose floats, flower holders, birds, butterflies, bird sticks, vases of every form and material, and aquariums, all in endless variety. All these things are said to be in active demand, the newer styles of arranging flowers being much in favor with the public.

A. T. Bunyard, Madison avenue at Forty-eighth street, appears to be right in it all the time. Business has been exceptionally good this season. The windows were nicely decorated, vases of ranunculus and yellow lupines being beauty spots. Rose floats and all the newer novelties of like character are not much in evidence, Mr. Bunyard believing they interfere with the sale of cut flowers, and unless one is prepared to give them a separate department, it is better to let the china and fancy goods stores handle them.

There are many beautiful and important retail stores in this city and Brooklyn. Max Schling, the "live wire of Fifty-ninth street"; David Clark's Sons, J. H. Small & Sons, who are leaving Broadway for Madison avenue; M. A. Bowe, Charles A. Dards on Madison avenue, where there is always something interesting; C. C. Trepel, with his wonderful chain of stores; C. Sakelos, the Colonial Florist, who, with his four stores, is after the Harlem trade and the Bronx, are all very interesting places for the retail man, and which we hope to give a look over in the near future. Mothers' Day.

WHAT IT HAS DONE FOR THE TRADE.

The foundation of Mothers' day as a floral holiday has been of the greatest benefit in a financial way that the trade has ever experienced. Christmas, Easter and other popular floral holidays have grown gradually, but Mothers' day burst upon them like a bolt from a clear sky. Those first to hear of it, good practical men, thought it a fad. How could one woman, with only an idea, beautiful though it was, inaugurate a movement to spread all over the country as this has done? She had, however, the qualities that win in every crusade—faith, enthusiasm and indomitable pluck. The movement under her guidance has gone forward with increasing force year by year and is destined to become one of our greatest national holidays.

To go back to the beginning. Miss Jarvis selected as her badge, her mothers' favorite flower, a white carnation. She was presented with what she required for her first observance, almost without cost. The general average wholesale price for white carnations for the month of May for that year, 1907, was about 60 cents per hundred. The year following they rose to $1.50. Two years later the price returned the growers was $4. In 1915, with one Philadelphia dealer, the price averaged $7.70, and another large wholesaler returned $8.00 for all select flowers. This was for white carnations, but all colors advanced, and the market in every line was much benefited. Not only was this true for the production of the second week in May, but the returns for the entire month, have, since this movement became established, shown an increase of at least 100 per cent. S. S. Pennock, who made this latter statement, added that the carnation growers particularly, did not seem to realize the great benefit they were deriving from this movement, many of them, although given the opportunity, being very chary in contributing anything to help it along.

That the trade is about ready to recognize the work of Miss Jarvis in a substantial way, was shown, how-that city in popularizing the day through advertising, the business of Mothers' day had already equaled that of Christmas or Easter. They had tried to make popular, not only all flowers, but plants also, and have had ever, by an incident at the 1915 convention of the S. A. F. in San Francisco. The following from the question box: "What are we doing to increase the supply of carnations for Mothers' day?" resulting in one of the best discussions of the meeting.

Here are a few of the salient features. Chas. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., thought there should be found some way to increase the production for that day. A. T. De La Mare, New York, quoted Miss Jarvis as being utterly opposed to any other flower but the white carnation as the emblem for Mothers' day; other flowers could be used but the white carnation must always take first place. W. F. Gude urged the booming of Mothers' day in every possible way, advocating simply white flowers in memory of Mothers gone, and colored ones in honor of the living. "It works out fine in our city. I hope before long to see the demand for Mothers' day equal that of Christmas or Easter." Geo. W. Smith of Cleveland, O., said that owing to the co-operation of the trade in great success. An even larger business was now looked for at Mothers' day than at Easter. E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., advocated the plans of Messrs. Gude and Smith. He thought Mothers' day was a great opportunity for the trade, and was going to be better and better as time goes on. W. A. Kennedy, of Milwaukee, Wis., had found the two-color plan worked out so satisfactorily that all carnations sold almost equally well and they could not nearly supply the demand. C. P. Mueller sold baskets and plants when the supply of carnations were gone. He increased his supply of carnations about 400 per cent for that day by removing the terminal bud. J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb., after stating that the solution of the problem of the use of white or colored, or any flowers, was a question of good salesmanship, electrified the meeting with his reference to the founder of the day. "Have you ever thought about the lady who created Mothers' day? Would it not be advisable to give this lady five or ten thousand dollars to buy her a home, or honor her with a gift of this amount, just to show our appreciation. The florists have never had anything like Mothers' day before. We should certainly do something for the lady who originated the idea." George W. Smith again spoke of the great value of the trade, wholesalers, growers and retailers, working harmoniously together, booming the day and creating a demand for all kinds of flowers and plants. It was this concerted action that had been so successful in Cleveland. A. J. Burt said that the florists of Spokane, Wash., had found the trade of Mothers' day to equal that of Christmas. Co-operative work of the florists with the city beautiful movement and the Ad Club organizations had done wonders in advertising the day, until now it was with them the equal of any flower holiday of the year.

Secretary Young spoke of Miss Jarvis appearing before the New York Florists' Club. In speaking of the movement she had said that practically all her money had been spent in promoting the day. She felt she could not go any farther and thought the florists of the country should appreciate her work. C. W. Ward, Eureka, Calif., offered a resolution that each member of the S. A. F. and subsidiary societies be asked to donate $10 to be turned over to Miss Jarvis for the purposes of promoting the day. Mr. Hess thought each should give as he had felt benefited. He would give $50, and thought some could well afford to make it $500. E. G. Hill thought the executive committee should formulate a plan to provide a fitting testimonial. It was then left for Secretary Young to communicate with Miss Jarvis, get her ideas and report to the executive committee for their action. At the recent executive committee meeting in Philadelphia, this subject was taken up and plans are under way looking to the collection of a substantial sum to be presented to Miss Jarvis as a testimonial from the florists of the country for her great work in founding Mothers' day. K.

A Surfeit of Legislation.

During the past five years, congress and the state legislatures have passed about 70,000 bills and there have been 650 volumes of decisions of courts of last resort handed down within the same time. This, in itself, should be a sufficient reason for a desire to bring about greater care and scrutiny in passing new legislation. We are afflicted with a vast amount of unskilled and immature thinking which is reflected in the shape of legislation. —Senator John W. Weeks.

PLANT NOTES.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

The plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, both the young rooted stock and the older plants, will now begin to make active growth. There is still time to propagate much stock; many growers prefer the May rooted plants to those propagated earlier, for the plants start right off into growth at this time while those rooted earlier grow very slowly during the late winter and early spring months. The young shoots that break from the old plants make fine cuttings at this time and if the plants are in good health are just as good as the leaf cuttings made earlier. As soon as rooted they should be potted in a light, fibrous loam in 2¼-inch pots, and placed in a light, well ventilated house, but should be protected from all chilling draughts. They cannot be successfully grown in a stuffy-moist temperature and to have strong, healthy plants should not be forced in too warm a temperature. They will require a house in which the night temperature does not fall below 60° and should be given all the air possible without chilling during pleasant, bright days, carefully avoiding drafts. They will need to be watered carefully, for the roots are very fine and are growing slowly, and overwatering quickly shows in the growth of the plant. It is now a good time to procure young stock if the grower is not supplied, for those making a specialty of this plant will have the best of stock at this time.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

Small stock of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are now a necessity with all plantmen, for they are freely used in fern dishes and in plant baskets, being very satisfactory plants for main in the flats until they are strong enough to transplant. Do not cover the seed too deeply; an eighth of an inch of soil sifted over the seed is ample. The first potting must be carefully done, for they make a long tap root with very few small roots and the soil does not adhere to it, and in the young stage this root is easily broken. A warm house with plenty of moisture and careful watering with a slight shade is all they require after being potted. Overwatering will always cause the fronds to take a yellowish hue.

Gladiolus.

The gladioli that are being forced for spring blooming will soon begin to open their flowers, and to have good clean stock they will require attention. The spikes should first of all be kept erect, for if they get bent and crooked half their value is gone, and this will occur very quickly on the bright sunny days when the plant leans over, so they should be kept tied either to stakes or wires to prevent this. The spike should be cut when the first flower opens and placed in water and the other flowers opened in the office or store room. These flowers spot very quickly if water is sprinkled upon them in the greenhouses and at this season of the year syringing on bright days is a necessity or red spider is sure to obtain a foothold, and if these pests become once well established it is almost impossible to eradicate them. Considerable discussion is often heard as to whether the corms of gladioli forced are of any value another year. If the plant is not cut too far down on the stem and the corms are given an opportunity to thoroughly ripen there is no doubt but that the bulbs may be grown another year and good results obtained, but if the plant is cut off clear down to the ground the house culture. Fresh seed can now be obtained and the stock grown on through the summer, which will make fine stock for the next winter. The seed will germinate more readily and evenly if soaked in lukewarm water placed in a warm location for 24 hours before planting. Instead of sowing the seed broadcast it is better to sow them about three-quarters of an inch apart and they can then be allowed to recorm has no chance to make its full growth or to ripen and the corms will be practically worthless. Corms that are forced this year, and the spike cut so as to leave three or more leaves, if properly ripened can be planted outside another year and the following year first-class corms will be the result. The Gladiolus Colvillei can be forced year after year if grown properly.

Memorial Day.

With the Easter stock out of the way, there will be room available for the plants that have of necessity been crowded more closely together for the last few weeks, and the next great day before the grower is Memorial day. In those sections of the country where the late frosts are passed the bedding stock must be ready for planting out at that time, and the demand will be

EASTER TRADE.

The following reports from the trade in practically every section of the United States, supplementing those that appeared in these columns last week, leave no room for doubt as to the magnitude of the 1916 Easter trade, which in both cut flowers and plants was unquestionably the greatest in for plants to flower, for the customers will desire plants that will make a good showing by May 30, and the stock must be grown with that object in view to have a good sale. The geraniums and other blooming plants should be placed in their blooming pots, spaced out and given a good sunny location that they may be full of bloom by the last of May. It is next to impossible to sell plants that are not in flower at Memorial day. The production of flowers for that day must also receive prompt attention. Much of the floral work for Memorial day is what is called "cheap" work; that is, flowers that make a great show and are not expensive. So although there are many roses and carnations used, yet large quantities of the cheaper flowers are employed to fill in and make the sprays and bouquets larger. Early outdoor flowers and blooming shrubbery can be used, but in some sections these cannot be depended upon, so flowers must be grown in the houses. Stocks make a splendid flower for this purpose and should be benched at once. The plants should now be about three or four inches high and growing rapidly. Candytuft is grown in large quantities by some growers for Memorial day. Seedlings can be transplanted in early April and brought into flower the latter part of May. Spiraea, both as a pot plant and for cut flowers, are very useful at this time; six to eight weeks will bring them into flower at this season. There are other annuals that can be raised for Memorial day blooming, but the two mentioned are grown in largest quantities.

SCRANTON, PA.—A. L. Besancon & Co. are now located in their new store, a very good location at Adams avenue and Spruce street.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—Robert Newcomb, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, was a recent visitor, arriving from St. Louis, Mo. He reports good orders for all classes of stock.

many years. Instances where a substantial gain was not reported are rare, and in such cases the cause is readily traced to adverse conditions which could not be controlled.

FREDERICKTON, N. B.—All in all the Easter business this year was very satisfactory according to J. Bebbington & Son. Prices were about the same as in 1915, but sales were about 20 per cent better. The plant supply was ample. Lilies sold out completely; in fact, about the only item of which there was a surplus was hyacinths, but this condition was due to having a very heavy supply rather than to any fault in the demand. In cut flowers more carnations could have been disposed of had they been available. Daffodils and crimson roses also had a heavy call. Fine weather and a heavy demand for funeral work were also factors in the excellent trade during the week.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—One hundred thousand lily plants were a feature of the Easter trade while cut flowers glutted the market, but the lilies sold well both in plants and cut stock as did high class roses, according to the Redondo Floral Co., with the result that business this year was greater than the Easter season of 1915. Prices for pot plants were about the same but owing to the immense supply of cut flowers, they sold at figures below the average. Early in the week the outlook was not very promising, but brightened later and those who had stock of good quality had satisfactory sales.

TORONTO, ONT.—Easter trade for 1916, both as regards volume of business and prices, varied little from the corresponding period a year ago, according to Dunlop's. The supply of plants and cut flowers was ample. Good Friday was generally observed and with a heavy rain which kept customers away, business suffered on that day, but was otherwise fair. In plants, the big demand was for hydrangeas, lilac, rhododendrons, with a few calls for azaleas. Roses, carnations, lilac and sweet peas led in the cut flower class.

DENVER, COLO.—The Park Floral Co. in comparing the Easter trade of 1916 with that of last year reports an increase in volume of sales of 25 per cent. Prices were about the same. While there was no shortage in plants the supply cleaned up nicely. There was also a big demand for cut flowers, but carnations and American Beauties were rather short of requirements. There was a big call for corsages and novelties. Pot lilies sold unusually fast. Bulbous stock was soft and moved slowly.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Easter trade this year, while prices showed no advance, was 20 per cent better than that of 1915. The plant supply was ample with the exception of azaleas in small sizes. In cut flowers there was a marked scarcity of lily of the valley, violets and sweet peas and these items had to be substituted on. Rambler roses in corsages made a big hit and brought more money than the plants, as they brought $1 per dozen when arranged this way, according to Thos. C. Rogers.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The Saltford Flower Shop reports that Easter, 1916, has gone down on record as the greatest ever. Plenty of business, plenty of good stock and good delivery weather; the only thing lacking was a few more hours in each day to take care of things, as the 24 was not quite enough. Flowering plants were very plentiful and good. A noticeable thing was the number of transfer orders through the F. T. D. The new Western Union transfers of flowers was also used to quite an extent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Everything in bloom sold well, and notwithstanding the fact that department stores, markets, grocery stores and street fakirs handled large numbers of plants, the florists of this city had all they could do to properly handle the 1916 Easter business, according to Gude Bros. Co. The supply of plants was plentiful, but in the cut flower class there was a shortage of orchids, violets and lily of the valley. Prices were better than a year ago and sales amounted to 20 per cent more.

RALEIGH, N. C.—Sales were greater by at least one-third and prices were considerably higher than a year ago, according to J. L. O'Quinn & Co. The supply of plants was plentiful, with the exception of Easter lilies and azaleas, but the cut flower supply was short by at least one-third. Everything in flowers sold at sight, with lily of the valley, orchids and sweet peas as leaders. Weather conditions were all that could be desired. It was impossible to get enough stock to supply the demand.

BANGOR, ME.—Normal business for Easter, 1916, is reported by Adam Sekinger. Prices as compared with the corresponding period last year were a trifle higher on sweet peas, the same on roses, while on bulbous stock the figures were lower. Stocks of both plants and cut flowers were plentiful, with the exception of violets; no good stock of these were to be had. Pans of tulips were slow sellers. There was an immense call for corsages. Rose bushes of all kinds had a big sale.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A 50 per cent increase in sales as compared with the Easter trade of 1915, with prices about on a par, is reported by G. C. Dalglish. The supply of cut flowers and plants was plentiful, sweet peas being about the only scarce item, and with violets and roses, led in popularity in this class. Carnations were the least salable. There was a heavy demand for small plants of all kinds. Azaleas moved slowly. Cattleyas were scarce and sold at from $15 to $18 per dozen, wholesale.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—Easter sales this year were about 10 per cent better than those of a year ago, with prices about the same is the report of A. Whitcomb & Son. The supply of plants was equal to the demand and carnations were the only flowers that fell short in supply. Pot lilies were most popular, but all plants sold well. In the cut flower class tulips were least popular. The late date of Easter helped the sale of bedding plants, but the weather has been cold and wet.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—S. W. Coggan reports an Easter trade that broke all previous records. Prices were about the same as during the corresponding period last year, but there was an adequate supply of both plants and cut flowers and buying was brisk. In addition to a large number of spring flowering plants, 800 lily plants were included in the sales. In cut flowers among other items were 8,000 sweet peas, 4,000 roses, 3,000 carnations. Violets also sold well.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—Ideal weather and a plentiful supply of all kinds of stock had much to do with an increase of sales of about 25 per cent as compared with the Easter business of 1915 according to N. B. & C. E. Stover. Prices were about the same as usual for this occasion. Other florists as far as reported also sold out completely. The public seemed eager to buy and the demand was for the better plants. It was the best Easter business in several years.

COLUMBUS, O.—John R. Hellenenthal reports Easter business this year practically double that of 1915. Prices were much better and the supply in all lines was ample. Everything in plants of good quality found ready sale and in cut flowers the heavy call was for corsages. The markets were flooded with stock that sold at buyers' prices, and department stores sold roses at two for five cents. It seemed that the growers did not know the value of stock.

HARTFORD, CONN.—John Coombs estimates the 1916 Easter business at his establishment 25 per cent greater than that of a year ago. Average prices prevailed, and while the supply of plants was equal to requirements, cut flowers fell short of the demand. In this class everything sold, with violets and sweet peas most called for. Lilies and azaleas were favorites in the plant division. All of the local florists are well pleased with the Easter business this year.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Prices on the better grades of stock were higher than those of last year and business this year showed an increase of 15 per cent is the report of the Wm. Blackman Floral Co. The supply of both plants and cut flowers was not equal to the demand, and in the former everything that was good found a ready buyer. Corsages of all kinds were popular and cut lilies, roses and sweet peas were in strong demand.

PETERSBURG, VA.—Easter business this year showed an increase of 100 per cent over that of a year ago, according to Wm. S. Young. Prices were better and the supply of both cut flowers and plants were short of the demand. All flowering plants sold especially well. In cut flowers the best sellers were violets, lily of the valley, orchids, roses and Easter lilies. Mr. Young reports this is the double of any previous Easter period.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Clark Bros. report a slight increase in Easter sales as compared with those of 1915. Prices, too, were somewhat higher. Plants were in plentiful supply but nearly everything cleaned up. About the only short item in cut flowers was carnations. Corsage flowers were in brisk demand especially Cecile Brunner roses, sweet peas and lily of the valley. Easter lily plants as usual were the big factor.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—A late Easter, with outdoor roses and other flowers had its bad effect this year, although not as much as was expected, is the report of Tipton & Hurst. Trade showed a decrease of 15 per cent. Stock was plentiful and prices about as usual. Lily plants were the leaders, followed by spirea, hydrangeas and azaleas. In cut flowers, carnations, roses and lilies sold best and in the order named.

BERKELEY, CALIF.—Prices were about the same as last year and the volume of Easter business this year was about the same is the report of J. A. Carbone on the 1916 Easter trade. There was an oversupply, both in cut flowers and plants with lilies the favorites in both classes. Carnations were the least salable. Roses had a good call. Business was better than was expected, but many dealers were oversupplied.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—The best Easter trade in years is reported by George Rye, "Some Florist." There were more credit sales than usual, however, and a corresponding shrinkage in cash buying. Prices were about the same as a year ago and stock of all kinds was plentiful. In plants the call for lilies exceeded those of all other varieties, while in cut flowers everything had a good call. Spirea moved slowly.

FREMONT, NEB.—Greene's Greenhouses report Easter trade this year 25 per cent better than that of 1915, without any advance in prices. The supply of plants was short of the demand, but cut flowers were plentiful. In the former, Easter lilies, hyacinths, spirea, daffodils, tulips and geraniums sold best in the order named. Lilies, daffodils, roses, carnations, tulips and sweet peas were the cut flower favorites.

WORCESTER, MASS.—M. W. Reid reports an increase of 20 per cent in Easter sales, as compared with the corresponding period of 1915. Prices were about the same and the supply was ample, with the exception of violets. Plants sold exceptionally well, with the exception of bulbous stock. Carnations were the least salable. The weather was very unseasonable, Friday and Saturday being wet and cold.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS.—A. F. T. Lauritzen reports the 1916 Easter trade was 25 per cent better than that of last year, with prices about the same. Stock in all lines was plentiful and fully equal to all demands. In plants lilies were the favorite, with azaleas and rambler roses next in popularity. In cut stock all flowers sold equally well. Mr. Lauritzen opened a downtown store shortly before Easter.

SPOKANE, WASH.—With prices on a par with those of Easter, 1915, sales at Hoyt Bros.' establishment showed an increase of 10 per cent this year. The supply of cut flowers was equal to requirements, but a shortage of lily plants held down the aggregate sales, as they led in demand. Daffodils moved slowly. In spite of cold weather, corsage flowers were leaders. Carnations were least called for.

POMONA, CALIF.—A small increase in sales for Easter as compared with the same period of 1915 is reported by A. Roessner. Prices varied little if any and stocks, both in cut flowers and plants, were equal to the demand. There was not much call for plants, the outdoor flowers being a factor that hurts sales in this line. In cut flowers, roses were slow sellers, the best demand being for carnations.

OGDEN, UTAH.—F. J. Hendershot & Son report an exceptionally good Easter trade this year. Prices were no higher than those of 1915, but the volume of business was double that of a year ago. The supply of cut flowers was ample, but more plants could have been disposed of had they been available. Easter lilies as usual were the strong favorites both in plants and cut blooms.

ROCKVILLE, IND.—A splendid Easter trade is reported by H. B. Brubeck, the volume of business being about 10 per cent greater than that of 1915. Prices were a little better. In cut flowers roses were short of requirements and plants were not in adequate supply. Spring trade has been backward, but indications point to improvement at this time.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—With a wet, disagreeable day preceding Easter, Fred

E. Avery reports business was greater by 20 per cent than a year ago, with no advance in prices. Plants were in good supply, with lilies in strong demand. There was a good call for all bulbous stock. In cut flowers sweet peas, carnations and roses were the favorites.

ATLANTIC, IA.—The Atlantic Greenhouses report 1916 Easter sales more than one-third better than those of the corresponding period last year. Prices were normal, and the supply in all lines was plentiful. In plants, bulbous varieties sold best, while the cut flower leaders were carnations, lilies and daffodils. Roses were least salable.

FARGO, N. D.—The volume of business and range of prices differed little from the corresponding period of 1915, is the report of the Shotwell Floral Co., regarding the Easter trade this year. In the plant class rambler roses, small azaleas, lilies and hydrangeas sold well, and there was a brisk demand for cut blooms.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Abele Bros. report business during the Easter period this year 15 per cent better than that of 1915. There was little if any difference in prices. Flowering plants were in heavy demand and the supply was plentiful. Cut flowers, however, were short of requirements. Lilies were the best sellers.

SANTA CRUZ, CALIF.—The Easter trade of 1916 was a little less than that of a year ago, as reported by W. E. King. Prices were no higher and the supply of both cut flowers and plants was equal to all demands. All plants sold well and in cut flowers the heavy call was for lilies.

GREELEY, COLO.—The Gardner Floral Co. reports an increase in sales this year of about 15 per cent as compared with the Easter trade of 1915. The usual prices prevailed and there was a plentiful supply of stock in all lines. An unusually good call for pot plants was noticeable.

CLEVELAND, O.—A. Graham & Son had a splendid demand for good stock of all kinds. The supply of both cut flowers and plants was adequate, and while prices were about the same as last year, this firm's 1916 Easter business showed a 10 per cent gain in total sales.

The Late Mrs. D. Willis James.

Mrs. Ellen Stebbins Curtiss James, better known as Mrs. D. Willis James, died at her New York City home, 40 East 39th street, April 28, in her eighty-third year. She was the widow of D. Willis James, who died in 1907, leaving a great estate. During his lifetime, Mr. James was active in charity and every other good work, and after his death Mrs. James carried it forward. She gave $180,000 to the Old First Presbyterian church of New York, and her hand was always open to any worthy charity. She was a liberal patron of horticulture and her country estate at Madison, N. J., which has long been superintended by William H. Duckham, is one of the finest places in the country. She is survived by one son, A. C. James.

Springfield, Ill.

A big floral pageant is being arranged as one of the features of the programme of the annual convention of the Travelers' Protective Association, which will be held in this city, May 5-6. Cash prizes will be offered for the best eight decorated automobiles and it is anticipated that there will be many beautiful displays. The pageant will be filmed by the Hearst-Vitagraph Co. of Chicago.

Boston:

TRADE IS VERY SATISFACTORY.

Business during the past week has been very satisfactory in nearly every line. There has been more activity than has been seen for some time and prices have held up very well. Roses found a good market at from $2 to $16 per 100 for the average. Good Ophelia and Hadley sold in some cases for $2.50 per dozen. American Beauties are in moderate supply and prices ranged from $16 to $25 per 100. Carnations went very well, light colors especially at $3 and $4 per 100. There is a large supply of yellow marguerites coming to Boston, but prices seem to hold very well, as there was a good call for them for May day trade. Prices ran from 75 cents per 100 to $4 per 100. Sweet peas were in good demand the entire week. Standard quality flowers brought from $1 to $2 per 100. Cut Easter lilies are plentiful and find very little demand. Bulbous stock sells well, good Victorias bringing $2 and $3 per 100. There is a good supply of Spanish iris, and prices have been lower than average.

NOTES.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, is cutting a large crop of his high quality carnations and ships about 10,000 per week at present. He grows Ward extensively and finds it to be a very profitable variety. He will plant heavily of Cottage Maid this coming season.

Some of the finest sweet peas seen in the city are those grown by A. E. Briggs, of Dighton, Mass. Some of the flowers had stems 20 inches in length.

Mrs. Maurice Hambro, wife of the well known salesman of Wm. Sim, has recovered from a serious operation and is on the road to recovery.

Larkin Chandler, of Tewkesbury, is confined to his home with a light attack of typhoid fever.

Elliot Filson, salesman for Pierce Bros., will be married May 16, 1916.

EXCELLENT BUSINESS FOLLOWS EASTER.

Easter is past and practically forgotten, but the trade that followed with the opening of the stores Monday morning was surprisingly good, and without the extra help, all hands felt the pressure and at present writing there is no signs of diminishing. Every social event that could be crowded into one week was on the schedule. Stock was good and looked better than it did during Easter week and prices were very satisfactory. American Beauties sold at from $1.50 to $5, while other roses, such as the Killarneys, Radiance, Sunburst, Hadley, Richmond, Shawyer, Ward and Ophelia, were priced at from $3 to $12 per 100. Carnations, which are extra good, sold at from $2 to $3.

NOTES.

Marche & Co. are still cutting some extra fine jonquils which find a ready market. This firm will go into the growing end of the business on a larger scale next season. They expect to be able to supply the local trade with some quality stock.

The stock of W. Clark & Son is always in demand. They are sending in some of the finest hydrangeas seen in this city.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. are handling some extra fine sweet peas. They also have gladioli, which find ready sale.

Gude Bros. Co. are cutting some very fine American Beauty and Radiance roses.

EUONYMUS LATIFOLIUS in variety and the golden privet are good window box subjects.

SUBURBAN grocers in the vicinity of Chicago are carrying consigned lots of shrubbery that they are able to retail at 15 cents.

It is always bad policy to risk tender stock outdoors in advance of the usual time, without adequate facilities for protection.

COLLECTIONS in the trade are slow for this time of the year. The Easter business does not seem to have placed all on easy street.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.—No location has been chosen for the Fifth National Flower Show, which, under present arrangements, should take place in 1918, but Cleveland has begun preparations for it in the $2,500,000 bond issue decided upon last month for a municipal exposition building.

Western Union Popularizes Mothers' Day.

The efforts of the florists to popularize Mothers' day sink into insignificance when compared with the publicity work of the Western Union Telegraph Company. The possibilities of the day were taken up by its commercial department, and after due consideration, an amount of $20,000 was appropriated to impress upon the public the importance of the day. Window cards in two sizes, one 11x14, contains a line drawing of two carnations with the inscription, "The Flower of the Day is the White Carnation," with Mothers' day in large letters and date; also, an invitation to send her a message of affectionate greeting by the Western Union Telegraph Company. The official card of the association, 12x18 inches, without the name of company is the other.

A small leaflet with some 25 appropriately worded messages, also special Mothers' day sending and receiving telegraph blanks with outline cuts of carnations surrounding the inscription, "Mothers' day," will be found in every one of 15,000 offices of the company throughout this country. The express charges alone on the delivery of this matter is something over $4,000. The company will also deliver flowers with the message if desired.

These will be the greatest boosts Mothers' day has ever had, and its influence should certainly have a favorable effect on the demand for flowers. In every community the trade should get together and be prepared to help by their co-operation, in advertising, window decorations, and in every way do what they can to exploit the day.

Gardeners' Essay Contest Winners.

The gardeners' essay contest of the National Association of Gardeners for ex-President Everitt's gold prizes was recently decided by Edwin Jenkins, Arthur Smith, William Downs, William J. Stewart and J. Harrison Dick, the judges, as follows:

Class I—Subject, "Horticulture as a Profession from the Standpoint of a Gardener"; awarded to "Spero meliora," John Johnson, Southampton, N. Y.

Class II—Subject, "The Proper Grouping and Culture of Trees, Shrubs, Perennials and Annual Bedding Plants in the Ornamentation of Private Grounds." No award was made by the judges as the papers submitted were not of sufficient merit to warrant an award.

Class III—Subject, "Preparation of Ground for, and General Treatment of Hardy Herbaceous Perennials," awarded to "Filius Terræ," H. E. Dorner, Northampton, Mass.

Class IV—Subject, "A Year's Vegetable Supply," awarded to "Ian," John S. Doig, Southborough, Mass.

The essay contest for President Craig's prizes of $25, $15 and $10 for the best three papers on any horticultural subject submitted by assistant gardeners is now under way. The contest will close November 1, and the judges' decision will be rendered at the next convention of the association, which will be held in December. The papers are limited to 2,500 words and must be signed with a nom de plume and forwarded to William H. Waite, chairman of the committee on essays and horticultural instruction, Box 290, Madison, N. J. The contestant, too, must send his full name and address enclosed in an envelope with his nom de plume written plainly on the outside of the envelope to the secretary, M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.

As considerable time has been allotted to prepare the essays it is hoped that the number of contestants will be many.

SHORTAGE OF HELP HAMPERS GROWERS.

The club meeting Tuesday evening, April 25, was well attended. President Frank Danzer occupied the chair and 22 other members participated actively in the proceedings. A review of Easter trade was the all-absorbing topic, and the unanimity of opinion of all dealers present left no doubt in the mind of any one that the Easter season of 1916 was the most successful and satisfactory in all respects ever before experienced by the local trade. An important factor contributing to this great result was, in the opinion of many, the most excellent quality of all the stock offered in both cut flowers and plants, and the volume of trade was increased much because the buying commenced earlier than usual in the week and continuously increased as the big day of all approached, when the facilities of all were taxed to the utmost.

It developed at the meeting by the reports of several of the big growers, that the question of help for greenhouse work is already very serious and promises to be more so. The unparalleled industrial success this city is enjoying has resulted in wages for ordinary help unheard of before and more than doubling the highest wages a florist feels able to pay. As new hands are employed by the florists they, too, soon learn of the higher wages offered by the factories and abruptly leave the greenhouse. While this condition lasts, no grower here will add a foot of glass to his establishment and many are now regretting their recent additions, because of labor conditions only. Trade the past week was very good and all left-over stock of plants was easily disposed of, while funeral work of extraordinary volume kept all busy and used all the supply of cut flowers, excepting lilies, of which there is still a big stock.

J. F. S.

Salt Lake City.

EASTER TRADE SWEEPS MARKET CLEAN.

The local florists made a thorough clean-up on Easter stock, and while there were more Easter lilies on hand than ever before, all sold at prices a shade lower than in former years. Some of the trade started the price low fearing a glut, but the shortage of plants of other varieties, kept the demand for lilies firm.

NOTES.

The Miller Floral Co., of Farmington, recently secured eight acres of land adjoining its present holdings and will erect three large houses this summer. This concern has a very large range for this section of the country and when they commenced business, many florists predicted that they were going in on a larger scale than the market justified, but this has proven to be a mistake as this establishment has not been able to fill all of its orders this season, which is saying much considering the immense quantity of stock that they have turned out.

Rose bushes are becoming very popular in this city, the residents having discovered that nearly all of the tea and ever-blooming varieties will thrive in this climate without protection. The city parks have planted several thousand bushes of the best varieties this spring, the majority of them being furnished by Law's Nurseries. Many of the hybrid perpetuals are being grubbed out and replaced with hybrid teas.

Olaf Lindgren, of Bountiful, is adding five new houses of Moninger construction. This will give him quite a large carnation range. He has been very successful with his carnations this season, but he was unable to supply the heavy demand.

The Huddart Floral Co. had the finest display of plants ever sent into this city, some very fine specimens coming from California, which attracted much attention in this firm's windows.

The greenhouses are now exceptionally well stocked with bedding plants and the trade is preparing for the next big rush—Memorial day.

The Easter weather was more like June than April—ideal for deliveries.

LILY OVERSUPPLY BUT TRADE GOOD.

While trade conditions have been generally satisfactory for some time, they were never better than at present, and prices hold firm. Easter trade was good with the exception that the lily situation caused some dissatisfaction as there was an oversupply due to heavy shipments from the outside in addition to the stock furnished by the local growers. As a result the fear of a surplus caused a cutting of prices, especially in the department stores, where Easter lilies were quoted as low as nine cents per bud and bloom. Good stock was in good demand, however, and the finest easily sold at 25 cents per flower. Azaleas, hydrangeas and rhododendrons were slow sellers. Cut flowers were not as much in demand as they were expected to be, but they were plentiful. Basket arrangements sold well, especially those priced from $4 to $10. Plants priced at from $1 to $2 had the best call.

NOTES.

Hess & Swoboda report a heavy Easter trade. It was an eleventh hour rush, however, otherwise it would have been still better, as lack of room prevented handling the business. Geranium Easter Greeting was a feature at this store and sold well. Excellent roses were also seen in quantities, those ranging in price from $1.50 to $3 having excellent sale.

The outlook for Mothers' day business is very good. Bedding plants are already being ordered in large numbers, and indications are that everything will sell well and at good prices on that day.

F. Berlinghoff, of the Hess & Swoboda staff, is confined to the hospital with pneumonia.

Dolph Gude, of Washington, D. C., has been at the Hess & Swoboda store since April 15.

Milwaukee, Wis.

DEMAND GREATER THAN SUPPLY.

Business for the week following Easter was very satisfactory in every respect. The supply in most lines was good, but the demand better. This can no doubt be attributed to social functions, which were at a standstill during Lent, and a noticeable increase in funeral work. But in roses and carnations, the prices were firm. Towards the end of the week the weather was warm, but a cold, wet Sunday had a tendency to hold stock back. Some very long and fancy snapdragon is reaching this market, but does not move as readily as the shorter grade.

NOTES.

The local press, April 26, announced the engagement of Frank A. Sylvester to Miss Alpheia Anchuetz. Frank is the youngest son of Otto Sylvester, Sr., of Oconomowoc, and is connected with the J. M. Fox & Son, Inc., cut flower department.

At the dancing party given at the Auditorium, April 27, complimentary to the workers at the recent charity bazaar, many corsage bouquets were in evidence. More than 7,000 people attended.

May 1, and the writer has not heard of any carnation grower in this vicinity who has moved any stock into the field. The season is fully two weeks behind last year.

DAYTON, O.—The Miami Floral Co. has purchased 10 acres of land adjacent to its present establishment and will build additional houses and add to its area for outdoor cultivation of plants.

MAY FLOWER SHOW.

The present year appears to be one of more than usual interest in horticultural exhibitions. The success of the two recent flower shows in Philadelphia and New York shows this very emphatically. The next important horticultural event will be the May flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which is to be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, May 10-14.

The management of the society is making active preparations for this event and no effort is being spared to make the exhibition a notable success in every way. In addition to the liberal appropriation for premiums made by the society many special prizes are offered by a number of prominent and influential members which will make this show the most brilliant and comprehensive in recent years. The best products of many of the noted private collections in the vicinity of Boston will be offered to public view, as well as the specialties of the most famous growers of plants and flowers in this and other states. Notable features will be the collections of orchids, rhododendrons, roses, and artistic displays of flowering and foliage plants. A class for miniature Japanese gardens will be one of the novelties of this exhibition. The show will open Wednesday, May 10, at noon, continuing through Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., and Sunday from 1 to 10 p. m. The Boston orchestra will furnish music every afternoon and evening from 3 to 5 and from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

Commercial growers, especially, will find this exhibition an unusual opportunity to call public attention to the products of their greenhouses and nurseries. The premium list, which amounts to upwards of $5,000, will be sent on application to the secretary. Horticultural hall, Boston, and special trade tickets will be sold in lots of 25 or more at half the admission fee.

WM. P. RICH, Sec'y.

Providence, R. I.

Business during the week following the Easter rush was very quiet, but a good demand was noted Saturday and Sunday. Corsages of sweet peas and other small flowers had an exceptionally good call. Floral work keeps up well and with the sprinkling of wedding orders the trade seems to be satisfied with conditions.

TRADE SINCE EASTER HAS BEEN GOOD.

Trade since Easter has been good and stock of all kinds has cleaned up nicely each day at very satisfactory figures. Everyone expected that there would be very little doing after Easter but the lull that usually follows a holiday did not occur this year and the first real quiet day that was experienced was May 1, when orders might have been more plentiful. Prices have held firm, especially on carnations and everyone seems to be pretty well satisfied and no complaints are heard on any side. Orchids are scarce and command high prices. Lily of the valley is in good demand and while there is plenty on hand to fill all orders, there is just about enough to go around. Some, especially fine gardenias are being offered and clean up readily each day at good prices. Roses are in good supply, especially Killarney and White Killarney, but the latter are not as plentiful as they have been. There are now plenty of American Beauty roses to go around, but no great surplus when the stores close at night. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are moving nicely and are bringing good prices. Lilies are seen in large numbers at several of the stores and can be had in large lots at very reasonable cost. Carnations are none too plentiful and are bringing high prices with the exception of Enchantress, which have not sold any too well in this market all season. Sweet peas have been very plentiful all week, but clean up nicely each day at good prices, especially in the better grades. Violets are practically off the market. Spanish iris and gladioli are seen in larger numbers and there are plenty of snapdragons to go around. Single and double stocks, lupines, pansies, daisies, candytuft, calendulas, lilac, anemones, sweet alyssum, swainsonas, feverfew, mignonette, Narcissus poeticus, jonquils, daffodils, tulips and trailing arbutus are among the offerings and a few early southern peonies made their appearance this week. Orders are numerous for carnations for Mothers' day and from present indications it appears as if they will be very scarce again this season and command higher prices than ever before. Stock in general will be none too plentiful for Mothers' day and those who have not yet placed their orders had better do so at once. Play safe and order early.

NOTES.

D. F. Simonds and J. R. Butzow, proprietors of the Ogden Floral Co., 1917 West Harrison street, enjoyed a splendid Easter trade and sold practically twice as much stock as last year. Everything sold well and a general cleanup was experienced. Mr. Simonds does the buying in the local market and pays cash for everything that he gets, not because he is obliged to, but just because he wants to. Besides being a crackerjack of a florist Mr. Simonds has a reputation for being quite a fisherman and is thinking real seriously of joining the Piker's Club, of which N. J. Wiator is president and John Sinner is secretary.

Fred Lautenschlager is back from Philadelphia and New York, where he represented Kroeschell Bros. Co. at the two big recent flower shows. He booked several nice orders for Kroeschell boilers, while he was in the east, and reports having had both a delightful and profitable trip.

Hoerber Bros. are having a good call for Mrs. Francis King gladioli, which are grown in their own greenhouses at Des Plaines and compare most favorably in quality with the very fancy snapdragons that they have been offering all season.

H. C. Wullbrandt, proprietor of the Globe Greenhouses, 5315 West Madison street, had a splendid Easter trade and his sales were the largest since he has been in business, which is a trifle over 17 years.

Buffalo Bill Kinley, who has been in the employ of Adam Zender for the past 10 years, has taken a position as foreman at the George Reinberg greenhouses, starting May 1.

Kyle & Foerster received a shipment of southern peonies April 29, which, to the writer's knowledge, were the first to reach this market this season.

The retail store at 6 East Monroe street, known as the Flower Market closed its doors the past week.

Good Supply of White, Pink and Red.

While we will have a good supply of Carnations, there will not be enough flowers to supply the demand so push roses on that day. Poehlmann Bros. Co. is receiving a large number of inquiries for stock for Mothers' day and according to Otto W. Frese, the demand will be principally for carnations again, particularly white, so he is trying to figure out just how he is going to supply all of the customers when there is never enough on this occasion to go around. Tony Gabel and his assistants are busy planting carnations out in the field at Morton Grove and now have the job pretty well under way. Adolph Poehlmann says that Poehlmann Bros. Co. have already booked one order for 40,000 rose plants for next season's delivery. This firm will have a good supply of White Killarney for Mothers' day, which will come in handy after the supply of carnations is exhausted.

N. P. Miller, with Miller & Musser, had a large landscape job for the Schultze Baking Co., at Kenilworth this week. Mr. Miller thinks that O. J. Friedman's idea of holding the annual flower show for the benefit of the Home of the Destitute Crippled Children along the lines suggested in the last issue of THE AMERICAN FLORIST is a very good one and should be given careful consideration. Several others in the trade think likewise and it is very likely that the matter will be brought up at the next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club.

Wietor Bros. are nearly through setting their carnations out in the field and will start planting stock in the greenhouses right after Mothers' day. N. J. Wietor says that they plant about two-thirds of their carnation plants direct in the benches and have always obtained very satisfactory results from the stock benched in this manner. They are cutting a fine supply of carnations and roses this week and will have good crops of both for Mothers' day.

WANTED--PEONIES--WANTED

M. C. GUNTERBERG, 158 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

At A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s store roses and carnations are arriving in large quantities and the outlook for a large supply of both for Mothers' day is an assured fact. Mr. Pyfer had better be careful or he will be losing his secretary, for the writer saw one of the popular young North Clark street florists passing over a dandy bunch of extra choice long stemmed American Beauty roses to her the other day as she was going home from work. Nuff sed.

Fred Woick, 4803 South Robey street, has an elegant lot of spring stock on hand and his geraniums this year are looking unusually fine. He had a dandy Easter trade and cleaned up completely in everything that he had to offer, especially in lilies, which were the best that he produced in many years.

H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that the prospects are very good for large peony crops but he does not look for any oversupply. His firm always handles a large supply of peonies every season and will be on deck as usual this year with a heavy supply for Memorial day.

Bassett & Washburn will be on deck again this year for Mothers' day with a good supply of choice stock and is already booking orders for them. Sweet peas are still seen in large numbers at this store and clean up at good prices every day owing to their splendid quality.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are handling a fine supply of roses and carnations at their store and are now booking orders for Mothers' day. H. C. Blewitt, the well-known sweet pea specialist of Des Plaines, is now marketing his stock at this house.

Erne & Klingel have had several shipments of trailing arbutus the past week, which cleaned up nicely at good prices. This firm is featuring a fine supply of all seasonable flowers and is all ready to handle a brisk Mothers' day trade.

J. A. Sikuta, 3947 West Twelfth street, had a rattling good Easter trade and sold out completely in cut flowers and plants early on the Saturday before and had to make a special trip to the wholesale market to get stock to fill his late orders with.

John Mangel has incorporated his business in the Palmer House block for $5,000 under the name of Mangel & Co. The officers of the new concern are John Mangel, president, John Canger, vice-president and Mrs. John Mangel, treasurer.

M. C. Gunterberg will handle an extra supply of peonies this season if she can make satisfactory arrangements with some of the growers.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are showing a complete line of baskets at their ever growing wholesale and cut flower and supply house.

A. E. Hunt & Co. are cutting a fine grade of poppies in addition to a nice selection of other miscellaneous novelties.

Theodore Meyer, of Waukegan, reports a splendid season with a banner Easter trade.

Louis Wittbold says that trade in all the departments of the George Wittbold Co.'s business has been very heavy the past season and that the outlook for the next few months is very encouraging. He made a trip to Niles Center last Sunday, April 30, to inspect the two new Garland houses that Fred Stielow is erecting and found the work well along, the houses and gutters being already up. The trusses were all galvanized to avoid any possible rusting along the lines suggested by Mr. Wittbold, who is president of the Garland Manufacturing Company.

Fritz Bahr had all the orders that he could conveniently handle at Easter at his Highland Park store and says that nowadays the florist has to step pretty lively to keep pace with the times. Mr. Bahr is more than pleased with the new Buchbinder refrigerator that he installed recently and says that Buchbinder Bros. certainly know their business when it comes to manufacturing florists' ice boxes.

Fred Ottenbacher, with Zech & Mann, is serving on the jury for two weeks, so Allie Zech and the rest of the force are doing the extra work while he is absent from the store. Allie Zech made a trip to Maywood this week, where he inspected both the W. H. Amling and the A. F. Amling Co.'s greenhouses to get a line on the stock for Mothers' day.

Stollery Bros. had a splendid Easter trade at their Wilson avenue store and sold out in all lines at an early hour. Everything in plants sold well, especially tulips in pots and pans and rambler roses in rustic boxes. Begonia Luminosa sold like hot cakes and there was a brisk demand for rhododendron lilies and azaleas.

FLOWERS OF QUALITY

Roswell Schupp, with J. A. Budlong, celebrated his twenty-first birthday Monday, May 1, on which date he was promoted to a higher position and is now Fred Price's right-hand assistant on the floor. Henry Zwettler, formerly with the Great Northern Express Co., has accepted a position as shipping clerk with the Budlong firm.

Louis Finnerman, one of Percy Jones' efficient salesmen, and Miss Doris Clamage, a west side society favorite, are engaged to be married, and it is understood that the wedding will take place June 22. Morris Grossberg, another one of the Percy Jones' salesmen, has been on the sick list for over a week.

Peter Reinberg's store employees, headed by Felix Reichling and Miss Marguerite Kane McNulty, were the guests of Mr. Reinberg at Ringling Bros.' circus Saturday evening, April 29. L. Hoeckner, Herbert Hansen, Peter Baumann, Gale Banning and Frank Mateck were included in the party.

J. J. Beneke, of St. Louis, Mo., spent several days here this week on business, leaving Wednesday evening, May 4, to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the St. Louis, 1917, spring flower show, to be held March 15-18.

Philip L. McKee says that the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Company has just received an order from W. E. Alexander, of Parkersburg, West Virginia, for a range of three new houses.

The John Kruchten Co. reports a brisk demand for fancy gardenias, which they are handling in quantity and are considered good property, especially during the present scarcity of orchids.

Mrs. Ennis, of Milwaukee, Wis., was a visitor in the wholesale market this week. She reports a fine Easter trade at both her old stand and the new store at Fifth street and Grand avenue.

Chas. W. McCauley did not make his regular visit to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association's store this week, because he is confined to his home with a severe cold.

The two new Garland greenhouses, 28x150 feet each, that George Hoeffe, formerly of Norby & Hoeffe, is erecting at Des Plaines, will be completed this week.

C. Clemenson, 7801 South Shore avenue, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his daughter, Thora, whose death occurred last week.

John F. Farrell, 4645 South State street, reports a fine Easter trade, with a very good demand for plants, particularly azaleas and lilies.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports liberal re-fill orders from seedsmen on all spring bulbs for counter trade, gladioli, tuberose, caladiums, etc.

Sinner Bros. are showing a nice supply of well grown Boston ferns at their wholesale store in addition to their regular line of cut flowers.

Joseph Ziska & Sons report business as very good and are looking forward toward a brisk Mothers' day and Memorial day trade.

Miss Charlotte Paradise, with A. L. Vaughan & Co., visited with friends at Milwaukee, Wis., April 29-30.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Morrison hotel, Thursday evening, May 4, at 8 o'clock.

LILY SALES BULK OF EASTER BUSINESS.

Summing up all accounts of Easter trade in this city, we may say that trade was good. There were thousands of lilies sold; in fact, lilies supplied the bulk of the trade. As a rule they were of good quality, too, so that they were delivered in good shape. They sold singly, in pots and in made-up baskets, priced at from 50 cents each, up, the majority of sales being of the medium and lower priced plants. The sale of cut flowers was, generally speaking, comparatively poor, roses leading, inasmuch as they were plentiful and of good quality. There were no gladioli to speak of, and they are still scarce. Plants were scarce, too; so there was a reason for the big sale of lilies. Most of the dealers cleaned up in good shape, sales averaging probably better than last year, with prices about the same, or a little less. Following so close after Easter, trade is not at all bad now, there being considerable wedding and funeral work.

NOTES.

Wright's Flower Shop, Inc., had about the same trade as a year ago. Their trade was mostly in lilies and they had one of the largest stocks in the city, but by having plants of superior quality they came out of the deal in good shape. They report business just a little quiet at present.

J. W. Wolters says he had a very good Easter business, lilies selling best. He showed some fine gladioli of the early flowering varieties, as well as some of the America variety for this week's trade. He also had some peonies in the windows.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldensen report a fairly good clean-up on lilies and a general good trade. They are now showing a superb stock of roses, carnations, sweet peas and gladioli. Their force is busy as usual.

The Redondo Floral Co. were cleaned up early with their stock at Easter, having a much better trade than a year ago. They report poor sale on carnations, but a good demand for roses and lilies.

S. Murata & Co., wholesalers, report sales of over 2,000 Easter lilies. Next to lilies their business was mostly in carnations and lily of the valley. Business continues good.

The Broadway Florists disposed of a very large stock of lilies during the Easter trade and seem to have quite a call for funeral work at the present writing.

O. C. Saakes reports a fair Easter trade—not as good as last year. Present business is normal. G. H. H.

Rochester, N. Y.

The 1916 Easter trade was unusually good and the market cleaned up well. There was an abundance of both cut flowers and plants and everything sold. Lilies, both pot and cut, were plentiful, as were roses, which were fine in quality. Plants of all kinds had a very good call.

NOTES.

Edwin C. Kaebler did a phenomenal Easter business, which required his staff to work day and night. Mrs. Maude Hallower is now a member of the force at this establishment.

J. B. Keller Sons had the biggest Easter business in their history, and the rush was followed up with orders for decorations for four prominent weddings.

The Rochester Floral Co. recently featured a very pretty window arranged with yellow marguerites and corn flowers in artistic receptacles.

C. W. Curtis has some fine pelargoniums, which are selling well. His late Empress daffodils are also worthy of special mention.

Horace Head has recovered sufficiently to leave the General hospital and his many friends are glad to see him about again.

H. E. Wilson reports a fine Easter trade. Orders for funeral designs have also been heavy. CHESTER.

EASTER BUSINESS GREAT.

Both grower and retailer were simply swamped with Easter business and florists are unanimous in reporting that they could not possibly have handled more orders than they did. Plants of all kinds were easily the favorites in the selling. Never in the history of the trade here has a finer, more colorful, varied and more numerous display of plants been offered to the public and never were they more eagerly snapped up. Azaleas were numerous, in excellent condition and maintained their popularity, and the same may be said of baby rambler roses, tulips, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, hyacinths and daffodils. Spireas and genistas sold much better than in previous seasons. The supply of cut flowers was very satisfactory, all conditions considered, but the demand was not as great as for plants.

NOTES.

Local growers were certainly pleased with their Easter business. Harry Heint had a wonderful supply of splendid lilies, but sold out Friday night. Krueger Brothers were swamped with orders for lilies, plants and roses. Henry Miller sold every carnation he could cut. His stock was in excellent condition. George Bayer, whose specialty now is sweet peas, sold out early.

The florists who have been in business but a short time all report a surprising Easter demand. Among those who report satisfactory trade were

A. E. Warning, A. Kusel, the Mussbach Sisters and Harry Turvey.

FAIR RECEIPTS AND GOOD DEMAND.

Since Easter, business has been fairly good. The receipts are fair, while the demand is about sufficient to take up practically all flowers that come in and are in good condition. From present indications we will have a good supply of everything but carnations for Mothers' day. These will probably run short, but owing only to the great demand for them on that day. At the time of this writing, the market is well supplied with good stock. Roses, carnations, Easter lilies and sweet peas are all plentiful, while a fair quantity of snapdragon is coming into the market. Orchids and lily of the valley, however, are rather scarce. Other offerings include outdoor bulbous stock, callas and lilac. The first new southern fern came in last week. It is excellent.

NOTES.

E. A. Porter had the formal opening of his new store at 128 West Fourth street Monday, May 1. The store is a large one and he has it neatly and well arranged, and it will give him facilities for display that were lacking in the old store.

P. J. Olinger was in New Castle, Ind., last week. He is very enthusiastic about the stock there, and particularly so about his new red carnation, Radium.

Mrs. Matt Weiland and Miss Helen Weiland of Evanston, Ill., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger at the latter's home in Bellevue.

C. E. Critchell has been having an excellent call for outdoor lilacs.

The May meeting of the florist society will be held May 8.

SPLENDID TRADE FOLLOWS BIG EASTER.

The Easter trade in this city was one of great proportions. There was a magnificent supply of flowers of every kind and a correspondingly fine demand. The weather was all that could be desired and very conducive to a fine trade. There were plenty of roses of all kinds—American Beauty, though there was no surplus of these; Killarney, both white and pink; Aaron Ward, Richmond, Kaiserin and numerous other varieties, carnations and all the bulbous stocks in great profusion, and plenty of lilies. There was a fine supply of pot plants of every price and kind. Beautiful rhododendrons, azaleas, lily plants in numerous quantity, baby rambler and Dorothy Perkins roses, hyacinths, tulips, hydrangeas, and an infinite variety of ferns and asparagus. The prices maintained were very good, but did not advance very materially from everyday trade. A great many of the churches had beautiful decorations and the hotels also used them in large quantities. All of the dealers called in extra help to serve the trade which was phenomenal for the four days before Easter. There was a fine sale on corsage bouquets, and a tremendous call for the decorated baskets. Some of the trade think there was a slight advance in the volume of the 1916 trade over that of last year. There was absolutely nothing unsalable, everything went, and each and every one had the satisfaction of cleaning up. The fine trade followed on into the week following Easter, and each day, while bringing its new supply of flowers, also brought its large demand and there has been little or nothing left over.

The tragic death of Harry Stober, a brilliant young lawyer, who has been the chief factor in unearthing municipal mismanagement, called for one of the largest demands for flowers ever made in this city. A car load of floral offerings was shipped to Memphis, where the remains were taken for burial. M. C. D.

THE SPRING RUSH IS ON.

The past week has been a busy one with the retailers, and the greenhouses are also being put in shape to be ready for the spring trade, which, from all indications, will start early, the weather being very favorable. From all reports, the 1916 Easter trade was the best ever. Everything cleaned up well, pot plants leading in the demand. Cut stock during the past week has been plentiful, and some very low prices have been recorded, especially in Pink and White Killarney roses, which sold as low as $25 per 1,000. Carnations are scarce at four cents and bulbous stock is hardly to be seen. The demand for funeral work is brisk and the orders are well divided.

NOTES.

W. J. Barnes received a shipment of unusually fine box trees last week. He reports they are the best he ever had. He is busy getting his spring stock in shape and has booked several large advance orders.

Nelson Jarrett has his stock in good shape for the spring trade. He has added a house 20x50 feet, which he will extend to 116 feet after the spring rush is over.

John Stevens has 65,000 carnation plants in the field and they show fine condition. He also has 10,000 gladioli planted inside.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a big trade in supplies for the spring trade. An exceptionally good supply of roses were noted here.

H. Kusik & Co. report a continued heavy demand for wire work. They are having a big run on wire hanging baskets.

The Mount St. Mary's Greenhouses are well stocked and a big trade in bedding plants is looked for.

At Biderman & Sons' range every square inch of space is taken up with their spring stock.

A. F. Barbe will have one new house ready for planting next week.

R. S. Brown reports a heavy shipping trade in spring plants.

BRISK DEMAND FOLLOWS EASTER.

Business during the week following Easter was very good. Stock of all kinds was in good supply, and the demand was brisk. Easter lilies, of which there is a large supply, did not move very fast the past week. Carnations cleaned up nearly every day at fair prices. Sweet peas, too, have been in good demand. Roses of all kinds are in fine shape, the short and medium grades cleaning up early. Some very special stock in Ophelia, Sunburst, Shawyer and Rhea Reid arrive daily, with a good demand. Snapdragons, in all colors, are plentiful, but the demand cleans up all available stock. Bulbous stock has not been over plentiful since Easter, and that of good quality moves quickly. Lily of the valley has been in better shape the past week, the quality improving somewhat. Orchids are again arriving almost every day, and clean up early. All indications are for a bountiful supply of cut flowers for Mothers' day, and at prices that will not be at all high, as there will be enough stock to go around and supply all. Aspara-

NOTES.

"April Flowers bring Wilson Flowers", was the ad. in the local papers, which brought thousands to the Wilson Florist Co. greenhouses on Easter day. A "guessing contest" as to the number of flowers on an azalea, the prize being a large daisy plant, was an advertising feature that drew many hundreds of people. A large specimen azalea, having 500 blooms, was also on exhibit. J. Wilson, who manages the concern, was one of the busiest florists in town during Easter week.

Miss Marion C. Fish, sister of Van Fish, of the J. M. Gasser Co. retail store, died at her home, Corydon road, Cleveland Heights. The cause was grief, following the tragic death of her mother, who was killed by a street car last July, from the shock of which Miss Fish never fully recovered.

The annual May party of the florists' club, will be held at the Chamber of Industry hall, Franklin avenue, near West Twenty-fifth street, Thursday evening, May 4. Cards, $1. Everybody is cordially invited. Bring your friends. The usual good time is assured.

Trade following the busy Easter period has been very good. The weather is favorable and all seasonable stock is in good supply, with the exception of lily of the valley. Easter lilies are plentiful, owing to an overproduction. Sweet peas are also in unlimited supply and the quality is fine.

NOTES.

Arrangements have been completed for the unveiling of a monument to the memory of "Johnny Appleseed" in Swinney park. The programme will be under the direction of Professor M. W. Richards of the horticultural department of Purdue University. The unveiling will take place May 5. An ornamental iron fence will also be placed around the Appleseed grave in the Archer cemetery.

Ed. Wenninghoff, of the Wenninghoff Floral Co., suffered from an attack of appendicitis during Easter week. He is at St. Joseph's hospital, but his condition is much improved at this writing.

Charles G. Sauers, landscape architect at Purdue University, has been engaged to lay out the grounds of the new Lincoln school, which has just been completed.

Mrs. Josephine L. Nesbit, assisted by a landscape artist from the East, is busy beautifying city lots and planting shrubs after a "clean up" campaign.

At the annual banquet of the Round Table Literary Club, the table decorations were a feature, and were artistically carried out by the Flick Floral Co.

RECORD EASTER BUSINESS.

Good demand, good stock and good weather, combined to make what the florists all concede was a record Easter business. Plants took the center of the stage and stayed to the end of the game. Lilies were the largest single item, but azaleas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, roses, specimen marguerites, begonias and pelargoniums were good property. Bulbous stock was in light demand and small supply. Made up baskets sold well, especially those at prices under $5. Cut flowers had a good call, with demand about equal for good roses, American Beauties and carnations, with sweet peas cleaned up early in the day, but bulbous stock was only moderate in supply and moved slowly. Prices about as usual for this occasion, and supply adequate in most cases. The weather was good for both selling and delivery—and taken altogether it is probable that the week will show a 20 per cent gain over 1915. There was a nice increase in the number of orders received for transmission to florists in other cities for filling, indicating a field in the trade which should repay careful cultivation.

NOTES.

The usual Easter time night-work stunts were put on by the packing and order departments of the various stores in order to take care of the business. Ralph Culp and his assistant, in charge of the delivery room of W. H. Culp & Co., worked continuously from Friday morning until Sunday noon with one and one-half hours' rest at five o'clock Saturday morning.

C. A. Rose has been under the weather for the past few weeks, and was hardly in shape to enjoy a florist's Easter in proper spirit, but stayed on the job, although Mrs. Rose, always actively engaged at the store, shouldered the heavy end of the burden. They report a very satisfactory trade.

Ed. Mueller, superintendent at the greenhouses of Chas. P. Mueller, states that the two city stores cleaned them up on all their Easter stocks, giving them some much needed room for their large stock of plants for the spring season.

Ralph Culp, of W. H. Culp & Co., rested up for a few days after the Easter rush, taking an outing trip to Oklahoma with Mrs. Culp.

EASTER TRADE REACHES HIGH MARK.

Business has been steadily improving and the Easter trade was equal to that of any former year. There was plenty of stock both in plants and cut flowers. Violets were never better, and roses and carnations were excellent in quality and never more plentiful and all sold well. Bulbous stock came nearest to being a glut, but prices were low and it moved along fairly well, the best of it being sold up close. Very few callas were offered and they proved slow sellers. Longiflorums were good in quality, but there was an oversupply of them and they were dumped on the market at ridiculously low prices. Some well-grown pot roses were seen but the prices were high and cut down the selling chances. A great demand for small pot plants was noticeable, several hundred longiflorums, really good plants, being sold at 25 cents each the day after Easter. These were part of the surplus left from a heavy shipment from Seattle and would average five good blooms to the pot.

NOTES.

S. L. Harper is finishing the sale of his roses and will devote his entire time in the future to the manufacture of insecticides. The range he formerly occupied has been leased from the new owner by C. H. Lundgren, who will continue the business.

The California Florists had exceptionally good Easter business at their establishment. Fine pot plants were seen in abundance and the cut flower supply was all that could be desired. Everything cleaned up.

The Hayden-Watson Co. did a large retail business and practically sold out of everything. They are the largest wholesale shippers in this city and their trade in this line was very heavy.

Up to the present time all fruit has escaped injury from cold or frost and all indications point to great crops. Berries are perfect with great crops coming on.

F. C. Smith & Co. were successful in selling a large lot of plants of all kinds for Easter. Their cut flower stock was also well sold out.

The Henry Benthim Co., wholesalers, sold out everything in bloom—even all blooming pansies found ready market.

The Northwestern Floral Co. had an excellent stock of pot plants, and were well sold out at closing time.

Roses throughout the city are making a fine start. S. L. H.

April 20 should have been the date of our regular meeting, but on account of the close proximity of Easter, it was postponed until April 27, and designated "ladies' night," under the leadership of a committee consisting of Albert M. Herr, chairman; Frank Kohr, Rudolph Nagle, Lemon Landis and Elmer Weaver. The preliminary work having all been attended to the day was awaited with anxiety and patience, and what a day—a cold, drizzling rain from 6 a. m. to midnight. You cannot dampen the ardor of this aggregation of florists, however, and the following were on hand promptly at 6:30 p. m.:

Mrs. Chas. Edger, Miss Gantner, Mr. and Mrs. L. Landis, Mr. and Mrs. F. Kohr, Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Hostetter, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rohrer, Dennis Connor, Philadelphia; H. K. Rohrer, Mr. and Mrs. Leahman, Chas. B. Herr, Mr. and Mrs. Rutter Hess, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Schroyer, Miss Carrie Steckmen, Mr. and Mrs. A. Strickler, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Nagle, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Hostetter, Wm. Aherne, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Rutt, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Weaver, Lloyd Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Herr, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Kohr, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Girvin, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Landis, T. J. Nolan, North Tonawanda; Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Barr, Mrs. Nellie Eichler, Mr. Murphy and David Rose.

A dainty dinner was served by Mrs. Stegeman, the tables being handsomely decorated through the courtesy of Messrs. Schroyer, Barr, Edger, Elmer Weaver and E. P. Hostetter, the ladies all having corsage bouquets of sweet peas and the gentlemen boutonnières of carnations. Lemon Landis furnished strings of smilax for festooning and did most of the work. Right here it might be added that it was the general consensus of opinion that smilax was about 780 per cent superior to plumosus as to artistic value in decorative purposes. President Schroyer announced at the dinner that any man who attempted to make a speech would be thrown out. Mrs. A. M. Herr seized the opportunity, and claimed the privilege (not being a man) of thanking the club for this auspiciously begun "ladies' night" and voiced the feelings of every lady present.

After the dinner, the chairman announced that there would be a game of "progressive 500" in the card rooms under the leadership of Elmer Weaver, a bowling contest for ladies and gentlemen under the leadership of Frank Kohr, billiards and pool for those who neither played cards nor bowled, and seats for those who wanted to act as spectators only. In the cards, Mrs. A. M. Herr won first prize, Mrs. Chas. Tucker being second for ladies, and David Rose first and W. B. Girvin second among the gentlemen. In the bowling (duck pins), Mrs. Lehman won first ladies' prize with 102. Dennis Connor had first gentlemen's award cinched for a long time, but was finally beaten out by Chas. Tucker with 164, Mr. Connor's score being 152. Mrs. B. F. Barr won the consolation prize with a score of 42.

The thanks of the committee are due to Mrs. Rudolph Nagle, who presented one of her handsome hand painted flower pots as a prize for bowling. Mrs. Nagle not only paints her own work, but fires it as well, and has a reputation as an artist that extends beyond the confines of Lancaster. Mid-night found the hall deserted and every one on the road home, all the better for the night's play.

WEDDINGS CREATE BIG DEMAND.

A number of important wedding decorations have added life and energy to the business of the past week. The records of the marriage license bureau were broken, there never having been so many couples applying in the same period before for these necessary "scraps" of paper. Some of these affairs were quite important, H. H. Battles, Pennock Bros., and J. J. Habermehl's Sons each having their hands full for several days, while down town, West Philadelphia, Columbia avenue, Germantown, and across the river in Camden the bells were ringing throughout the week, with very good business as a result. Stock is plentiful and with the exception of lily of the valley and cattleyas, prices favor the buyers. There is great variety, most of the stock being of good quality. American Beauties are seen in fine shape, but strange to say, good Russells bring a better price. The tea class are moved fairly well at prices a shade lower than before Easter. Plenty of carnations are to be had but splits are much in evidence. White ones are a trifle scarce. Coming events cast their shadows before, and it looks as if the growers had been won over to preparedness for the time being. There are still a few violets, but the curtain will go down this week. Sweet peas have been very good stock, selling well at fair prices. Lily of the valley is lily of the valley nowadays—nothing less than $5 and up to $6—$8 is predicted for June. Cattleyas are ballooning; nothing good for less than $1 per. Very good daffodils are still seen and they are in good demand. Indoor gladioli and a few southern peonies add variety.

CLUB MEETING.

The May meeting of the Florists' Club was fairly well attended. Checks to the guarantors of the dinner fund to the amount of 59 percent were handed out, which was a pleasant surprise. Parker Thayer Barnes, assistant zoologist, department of agriculture, state of Pennsylvania, read a paper on "Red Spider." It was full of information giving all the known remedies to offset the ravages of this pest. His remarks were much applauded and he received the thanks of the club. Robert Kift brought up the subject of Mothers' day, reading letters received from a number of leading members of the trade, most of whom expressed themselves as favorable to a testimonial of some substantial value to show their appreciation. A committee was appointed to confer with similar committees of other florists' clubs. The June meeting is to be followed with a smoker in honor of Tom Dooley, who is to give the club a humorous lecture at that time.

NOTES.

In speaking of the prospects for Mothers' day, Leo Niessen deprecated the storing of the white flowers to meet the demand and incidentally to get a better price. Very often in early May there comes a mucky hot spell and stored stock would simply melt away, under those conditions. It is much better to send them along when ready as the price is already stiffening; all good stock will readily sell at this

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., are experiencing a wonderful season. The influence of the late national flower show is felt every day in orders received for roses, traced directly to the display made at that time. Quite a number of the craft express the opinion that the show has been of considerable benefit, so much having been said about it since that time, and particularly during the Easter season.

Fred Dornheim, of the Berger Bros. force, says half the retailers do not know how to keep carnations—most of the sleeping, so much complained of, being their own fault. Fresh carnations should keep for a week in a cool store, electrically lighted. He contends illuminating gas should have no place in a cut flower shop.

*Splendid daffodils, and a good sale for them, was a feature with the Berger Bros. the past week. Every effort will be made here to steer clear of salted stocks of carnations for Mothers' day.

Sweet peas in quantity graced the tables in the Edward Reid wholesale shop. Superb cattleyas that were bringing $1 each, were among other good things. Roses were a trifle too plentiful.

Indoor gladioli and peonies from South Carolina were seen on the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.'s counters. Good lily of the valley and choice larkspur were splendid stock.

The Joseph Heacock Co. had a splendid demand for kentias Easter week, many decorators buying for church work and use in the wedding affairs later on.

Roses, particularly American Beauties, will last better if kept in shipping boxes, iced, than when potted up, immediately on arrival.

George Cook says the accent should be on the second syllable, "glä di' oulus"—that is when talking about the greenhouse production.

W. R. Carre, Mantua, N. J., is sending in fine larkspur to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. It is very saleable stock.

White carnations are beginning to feel the impulse. What shy bloomers they are for a time?

DULL BUSINESS FOLLOWS BIG HOLIDAY.

The weather for the week following Easter was cool and gloomy, which, coupled with the reaction that always follows a great holiday, had a very depressing effect on business. May opens with indications of spring and both the florist and seed trade businesses show a healthier tone, though we must expect a great increase in the supply of cut flowers. Roses are even now very plentiful and prices are falling off. This is very noticeable in American Beauties. Carnations, during the past week, kept up to $3 and $4 per 100, but $3 is now the top price, with prospects of a further drop. Lily of the valley is keeping well up to $5 and $6 per 100. Lilies are hard to move at from $4 to $6 per 100. The finish of tulips may as well be written now. There is some very fair stock about, but the buyers do not seem to want it, and a few warm days will put the tulips out of business. Cattleyas are more plentiful and the best sell at the rate of 75 cents per flower, wholesale. Violets and gardenias are in the hands of the street men. A large stock of southern lilac is also on the market, much of which is also being handled by the enterprising peddlers.

NOTES.

The following incorporation was announced from Albany, April 28: Henshaw Floral Co., Inc., florists, $10,000. W. R. Pierson, E. C. Worden, A. M. Henshaw, 127 West 28th street, New York. In relation to this it may be stated that this firm opened for business May 1 under very favorable conditions, having a fine line of roses and other stock. Several handsome floral horseshoes sent by friends were noted in their window. The store is very finely equipped for business, having commodious ice boxes and offices and all the other accessories of a first class wholesale establishment.

William Kessler is handling very fine snapdragon, which sells, which is almost a miracle for this stock, as it has recently been very slow.

An exhibition will be held by this society, Saturday and Sunday, May 13-14, in the Museum building, New York botanical garden, Bronx park. Prizes are offered for collections of herbaceous plants and shrubs and trees, tulips, narcissi, orchids, sweet peas and snapdragons. Prizes are also offered for plants of pelargoniums and calceolarias. Special prizes may be awarded by the exhibition committee for any exhibit of special merit. Schedules are now ready for distribution and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, Mansion, New York botanical garden, Bronx park, New York City.

Newark Newspaper Called.

The following editorial appeared in the Newark Sunday Call of Newark, N. J., April 30th issue:

Tremendous sales of Easter flowers, which now include every variety, were recorded a week ago. One splendid American Beauty, bought on Saturday night of a Newark florist, was still in perfect bloom on Wednesday. An observant grower said: "Well, that flower wasn't pickled." It seems that is the trade name for flowers that are put on ice or in cold storage. The grower delivers these to the New York middleman about three weeks before the busy season and he "pickles" them until the big demand comes and high prices prevail. Then the flowers are taken from cold storage and sent to the retailer, "iced up," and he keeps them in much the same condition until sold. A couple of hours in a warm room destroys their loveliness, where a fresh flower would have lasted days, with ordinary care. The fault is mainly with the New York middleman, and thousands of customers are being lost to florists by the practice. Those retailers who buy directly from the grower and avoid the New York dealers give their customers what they should have, a fresh-cut flower, but the trade is monopolized to a dangerous extent by the metropolitan commission houses. As an instance of the difference in the prices of flowers, a month before Easter orchids could be had for $10 a hundred at Lakewood, and the day before Easter they were selling for two dollars apiece.

WM. G. BADGLEY'S REPLY.

In reply to above editorial, entitled "Tremendous sale of Easter flowers", I advise you that there is not a wholesale commission florist in New York City that "pickles" American Beauty roses or any other cut flowers for three weeks, and none, to my knowledge, for even one day, unless the demand for them on the day they come in is not great enough to cause them to clean up. If there is any "pickling" done, it is absolutely done by the grower, and such "pickling" on their part, has been vigorously condemned by the wholesaler for the past 21 years, to my knowledge.

The particular case that you have come in contact with, no doubt was a retailer, who had purchased "pickled" goods at a very low price and endeavored to sell them at the true value of fresh goods, and having been caught in the act has undertaken to shift the responsibility on others, as I do not know one retailer in Newark that could be fooled into buying "pickled" flowers if he didn't want them.

The wholesale florists of New York are not a monopoly to any dangerous extent—in fact, they are not a monopoly at all. There is as much competition in our trade as there is in any business that ever existed, aside from the fact that the goods we handle are so very perishable that they cannot be held for fixed prices. I do not see either how our business could be monopolized, unless a few growers could control the glass market, which I consider quite remote, for should it come to a point where a few did get control and fix prices that would make their dealings very profitable, there would be nothing to prevent anybody from building greenhouses and participating in those profits.

The prices we obtained for orchids and lily of the valley for Easter, were not made possible by any fixed agreement by anybody, but were caused by the long established principle of supply and demand, and cannot be traced to any other source.

Your editorial is absolutely contrary to true conditions that exist in our business, and absolutely unjustified, and I further advise you that if all lines of industry were conducted on a principle as fair as ours, and by men as high in principle as those engaged in our business, there would not be much cause for complaint from the buying public.

La Grange, Ill.

What was said to be one of the most elaborate and artistic floral displays ever seen in La Grange, Ill., was recently arranged by Walter Scott of the La Grange Floral & Seed Co., and was the subject of much favorable comment, the La Grange Citizen, a local newspaper, describing the most prominent features in detail in a first page article. Roses predominated in the striking display in the north window of the store, with vases of tulips in a number of varieties, and pots of Edith Scott daisies making an elegant contrast. The south window had for a centerpiece a splendid basket of dahlias, and arranged about this were baskets containing Kaiserskron tulip, Sir Watkin and Von Sion daffodils, with here and there arrangements of hydrangeas to blend the colors and a large basket of exquisite Easter lilies. The interior of the store, at all times attractive, was wonderfully beautiful with a gorgeous display, arranged to give the exactly correct blending of colors to bring out the full beauty of the flowers, while banks of splendid palms and ferns gave the proper touch of contrast.

50 years experience in the florist business guarantees efficiency to take care of all orders. 20 per cent allowed.

Albany, N. Y.

Local retailers report themselves as well satisfied with the Easter business. Most of the dealers report business better than a year ago, especially in the sale of large plants and baskets. An increased call for sweet peas and corsage bouquets was noticed. Violets sold well and in about the same numbers as a year ago. Dealers found orchids short in supply and good lily of the valley scarce. Telegraph delivery orders were received in considerable number, and this feature of the business is coming much to the fore.

The board of estimate and apportionment has created the position of city forester to be attached to the bureau of parks at a salary of $25 a week. No appointment has yet been made. The appointee will have to qualify in regard to the care, propagation and preservation of trees and shrubs. Harry G. Eyres, who has been for many years at 11 North Pearl street, has removed to 106 State street.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., President; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., First Vice-President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20-22, 1916.

NEW YORK.—Some of the larger seed houses began reducing help April 29.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, May 3 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.75 per 100 pounds.

ONION SETS at Chicago are available in a small way only, whites not to be had. Western brown at about $3.50 are used for counter orders.

SEEDSMEN, both east and west, report the mail and counter trade this week holding up well and some hope is entertained that the May business will in part make up for the slow trade in March and April.

SHENANDOAH, IA.—Henry Field, president of the Henry Field Seed Co., has purchased some five acres of picturesque woodland, the site of the former Mormon village of Manti at $150 per acre for a country home.

C. C. MORSE & Co., San Francisco, Calif., report as follows regarding the sweet pea crop prospects: "Conditions are quite satisfactory to date. The plants are practically free from aphids. While we have had rather a dry spring, the growth is all that could be desired for this season of the year and we are quite hopeful of a good average yield."

COTTON SEED—It is said that a scarcity of cotton seed is threatened in Texas, where a price of $45 to $50 a ton has tempted farmers to sell with unusual freedom. If much re-seeding should be necessary an interesting situation would arise. It is estimated that one seed of cotton given the application of all possible care and skill, would produce forty thousand million seeds in six years.

Seed Bags for Peas and Beans.

At the annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association, held at the Rome hotel, Omaha, Neb., April 22, C. C. Massie, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., recommended that members sell all peas, beans and corn in uniform bags containing 25, 50, 75 and 100 pounds and that a charge of one cent per pound be made where less than 25 pounds is wanted. It is obvious that this plan has many advantages and all the members present at the meeting expressed themselves as being heartily in favor of its general adoption.

Corn $200 Per Bushel.

Des Moines, Ia.—A Des Moines man has paid $200 for one bushel of prize corn, which will be used for seed. It was sold to J. W. Jarnagin, a farm paper publisher, by Wayne W. Polk of Sidney, Fremont county, who raised the corn. The grain will be sold at $2 an ear to Polk county farmers and but one ear will be sold to any one farmer. It will be used in the development of a higher grade of grain.

French Seedsmen Heavily Punished.

Marius Laplanche, seed grower of St. Remy-de-Provence, France, was fined 10,000 francs April 3, with loss of civil and civic rights for 10 years and required to pay the costs of the trial for having supplied Jules Kaiser and M. Herb with seeds, knowing them to be German subjects. Witnesses on behalf of the defendant were called to sustain his plea that it was easy to be mistaken as to the nationality of the purchasers of the seeds, but their assistance proved of no avail. This is the third seedsmen punished in the French trials for supplying the enemy with seeds, etc., the cases of Marius Lombard and Jacques Hasslach being recorded in our issues of April 1 and April 15, respectively.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

A trip around the seed trade in this city finds everybody working under pressure, all reports showing an unusually good business. The mail order men, whose field is the whole country, are particularly well pleased with this spring's showing and the prospects for continuance of the trade.

The Robert Buist Co. reports a very satisfactory business. With a large southern trade that started in early it has been kept busy until now it is pushed to the utmost to supply the local demand, which had all come at once, due to the late spring.

Stokes' Seed Store found trade alright, dull in March, but splendid since then. This firm is very well satisfied and has all the business it can handle. Flower seeds are scarce. Owing to the late season many people are buying potted vegetable plants.

The Henry F. Michell Co. reports the backward season hurt its local trade which was late in starting, but April trade has been phenomenal and is now caught up. The firm is well satisfied with the prospects.

Everything is going along first rate with H. A. Dreer, Inc. Even in spite of the European war, it has been able to get what seeds they wanted. This firm has had an exceptionally good season.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. had the best March and April trade in their existence, sweet peas selling exceptionally well. This will be their banner year.

I. N. Simon & Son report great trade, best they have ever had, with great demand for field and vegetable seeds.

The Wm. Henry Maule Co. had good early orders and an exceptional April.

New York Seed Trade.

While conditions in the seed trade of this city are unusual there is no cause for serious alarm as to the business of 1916. The following item from the New York Tribune of April 28 shows that the weather has had considerable influence on the trade of last month as compared with that of April a year ago: "It certainly is a backward spring. The average temperature April 27 was 44 degrees. For the corresponding day, April, 1915, the average was 72. At four o'clock on the afternoon of April 27, 1915, it was 91 degrees. At four o'clock April 27, 1916, 43 degrees. The average for 33 years for the day is 53."

Patrick O'Mara, of Peter Henderson & Co., says the market garden trade has fallen off, one reason being the low price of vegetables last year and the second that the munition factories are paying higher wages than the gardeners can pay both for men and teams. The cool and dark weather has caused counter trade to be slow, but it is now improving. Along other lines conditions were satisfactory.

F. W. Bruggerhof, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., expressed practically the same views as Mr. O'Mara regarding the business this season.

Burnett Bros. state that their business with private estates has been good, but counter trade poor.

A. T. Boddington is of the opinion that business will be good while the weather keeps cool.

J. B. Deamud, of Vaughan's Seed Store, says business has been backward, but now looks good.

W. E. Marshall & Co.'s trade, largely private, is better than last year's.

Weeber & Don report this year's business better than that of 1916.

Grain Grading Bill Adopted.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—Against the protest of the New York produce exchange and other opposition, the house today adopted as part of the agricultural appropriation bill the Rubey bill for uniform grading of grain. The bill fixed uniform grades in grain and is designed to prevent deception in grain traffic and to encourage the trade under uniform standards. It authorizes the secretary of agriculture to fix, establish, and promulgate grain grades and compel their use wherever grain is shipped in interstate or foreign commerce and sold by grade. It is similar to a bill passed by the house in the last congress and favorably reported from a senate committee, but not acted on by that body.

of agriculture has made careful test of the value of a number of varieties, among them being Jerusalem, Alaska and Stoner, and the results of these investigations are given in Bulletin 357 of the department.

The first definite mention of Jerusalem wheat was in 1807, a small quantity being brought over from Ireland at that time, but the description of this wheat, in the opinion of experts, identifies it with the Alaska wheat of the present time. This belongs to the Poulard subspecies grown in the Mediterranean region of Europe, but not to any extent in this country. Tests of this wheat made by the department in many localities and under different conditions, have never resulted in extraordinary yields, and in many instances not even fair results have been obtained. Milling results also show that Alaska is not as good as many other widely grown varieties.

The Stoner wheat belongs to the soft, red winter wheats, widely grown in the eastern United States from the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi river. Three great advantages which its discoverer claimed for it were as follows: (1) That it would outyield any other variety in any location; (2) that it sent up more stems from one seed than any other kind; (3) that 20 pounds of seed per acre produced the maximum yield as compared with 120 pounds required of other varieties. Tests by the department show that Stoner wheat is not as good as some wheats now grown in the eastern section of this country, but is somewhat better than some varieties. On the whole it is of average value. Comparative tests show that it never outyielded all other varieties and many varieties have surpassed it.

In publishing this bulletin, the department of agriculture wishes to call the attention of farmers to the fact that the government investigators have never been able to find the slightest reason for the claim that either of these wheats is in any way superior to the commercial varieties commonly grown.

New York, May 2.—Celery, per 12-inch crate, $1.00 to $1.75; cucumbers, 75 cents to $1.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.50 per 4 pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 20 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $3.00; lettuce, per strap, $2.00 to $4.50; rhubarb, per dozen bunches, 30 to 40 cents.

Tomatoes on Benches.

While benches are not ideal for growing the spring or early summer crop of tomatoes under glass, we find a considerable output on benches in such places where a catch crop is needed. This is practiced by carnation growers especially, as very often a good crop of early tomatoes is more profitable than a poor crop of cheap carnations. The main trouble encountered at this time of the year is the restricted root room, requiring close attention to watering and feeding. When plants suffer from insufficient water and nourishment, two evils result: One, and the most dangerous one, dry rot of immature fruit; the other, a serious lowering of quality. Poorly grown tomatoes become exceedingly acid, tough-skinned and hard-meated, besides decreased in size. To overcome these troubles there is nothing better than a liberal application of commercial fertilizer and a mulch of coarse manure. Where a rich soil is used on benches, bone meal may well take the place of fertilizer, but where tomatoes follow some other crop in the same soil, a complete mixture is best. Owing to the unsatisfactory condition of the fertilizer market, we have attempted and succeeded in putting up some home materials simply by making arrangements with a large poultry plant to use all their droppings. These are carefully saved under roof, mixed with fine bone meal and dry dust, and spread out to dry in a heated shed. When dry, they are pulverized and screened. We have also saved all ashes from burning tobacco stems, weeds, coarse manure and refuse wood. These materials, if judiciously used, will produce a heavy growth on any coarse-growing crop—in fact, we have used this combination with complete success on carnations. By reducing the poultry droppings through a ¾-inch mesh screen, there is less danger of injuring the crop. It may be stated that a mulch of coarse manure alone, while greatly assisting in watering, will not furnish enough plant food for shallow benches. MARKETMAN.

"Soils and Manures."

"A Student's Book on Soils and Manures," by E. J. Russell, director of the Rothamsted Experiment Station, Harpenden, Eng., recently issued, is an interesting book of 206 pages, well illustrated, its 13 chapters comprising a comprehensive treatise on soils and manures and the part played by each in the principles of soil management and successful crop production. The following summary of its contents gives an idea of the thoroughness with which the author has handled his subject:

An account of the soil—What the plant wants from the soil; limiting factors; pot experiments with tomatoes; what is plant food?

The composition of the soil—Mechanical analysis; old ideas; two states of clay; silts and silty soils; chalk and its composition; carbonates; phosphates and potassium compounds; soil air; subsoil.

Organic matter of the soil and the change it undergoes—Decomposition of plant residues; physical effects of humus; nitrogen in the soil; nitrogen fixation.

The effect of climate on the soil and on fertility—Soil belts and climatic zones; soil losses; alkali soils; effect of the weather and advantages of frost and snow; drainage water; slopes; irrigation, old and new.

The control of the soil—Cultivation; fallowing; subsoiling and trenching; control of fertility; mole draining; forcing the yield; clay soils; sands; green manuring; loams; effect of clover and root crops.

Fertilizers—Nitrates; sulphate of ammonia; phosphates; bone manures; basic slag; potassic fertilizers.

Manures supplying organic matter—Farmyard manure; effect of organic matter on the soil; loss on storage; long and short manure; time of application; guano; oil cakes; seaweed; waste products from factories. Purchase and use of artificial manures. Chalk, limestone and lime.

The book is bound in cloth and can be obtained of The American Florist Co., 440 S. Dearborn street, Chicago, price 90 cents.

FARGO, N. D.—A new house, 28x100 feet, is being added to the range of the Shotwell Floral Co.

Cabbage Plutella

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I am troubled with little brown moth millers which I presume produce little green worms. These work on the underside of foliage. What is best to do against this pest?

Nebraska.

The specimens have been identified as the cabbage plutella or diamond-back moth (Plutella maculipennis, Curtis) and the greenhouse leaf-tier (Phlyctaenia ferrugalis, Hubn.).

Thorough spraying with arsenate of lead at the rate of one pound to 18 gallons of water, using special care to cover the under surface of the leaves, will prove effective as a means of control. If the plants are in blossom, it is best to use a solution of pyrethrum, one ounce to two gallons of water, thoroughly covering the underside of the leaves with a fine mist spray. The use of light-traps at night is recommended in destroying the adult moth.

Hydrocyanic-acid gas fumigation undoubtedly offers an effective and economical means of control. In this the host plants, house temperatures, chemicals and intervals between fumigations should receive special attention. Clean cultural methods should be given attention—allow no cruciferous weeds to grow around the greenhouses, and early cutting of cabbage and destruction of cabbage stumps is recommended. S.

OCEAN PARK, CALIF.—W. Armacost & Co. have doubled the capacity of their range this year. Very good business is reported by this firm.

BEATRICE, NEB.—The Dole Floral Co. is adding a new house to its range, which when completed in about one month, will give this progressive firm eleven houses in operation.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President;
John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

NURSERYMEN are either very busy clearing up their shipping orders or planting out their own stocks for growing on.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—C. A. and E. W. Bazille and A. Sjöholm have incorporated the Northern Nurseries, with a capital stock of $50,000.

ROSES probably have never been so scarce at this time of year as during the present season, all leading wholesalers declining orders for most items.

MANCHESTER, N. H. — Preliminary plans for the laying out of Walker Park, are being drawn by Sheffield A. Arnold, landscape architect, Boston, Mass.

EIGHT MILLION dollars is reported lost by applemen this season. Inability to export on account of high ocean freight rates is said to be the main cause.

WE are in receipt of the thirty-third annual report of the board of park commissioners, Minneapolis, Minn., in its usual tasteful style with a large amount of useful data freely supplemented with informing illustrations and maps.

McKINNEY, TEX.—The McKinney Nursery Co., has been awarded the contracts for beautifying the grounds of the government buildings in this city; also those at Sulphur Springs, Bonham, Mineral Wells, Brownwood, Temple and Hillsboro, Tex.

Tree Surgery Infringement Denied.

The motion for a preliminary injunction in the case of the Davey Tree Expert Company against Clifford H. Easton was denied by the District Court of the United States, Southern District of New York, on April 4. Infringement of the Davey patents on tree surgery was charged. It is said the case will be brought to a final hearing at an early date.

Florists' Specialties in Good Demand.

The Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., reports demand the past season for its florists' specialties, such as hydranges, deutzias, pot lilacs and field grown roses very good, these stocks being sold out very closely. The season with this firm has been very favorable and satisfactory. Collections have been coming in very well from all parts of the country, seeming to indicate that the florists generally have had a profitable season.

Destructive Scale Insects.

The oyster-shell scale and the scurfy scale are, according to specialists of the United States department of agriculture, more frequently the subject of inquiry by orchardists than all other species of scale insects combined.

The oyster-shell scale is the more important of the two. It occurs in nearly every state in the country and attacks apple, maple, horse chestnut, poplar, willow, lilac, and more than a score of other trees. Shade trees which are not often sprayed are especially susceptible to attack. Maple and poplar trees in some cases are completely incrustated from top to bottom of the trunk.

The scurfy scale is especially common on apple, pear, cherry and peach trees. It does not attack as wide a variety of plants as the oyster-shell scale, and this fact, coupled with its being less widely distributed than the latter, makes it the less harmful of the two. The scurfy scale, like the oyster-shell, winters in the egg condition under the scales.

Lime-sulphur spray and kerosene emulsion are suggested for the control of these pests and directions for mixing these sprays together with complete data on these scales and additional methods for their control will be found in Farmers' Bulletin No. 723, issued by the department of agriculture.

Make Customers Successful with Your Plants—

Your customers buy potted plants. Often they wither and die and you are blamed for the failure. It's simply because plant food is lacking. Your customers don't want fertilizers with offensive odors. They need Odorless Fertilo that does not mar the fragrance of the flowers. Just the material for Lawns, Flowers, Shrubs and Small Gardens. You can sell several cans of Odorless Fertilo to each customer who buys potted plants and several bags to those with gardens. Make them more successful and they will become flower enthusiasts.

FERTILO is nature's pure plant food and combines all the essential elements required by plant life: Ammonia, Phosphoric Acid, Bone, Phosphate of Lime and Potash. Makes the necessary Humus for enriching the soil and is also an excellent Insecticide.

FERTILO is odorless, will not get hard and lumpy. Put up in handy containers in 1 and 5-lb. sizes, and in 10 and 30-lb. bags. The 1-lb. package will fertilize 10 gallons of earth for potted plants or 50 sq. ft. of surface. Retail for 25c. Full and simple directions printed on each package.

Florists, truckers and landscape gardeners recommend Odorless Fertilo.

Send us 6c in stamps to cover postage and we will send you a free 1-lb. package, together with full particulars, and quote you our liberal terms to florists.

Use The Garland Cast Iron Gutter When You Build

It has made good in hundreds of ranges throughout the country and is recognized by all the growers who have used it as the best in the field. Gutters that were used for twenty years in old houses were found to be practically as good as new and when the other material was thrown on the rubbish heap the Garland Cast Iron Gutters were set aside to be used in the new range. Absolutely the best and safest Gutter to use. It costs no more and lasts a life time. Get in touch with us whenever you need anything in Greenhouse Materials. Always remember that we make the greenhouse complete—that it pays to get our sketches and estimates before you build.

Window Boxes-Hanging Baskets

Window Boxes.

One of the important features of the florist business is the filling of the window box. While there is considerable work in this line, it is not a tithe of what might be done, were the importance of the box as a decorative feature impressed upon and brought before the public, particularly the residents of the closely built up portions of the large cities. "The City Beautiful," is a slogan that should be kept to the front and so strongly presented that many would want to do their part to help along the good work.

Every florist who caters at all to this work should have a separate department to handle it. Every detail of the business should be so familiar to the man in charge that he would never be at a loss in any emergency. There are whole blocks of houses in the best sections, 20 or 25 properties, side by side, without a decorated window or possibly only two or three of them, helping to enliven the city street with boxes of flowering plants. The reason that their use is not more general, is due likely to the idea that they are very expensive, their constant care a source of worry, the damage they may do to a beautiful front, the danger of their falling, and other imaginary detriments. All these doubts are of course readily removed and explained away when an enthusiastic salesman gets on the job. If it is a question of price, he meets it with the cedar or birch covered bark box, the least expensive, but very serviceable and satisfactory. Should a special pattern be desired to conform to the architecture of the house, he is prepared to quote prices. If the objection is to their short life, that they soon rot out and have to be renewed, prices are quoted for terra cotta or cement patterns, which are as durable as the house itself. Ornamental galvanized brackets, securely attached, relieve all danger of accident.

Were the business of securing new customers pushed with vigor, the perpetual care of the boxes could be guaranteed to cost but a moderate sum, as there would be a list that would keep one man busy, and while the cost in each case would be very small, yet the aggregate sum would be found profitable to the florist. If "The City Beautiful" feature is fully emphasized, the boxes will be ordered kept up during the summer after the house is closed, to ornament and give life and color to the hot dusty streets of the city, for the enjoyment of those less fortunate ones who are unable to get away. There are also a number of self-watering devices in the zinc and iron boxes which are past the experimental stage, having been found practical and efficient. These relieve somewhat the care of watering and are good selling points when dealing with particular people.

The size of a box has a great deal to do with its efficiency. Quite a number are seen with a width and depth of only five inches inside measurement. This may be all right for a narrow inside ledge for room decoration, but for outside sills, no box should be less than six inches wide and the same in depth inside measurement. Where a generous display is desired and the windows are of good size, a depth of eight inches and width of ten inches, which gives plenty of soil and root space, is best. When the sills are six feet and over, it is best to supply several boxes, two of three feet, or two of four feet as required, as one large enough to fit the entire space is very unwieldy and heavy to handle. When put up in sections and fitted together, the effect is the same as of one long box. Good practical supports are necessary to properly secure and prevent any chance of accident. Particularly is this the case with the terra cotta or cement jardinières, which are rapidly coming into use; they are very heavy and almost invariably go to pieces in case of accident. Galvanized

To get the best effect, plant but one variety to a box. For vines, use variegated periwinkle or English ivy. Many other plants and vines may be used for this work, such as, sweet alyssum, nasturtiums, lobelias, neurembergias, trailing abutilon, ivy, geraniums, parlor or Boston ivy, petunias, verbenas, etc., but for street wear in the dry and very hot posiof the box, one in each end, which stand from 36 to 40 inches high. To these are trained ivy plants, which make an attractive and novel finish.

Boxes in second and third story windows and balconies well above the street, should be supplied with galvanized iron pans to catch the drip. These should be about two inches wider than the box, which latter should rest on cleats in the bottom of the pan. A system of small iron pipes with perforations along the rear of such elevated boxes, with connection at the street level to which a hose may be attached is a convenient and time saving device for watering. The cost of such an installation is comparatively small and will be found well worth the expense.

The Hanging Basket.

Wherever there are porches, there is an opportunity for the hanging basket. When of a practical size, and suitably filled, they are a decided acquisition lending an air of refinement and decorative effect that is a splendid return on the small amount invested. For the florist, who is located in the residence or suburban district, where the porch is the feature of every dwelling, there is a great opportunity to push the hanging basket.

There is infinite variety in the production of the various styles. The wooden type, covered with laurel knots and roots, with branch handle, has a very rustic appearance; it is generally of fair size, with plenty of room for plants. The galvanized wire patterns are perhaps the cheapest, being much used for cemetery decoration, in which case an iron support, from which they are suspended, is a necessary adjunct. They are made in several sizes. A lining of sheet moss is necessary to hold the soil. These, when in good growth, are a very pretty ornament for the small porch, the plants and vines entirely concealing the network of the basket.

There are a number of designs in terra cotta. Some, fashioned after logs of wood, are unique; others in bowl shape are very practical. Quite a lot of patented designs are offered, fitted with self-watering devices, wrought iron brackets, that screw into the wooden sill, are the most efficient. Where the foundation is level and wide enough, the box should rest on two or three one inch strips to allow for free passage of air underneath, with screw eyes in box and window frame and copper wire to insure its being kept in place. All receptacles should rest perfectly level—most ledges have a fall toward the street to throw off the water, and this must be overcome by small wedges under the iron supports or boxes.

Drainage is an important factor, although as a rule the outside boxes suffer more from drouth than from an oversupply. In filling, an inch of crocks in the bottom gives sufficient air space, and a good half-inch of room at the top, which soon settles to an inch, should be left for water space. Good, rich soil is necessary if plants are to grow and thrive; they are of necessity crowded together and soon present a starved and root bound appearance if the earth is poor. A top dressing with pulverized sheep manure is a good stimulant when the tired look comes on.

There are four periods in the year when the box may be filled. Starting in late winter or early spring, the dead boxwood or evergreens give way to pansies or daisies, which give life and color until all danger of frost is over, when they are in turn succeeded by the bright hued geraniums and marguerites with variegated vincas or ivies for vines. The best varieties of geraniums are: Reds—Alphonse Ricard, S. A. Nutt, Helen Mitchell and Trego. Pinks—Beaute Poitevine, Jean Viaud and Mrs. E. G. Hill. Mme. Buchner, is the best white. There are other good varieties, but these are tried and true in their colors.

tions that many of the boxes have to stand, most of them do not last. They are pretty at the start, but go down with the first hot spell. Even the more sturdy geraniums get seedy looking about the first of August, and then is the time to replenish with Scottii, Scholzelei, or almost any of the dwarfier growing variations of the nephrolepis. While a box filled with all ferns, is generally satisfactory, lasting well until frost, life and color is given by the addition of Pandanus Veitchii, Dracena terminalis or some of the bright colored crotons. A pretty feature has recently been added in white or green trellises the width sponges in the bottom of the soil containers, connecting with reservoirs of water beneath. These have been found to work very well if the supply of water is kept up. This class of baskets is made of galvanized iron, painted in various colors, and are quite durable.

The varieties of plants that can be used, covers a large range, depending of the cheap wire baskets, which, with a week's growth will present a very good appearance. A circular to the customers and to those who are looked upon as possible buyers, offering these for a short time at bargain prices, will generally clean them out, showing a very good profit and at the same time adding substantially to the list of customers.

on the size of the basket and the space in which it will hang. The various varieties of the Boston fern are satisfactory in themselves. They do very well in these aerial holders, provided they do not suffer from want of water. At times through the season, applications of liquid manure, after they become root bound, will be found beneficial. Where color is desired, almost all the dwarfed growing bedding plants can be used—verbenas, petunias, neurembergias, lobelias, sweet alyssum, trailing abutilons, ivy geraniums, parlor ivy, English ivy, variegated periwinkle, dwarf nasturtiums and many other popular plants of like character to be found in almost any of the greenhouse stocks. Center plants, such as Dracenas indivisa and terminalis, crotons, coleus, geraniums, etc., are desirable in the larger baskets. When possible, after filling, there should be a week's stay in the greenhouse, which gets the plants straightened out and gives them a start in their new environment.

A great convenience in watering and handling is to connect each pair of baskets with a stout cord, running through pulleys attached to the ceiling of the porch. These balance each other. When watering one basket is pulled down, immersed in a bucket of water until saturated, then raised from the bucket and allowed to drip for a while, the other being treated in the same way. This requires no step-ladder or particular exertion, its convenience insuring better attention.

At the end of the season, with stock for this work still on hand, a clean up sale can be made by filling a number

The Trellis Box.

Several years ago there was originated in Germany, the trellis box. Considering its popularity and its practical uses as an ornament for the house, its simplicity is surprising—just a box of oblong pattern, the smallest size being about six inches in length it would not have been noticed. It was just like any other box only smaller. But presto! Someone thought of adding a small trellis on which and two inches wide; as a plain box vines could be trained; instantly the finished article became a commercial success. When presented to the progressive storekeeper, the order was for "all you have." When these were disposed of he set his men to making more. With the falling off of imports American manufacturers have been induced to make them and offer a number of additional sizes up to 24 inches or longer in length and of varying heights of trellis. The miniature boxes with a small ivy or two, trained to the trellis caught mostly the eyes of the children, who were not satisfied until they had one to take home. The larger sizes are filled more pretentiously and they make a splendid Christmas or Easter article, as with the gay blooming plants of these seasons they can be made very showy and attractive. With the ivied trellis as a background everything shows to the front and is thus doubly effective for in the plant baskets most of them are filled on both sides, although only one side can be seen at a time. There is nothing better than this trellis box as a novelty and quick selling article for the store.

Dutch Agriculture.

Last year's crops were poor in many parts of Holland, especially in localities where the soil is sandy, owing to the lack of artificial fertilizers, phosphates, calcium salts, etc. The sugar beet crop was spoiled on account of the difficulty of importing nitrates. All these are imported from the Americas and from Germany, the latter country being unwilling to export such chemicals to Holland except in exchange for goods which she needs and which England does not let come to her. Special negotiations with England had to be entered into in order to get permits for such exchanges in individual cases. The vegetables and fruit crops were exceptionally big, permitting Holland to get many needed commodities from Germany in exchange for them.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Small & Sons, New York.

The accompanying illustrations are of the interior of the new retail store of J. H. Small & Sons, Madison avenue and 52d street, New York, which is said by men who have traveled extensively among florists, to be the finest retail store in this country. As will be noted, at the main entrance there is a miniature sunken garden with a picturesque fountain in the center. The entire scheme is intended to present a replica, so to speak, of a garden in the grounds of a fine estate. It will further be noted that the broad stairway ends at what is a good representation of the portico at the entrance of a dwelling. Another noteworthy feature is a mezzanine balcony, or gallery, from which a good view may be had of the garden. This balcony will be kept finely decorated, as it now is, with flowering and foliage plants. There is now a very lavish display throughout of plants, most of which, the cibotiums excepted, were grown at their Washington greenhouses. On the Madison avenue front, there is an attractive reception and writing room.

This firm has a very interesting history. It was founded in 1855 by John H. Small, the 1st, at Washington, D. C. It may be added that a stroke of enterprise by the founder, then a young man, gave it great popularity. Lord Lyons was then British minister at Washington. He had been sending to Paris for artificial flowers to decorate his table. Mr. Small persuaded him to discard them and use natural flowers, offering to supply them, which he did, and it is said that for some time he did it at a financial loss, but it made him a great reputation as a decorator, and thereafter Small was a name to conjure with in the diplomatic and fashionable world of Washington. John H. Small, the 1st, who was a skillful landscape gardener, as well as a florist, died a number of years ago at an advanced age.

The Late J. H. Small.

Founder of J. H. Small & Sons.

For many years the Washington business has been conducted by John H. Small, the 2d, a very clever and able man. One of his Washington competitors in the business once remarked to the writer: "There are plenty of men in congress who cannot make as good a speech as Henry Small." In masonry, he is a Past Grand Master of the District of Columbia. Twenty-four years ago this firm opened a store at 1153 Broadway, New York, with a branch at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, where they had remained until their late removal. This business has been conducted by Charles Albert Small, the other brother and member of the firm. C. A. Small has been spoken of as "a quiet man who minds his own business," and the results show that he has minded it well. On the social side, he is kind and generous and popular with the public and his employees. New talent that will greatly assist this firm, particularly in its landscape work, is that of John H.

Small, 3d, son of John H., 2d, who is a graduate of Cornell University, and later spent two years in Europe studying the details of the most famous gardens and grounds of great estates.

Managing A Flower Shop

How to manage the business of the retail flower shop with the greatest efficiency, is a problem that will ever be in the solving, for no man feels but what he might have done better had he given more attention to detail or kept a closer watch on the buying. Take for instance the small store where the volume of business is from $10,000 to $15,000 per annum. If the location is in a high-class residential district, the stock carried will have to grade well up, for people of wealth generally like the best. Buying will have to be well balanced with demand, or the profits of one day will be offset with the losses of the next. In the matter of expense, the rent of a suitable store in, or on the fringe of a small business center, is not excessive—from $500 to $750 per year is about the range. Bright young women and young men wanting to learn the business make cheap and efficient help.

When the season is on, it behooves the proprietor to be ever on the alert; his customers are much more fastidious than the middle class, and as the number is limited, he must get into personal touch with each of them, and gain their confidence to such a degree, that they will leave their order for stock not on hand. To do this requires close application, one must be almost always on duty in the store, ready to meet customers or answer telephone calls; subordinates may be very competent, but Mr. or Mrs. Particular want the proprietor, and the order is frequently lost without his being there to take it. His outside appointments should be made, if possible, for periods before or after the shopping hours of the day. He must keep in mind the long, lean months of summer when his clientele close their city homes and disappear, and get his profits for the year before they go. Then can he take his well-earned rest and recreation. There is no better way to increase the business than by weekly or semi-monthly letters to customers, keeping them posted as to the changing flowers of the season. They may for one reason or another try elsewhere, but the frequent little bulletins keeping them in touch, through him, with what is in the market, is almost sure to win them back.

The methods that control every successful retail business will insure a clean, bright store, with goods well arranged and windows kept bright with samples of the best in the shop artistically displayed. Prompt and careful delivery, next to fresh stock, is a most important detail; more business is lost from failure here than from any other cause. Nothing is more annoying to a customer than to have to telephone for flowers not on time. Several offenses of this kind and the valued patron is gone. Efficient service is absolutely necessary in the flower business; everything handled is perishable and must be delivered as ordered, not before or after, but at the time specified. There are times when an hour or two before or after does not matter, but when the chance is taken and trouble arises, the result is often serious. The habit of getting everything out on time should be cultivated to a degree, for as the old adage says, "Punctuality is the life of trade."

Electric City Conservatory Gt. Falls, Mont.

The Electric City Conservatory, always up to the minute in its advertising, is presenting to the people of this city a miniature reproduction of the $40,000 natatorium, the gift to the city, as a memorial to John G. Morony, late banker and capitalist. The reproduction is exact and shows the natatorium with its latticed fence, walks and vines. A picture of a section of the city, showing several prominent buildings forms the background. Chas. A. Burrell, president of the Electric City Conservatory, deserves much credit for the clever idea, which has been the subject of much favorable comment by both press and public.

PLANT NOTES.

Asters.

The early and midseason asters should be planted out as early as the season will allow. If the plants are hardened off for two or three weeks in a cold frame and gradually given night air as soon as safe, they will endure the outside temperature much better than those carried directly from the warm greenhouse. The land should be prepared at once, and while asters will grow on almost any piece of ground the success or failure depends much on the proper preparation of the soil. Land that was manured last fall and plowed is by far the best, and all that will be required in the spring is a shallow plowing or disk-ing and then leveled. It is well not to level off too large a tract at once, for heavy rains occur at this season which pack the soil down hard. Before planting give the young plants a thorough watering and if in boxes or the bench cut through the rows with a knife a day before planting. Lay the field out in rows from 15 to 20 inches apart, giving the branching varieties the greater distance, with a wider space every fifth or sixth row to provide a walk when cutting the flowers, and set the plants from 12 to 18 inches apart. Plant with a trowel, for the plants set in a dibbled hole will not take hold as quickly, and with the early asters the slight difference in time taken in planting is more than made up in the early blooming; the dibble packs the soil around the plant and the roots do not grow into it as freely, and the roots are also contracted in the small hole made by the dibble. As soon as the field is planted, if possible, give the plants a good watering and then cultivate lightly with a wheel hoe to loosen up the soil.

Rambler Roses.

The rambler roses for Memorial day will demand constant attention, for at this season of the year aphids and red spider increase very rapidly if the conditions are propitious. It is far better to keep these insects down by proper culture than to be obliged to resort to measures to kill them. Give the plants all the ventilation possible, but drafts will often cause mildew on the soft foliage, so these must be guarded against especially, and low ventilation, such as open doors with the wind drawing through the houses. Syringe thoroughly on bright days. There is no better prevention for red spider than a good syringing that will reach the under side of the leaves, which will quickly break up the colonies of spiders that gather there. If the plants require fumigation it should be light, for often the young foliage is very tender and heavy fumigation with smoke quickly burns it. Where the pots are full of roots a watering with liquid manure or a mulch of sheep manure mixed with sifted soil will be found very beneficial and will add a lustre to the foliage and deepen the color of the flowers.

Primulas.

For plants of both P. sinensis and obconica for blooming next spring, May is the best time to sow the seed, which germinates very readily at this time, but if this is delayed until June it will often be found quite difficult to get the seed to start well, and as the young seedlings grow very slowly they will require constant attention during the warm weather, for a few hours' sun when they are dry will cause the loss of all the plants. The soil should be sifted in a fine sieve as the seed is very small and they should not be covered with the soil, but sown thinly on the soil when loose and then pressed flat with a board. Watering should be done with a very fine rose on the can so as not to wash the seeds or soil. At this season of the year the seed will germinate readily in almost any greenhouse, but it is well to cover the seed pan or box with glass to prevent too rapid evaporation and until the plants begin to make growth keep the pots well shaded. Many growers wrap a piece of paraffine paper around the glass that is placed on the seed pan. This allows plenty of light to germinate the seed and will prevent the direct rays of the sun from burning up the young seedlings when they start to grow. As these young plants grow very slowly some soils will often become caked or scaly, and if this occurs the top should be carefully broken up to allow the air to enter. As soon as three or four leaves are formed pot in $2\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pots, not too deeply, but yet deep enough to have them stand erect. They should then be placed in a cool house and much of the success of their culture depends upon the care and watering in their early growth. They are a moisture-loving plant and should never become dry, yet they are easily over-watered and will not make a good growth if continually kept soaked; frequent and light waterings are the best. A lightly shaded frame with the pots plunged in the soil and the sash lifted at top and bottom for a free circulation of air is the best location for summer culture.

Marguerites for Winter.

To have good marguerites for winter flowers the plants must have a good start in the spring. For large plants the stock should now be in $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3-inch pots and growing vigorously, but if the cuttings have not been made they can now be propagated in a cool bench and good-sized plants grown, or stock should be secured at once. Do not allow these plants to become pot bound, but shift them into 4-inch pots as soon as they require it and pot very firmly. Keep the plants pinched back that they may branch more freely and keep all flowers and buds picked off. For many years these plants were grown in the open ground, but in some localities they have been attacked with a club root in field culture and inside culture has become necessary for success. A cold frame in which the pots are plunged is the culture successfully practiced by many growers. In late summer they should be potted in large pots, 8-inch or 9-inch, or planted in the bench in good rich soil, so that they will be well established for fall and winter flowering. The plants grown in pots are more prolific in flowering and the size of the flowers can be maintained with liquid manure. Aphis should be kept down by fumigation while the leaf miner is a very destructive insect if once firmly established, but persistent spraying with strong nicotine solution will eradicate this pest.

Pansies.

The sale of pansy plants will soon be at its height and there is nothing that the florist or grower sells upon which more time is wasted than in selecting a small order of pansies if the customer is shown a frame of a few thousand plants. The better way is to have boxes or baskets holding a dozen plants all made up for the customer. It is not necessary to put up more than will be required for one or two days' sale, but as fast as sold keep the stock replenished. There are many patrons who will be well satisfied with a good selection already placed in a basket who will take an hour of a salesman's time in making their choice out of a frame. Any late seedlings should be planted in the frames at once, and these will make fine plants for late May or June planting when the older plants are either sold or have become too large for bedding purposes.

Callas.

As the summer weather approaches the callas will cease producing flowers and will require a rest to prepare them for another year. They should be dried off gradually until they become "dust dry," when the roots will be thoroughly ripened. If watered the calla will grow all the year round, but plants grown in this way will not produce as many flowers as those that are rested. Those grown in pots can be laid on their sides in the greenhouse until all danger from freezing weather is passed, when they can be removed outdoors, still placing the pots on the side in full sunlight. Those grown on the bench can be lifted with as much soil as possible and placed under the bench, where they will dry out gradually, and later planted in the full sun outside in a dry location, and as soon as thoroughly ripened, shaken out and stored until wanted to start for another season. The yellow calla, Richardia Elliottiana, is being grown more largely and the blooms have been used the last winter in many elaborate decorations. The culture of these is in pots and similar to the older varieties.

American Agriculture Summarized.

A feature of the 1915 Yearbook of the United States Department of Agriculture, which will make it of unusual interest to those who study the production and distribution of products, is the section devoted to a graphic summary of American agriculture. This section contains 78 maps and a large number of tabulations. These maps show graphically by means of dots or symbols the number and cultivated areas of farms, the value of crops, and the rural population in each section of the country. Other maps show for each section the acreage and production of all of the important crops. A glance at one of these maps tells where any crop is being raised on a commercial scale and the amount of that crop produced in each section of each state. These dots, each of which represents a stated quantity, naturally become more numerous as the center of production is reached, so that from the shading of the map, the reader can instantly trace out the primary and secondary centers of production. Following this graphic presentation of agricultural statistics are 175 pages devoted to elaborate tables giving detailed statistics of the principal crops in the United States and foreign countries.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—April 22 was observed in this city as plant day, and over 22,000 rose and spirea bushes were set out.

Rose Los Angeles.

The new rose recently named for the capital of southern California, illustrated herewith, is described as follows, by Morris M. Rathbun, of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce:

"'Los Angeles' is the name of a new rose perfected after 10 years of experimental propagation by Fred Howard, a well-known florist of the southern California metropolis. The new flower was formally christened by the city council of Los Angeles during a recent flower show, thereby passing from its hybrid cross number 101 to the official municipal flower of the city.

"The new creation also is designated as the 'opal of the flower world.' It is a sturdy bloom, five inches in diameter, of luminous coral pink, shaded at the base of the petal with translucent gold. In fragrance it is equal in intensity to the odor of the finest Marechal Neil.

"One of its strongest points is the exquisite form of the buds and the fully open flower. The buds are long and pointed, expanding into a flower of mammoth proportions, with an ever increasing intensity of color as the blooms mature. They are beautiful in form, from the expanding bud until the last petals drop.

"The new rose has wonderful lasting qualities in a cut state. Flowers grown under ordinary field cultivation will last five to six days, the petals being thick in texture and the whole flower substantial to a high degree. Los Angeles is one of the best growers in the entire family of roses. It produces an endless succession of flowers from early spring to late autumn. The plants, when once established, send out strong shoots from the base, which attain a height of from four to five feet in two year old plants. Each of these shoots is crowned with magnificent blooms. With the passing of the terminal blooms, strong laterals issue from the eyes of these stems and furnish additional flowers.

"One bad feature of many roses is eliminated in Los Angeles. This is their liability to mildew during dull weather. It is claimed for the new rose that it is absolutely mildew proof. Under the harshest weather conditions it maintains its vigorous growth and healthy foliage."

Economics of the Flower Business.

A paper by Alexander J. Guttman, New York, read at a meeting of the New York Florists' Club, May 8, 1916.

Mr. President and Gentlemen:

At the outset allow me to assure you that I am aware of the fact that by attempting to review the economic condition of our business, I have bitten off a very large chunk, but since I believe in not being afraid to undertake the solving of a problem, though I may fail, it is better to have undertaken and failed, than never to have undertaken at all. In this spirit I am making the attempt. Allow me further to assure you that my prime motive in addressing you is not prompted by criticism, but rather by the spirit of up-building and development. I am too old a veteran to hope not to be misunderstood by some, not because what I may say is difficult to comprehend, but because experience has taught me that all the problems of life are really very simple when we have found the proper angle from which to approach each problem. Further, because I find after careful study, that the general economic condition of our beloved country, from whatever cause, is to-day such as to have developed many men lacking in faith and optimism. Another factor of tremendous importance is the very poor quality of mental food doled out to us, due to the low standard of efficiency, prevailing in the journalistic profession, excepting of course the trade press. Surely you have all noticed it, especially during the past 21 months.

The merchants of a nation occupy a very important position and wield a tremendous influence; so does the press. Merchandising, though simple, is a science. General trading is a science and an art. The principal aim in life should be to live wholesomely and in order to so live, every intelligent being chooses a vocation. And this existence, both morally and economically, is according to his intelligence. This we all must concede. We, as horticulturists, know beyond a question of a doubt, that to obtain a healthy and prolific plant it is necessary to first sow a healthy seed in good soil. Just so it is impossible to develop a sound and true mental picture of anything without having first absorbed good and wholesome food; whatever condition may exist, or the economic condition of our business that exists at present, is the reflex of that which has gone before, a reflex of the economic structure of the whole country, a reflex of the condition of the minds of the majority of men engaged in general merchandising and trading.

Unfortunately only a very small percentage of men are ready and eager to assume responsibilities. Probably they are afraid of obstacles and have not enough confidence in themselves to overcome these obstructions. If they only knew the great mental and material benefit to be derived from working out of a difficulty, for that is the only way to obtain valuable experience; that is the way to learn to distinguish the good from the bad, wisdom from stupidity, the wholesome from the unwholesome and best fit oneself to become a wise leader and builder. I dread to think of the great mass, who having had but limited experience, in whose minds so much bad seed is being planted by the distorted and unwise mental food contained in the majority of daily publications, plus weekly and monthly magazines, and also by books written purposely to confuse the mind rather than to enlighten. The fault must be charged to the so-called leaders of our country, who in the great majority of cases are really only politicians, rather than constructive statesmen and philosophers or masters of economics. Merchants, teachers, editors, public officers, the clergy, in fact all men holding positions of influence and trust, ought to be students of economics. Perhaps the fact that our country, being comparatively young and unfettered by conventions, with its enormous natural resources and elastic laws, is in a great measure conducive to full play of individualism. That, to my mind, accounts for the rather loose, and in many respects impractical, working conditions existing in most businesses as well as ours. I emphasize these points for the purpose of showing that there is no special cause for criticising the working conditions of our business, our industry being yet so young. It is, however, meet and proper that we, a body of merchants, knowing the value and importance of sowing good seed, make due endeavor to build healthy and practical working conditions.

Looking back 22 years I can see the marvelous progress made in the development and increase of varieties of plants and cut flowers and in the so-called ornamental branch of our business, as well as in the general distribution of the stock from grower to the public; also in the working conditions for employees as well as employers, due primarily to the early pioneers to whom we must give great credit and honor for their foresight, diligence and perseverance, and to the various horticultural organizations. Whatever recommendations I shall make are so made in good faith, with malice towards none, feeling and believing that there is great room for improvement in our economic structure; further, that such improvement can only be obtained by intelligent and practical co-operation, combined with the spirit of idealism. The principal is so simple, works so automatically. Some call it the new thought, the advance thought. It is an axiomatic truth, that by building for yourself, you automatically build for others. By tearing down others, you automatically destroy yourself in time. No matter how scheming and formidable a man may be he cannot harm others without harming himself. It may take a generation or a lifetime, but there is no escaping ultimate destruction, and I am not superstitious. A man who is vindictive, over suspicious and shortsighted, cannot be a builder in the true sense of the word, not forgetting, of course, that one must be cautious and reasonably conservative. The man who is successful in life and constantly grappling with new and interesting problems, has no time to nurse a grudge; also, men must learn that it is useless to try to keep down, or in other words, to retard the progress of a formidable individual. It is safer and better to think and act along the lines of the thought and policy of live and let live.

In this country progress is made by leaps and bounds—the small man of to-day is the big man of tomorrow, and it behooves every merchant to avail himself of all opportunities for the advancement of his own interest, even though he may feel that in doing so, he would also benefit his contemporaries. When approaching my subject, "The Economic Structure of the Flower Business", I feel that I could not do so comprehensively from any other angle than that of the economic condition of the entire country. I realize that my task is not only difficult, but so vast that compared with a large field, approachable from so many different angles, I do not know with which phase of the question to commence. I am trying to keep in mind also the fact that you, Mr. President and gentlemen, are voluntary listeners and I must not talk too long, for fear I may tire you, therefore, I will discuss only a portion of the many phases. This brings me to one of the phases that I will discuss, which in my opinion is a most important problem, important because to my mind it is a practical and economic medium for the further great development of our art and industry. I refer to the question of flower shows.

Of all the arts, none is so universally wholesome and inspiring, none so universally appealing as the culture of flowers and plants. The human mind when in distress, when ill, when in need of a helpful thought, will respond more freely and gratefully to the flower than to anything else. As an industry, floriculture, together with its necessary accessories, can surely be regarded as legitimate. To make the flower show act as the powerful agent it is intended to be, it is to be hoped that each ambitious and faithful member of our craft shall avail himself of the great advantage thus derivable. The clear duty of each individual, and each of our various organizations, is to co-operate in and conduct these shows in such a manner as to encourage a great many exhibitors as well as a large attendance. Box office receipts should only be a secondary consideration. In other words, the educational benefit to be derived by the public from these exhibitions should be the only or chief consideration, for in that way the trade as a whole would benefit thereby to the fullest measure. For instance, instead of only a handful of growers, seedsmen, retailers and ornamental horticulturists being represented, the majority in each of these branches should have exhibits, or rather, I would say that they should to a greater degree rise to this occasion and fully appreciate its tremendous importance and benefit. It was a great shock to me to find such a small number of growers, nurserymen, seedsmen, retailers, etc., represented at our recent show. I had hoped that the craft would recognize and be eager to avail itself of this great medium for the general advancement of our business, and I warn the craft in general, that they should not miss a great opportunity whenever it presents itself for general progress. Can you not see that our great leaders and most progressive men are giving much energy and attention to shows? I am not familiar enough with the general course and management of the recent show to say where the fault lies. The fact is clear, however, that only a small portion of the craft was represented. Let us hope that next year this will not be so; that the craft will avail itself of the chance. The newspaper publicity, on the whole, was anything but comprehensive and dignified. Here again is abundant evidence of our loose and inconsistent economic structure.

The newspapers could with proper guidance, act as a medium for wholesome and instructive information to the public. I know it is difficult to work with poor material, or rather with incompetent artisans, but feel that it is not impossible to remedy this fault. I also cannot believe that the management needed to lack timely and voluntary assistance, because I cannot imagine any member of the craft declining to do his mite when requested.

The show, as a whole, was fairly satisfactory. The quality of stock shown was excellent, but it was not enough of a competitive exhibition. The fact that more growers were not represented may be charged up to the National Flower Show at Philadelphia, but to my mind there was little or no excuse for the lack of enthusiasm shown by many of the craft, especially by our foremost retailers. Retailers, wake up! Good wholesome advertising you should do, you must do, if you want to stick and advance. You should not let this great chance go by without availing yourself of it. Right here I wish to make another suggestion to the management, that a working condition be adopted, whereby the retailers could receive the full measure of co-operation. Each retailer occupying space should be able to send invitations to as many people as he wishes. Those not occupying space can pay a certain sum. These invitations to cost but little to retailer, should be printed in nice style and be uniform. We should not be far-sighted merchants if we aim first—to make money out of the show itself. We will not only not make money, but we will have sown poor seed, and while a few master-minds among us may benefit temporarily, the craft and industry as a whole will be harmed, and these few master-minds will be borne down with the rest. Everything should be done in keeping with dignity and artistry. This leads me to another suggestion that premiums should be more attractive and that all prize-winners be compelled to renew the blooms during the whole period of the show. It was positively disgusting to see so many vases of passe blooms. While I was responsible for a number of exhibits, though I did not renew the blooms, I fully resolved that another year I shall positively renew the exhibits as often as necessary. The management should not allow blue ribbons to remain attached to stale stock. It is not conducive to enlightening or educating the public, as many people cannot get to the show during the first days. This is not said in a spirit of criticism, for we all learn by experience, and I also belong to that type who are grateful when someone takes the trouble to teach me. We all can learn, and when a man gets so that he will not accept knowledge, he is passe as a useful member of the craft and community. The flower show management should welcome exhibits, should encourage them by every means and by every act. If favoritism must be played, well and good; that is up to the management, but no rule should be made that might discourage a prospective exhibitor, and even in some cases exceptions can be wisely made. Red tape is necessary, but often acts as a burden whether they be growers, seedsmen, wholesalers or retailers, so long as they belong to the profession and have meritorious blooms to exhibit. I do not infer that the management was or is incompetent, but hope they will benefit by past experience and remedy defects, and also trust that they will not take exception to suggestions. Great men have continued to learn until the end. Nothing and nobody is perfect. No one man has the only remedy for all ills. We can only hope to be nearly perfect and by adding our own experience to that knowledge which we gain by reading and learning, it is bound to help us; to be valuable to ourselves and to the community.

Another phase that I feel I must touch upon is the question of the distribution of stocks. Taking the whole situation under close scrutiny, the grower in general is undoubtedly occupying by far the most secure position, due primarily to the fact, that he is an artisan, and economically speaking a greater productive power than the trader. The trader or merchant, owing to the fact that the average trader is a greatly inferior productive power, automatically confusing and discouraging, or destroying a possibly healthy and scientific working condition, often places the whole trading wing of the craft in a difficult and impractical position. I am thoroughly convinced that but rarely do we find a talented artisan who is also an able trader. Growing and trading are two quite separate and distinct arts, and just as it takes years of experience to learn to combat difficulties that arise in growing flowers and plants, so also does it require years of experience to combat the various difficulties and problems that arise in the trading of the products. I will cite two items of comparatively recent date, items that give clear opportunity for showing how great a stride can be made toward intelligent and advantageous co-operation. First: I will refer to the congested condition of the market at Easter, 1915, due to the snow storm and for sometime after, when, if all the wholesalers could have agreed, by some concerted action to discard the left over stock, thereby bringing the market conditions back to a normal state. There were then abundant evidences of a good market, also right along before Easter. As it was the market remained paralyzed for a month after that, due to the accumulation of stocks. Second: Only recently the retailers emphatically voiced exception to the wholesalers selling to other than retail florists, and I approved of the stand taken by them. On the other hand, it is a fact that very few retailers did not then, and would not now, obtain stock direct from the grower, thereby automatically and unnecessarily robbing the commission man of what, in my opinion, are his just commissions. See how inconsistent that is. Under the existing, and at times more or less chaotic condition of the business, which imposes a hardship on the commission men to do business on a 15 per cent basis, to do business in such a way as to bring out the best efforts, is no sinecure, and I feel positive that a large proportion of the commission men, if the truth be known, could testify that it is not possible to earn an income above an amount necessary for a respectable living on a 15 per cent basis; hardly earning enough or that could be considered commensurate with the responsibilities and risks taken, and untiring energy put forth in the distribution of the stocks in order to obtain the highest possible market prices. I insist that if the commission men would use every aggressive method, generally accepted as wise by progressive merchants, they could reduce their selling expenses; by selling in bulk, often at great sacrifice (selling in bulk when market is glutted acts as a great advertising medium), but this method would not always be in line with best endeavor, and while the wholesalers may save on the item of selling expenses, the consignor will positively be the chief sufferer thereby. While some wholesalers may encourage selling to outsiders, I firmly believe that the far-sighted ones, those who are tried and experienced merchants, do not encourage and engage in selling to other than retailers. There should be a greater degree of mutual understanding and confidence among the various groups in our business.

So in closing, I say I thoroughly believe that the three groups, the grower, the wholesaler, and retailer, by co-operating, could materially enhance the whole industry. Each is necessary to the other. Each has his special function and is a vital unit in our whole economic structure. Volumes more could be written on the subject, but I feel that I have covered a good deal of the ground, while not very thoroughly, still to the extent that my thoughts may inspire our leaders to make an honest effort towards further wholesome progress, and in my opinion this can only be accomplished by approaching and treating each question from the principle of merit.

Boston:

BIG SUPPLY AND SMALL DEMAND.

During the past week business was very dull. There was little demand, and with a large supply coming in prices fell off and large lots were cleaned up at very low figures. Roses were in very heavy crop and suffered most of any line. There were large lots sold for $1 per 100 and less, but good fresh flowers brought from $2 up. Carnations held up as well as any flower, as growers are holding back their stock to some extent for Mothers' day and there does not seem to be a very large crop obtainable. Prices were $2 to $3 per 100, according to quality. White varieties found the best market. Snapdragons and yellow marguerites seem to be somewhat overdone this year. Nearly every grower has a few of each and the result is an over supply with low prices. Flowers that are above the ordinary standard sell very well, but the larger per cent is inferior and does no more than to drag down the price of good flowers and help fill the market. Sweet peas continue to be good sellers as there is rather a short crop and the retail trade demands more than usual. From 50 cents to $1.25 per 100 was received for them. Bulbous stock does not cut much of a figure now, seeming to wane in popularity, as their season closes. Good Victorias move fairly well, but tulips, hyacinth, etc., sell very slowly. Easter lilies are plentiful and sell very slowly, $2.50 to $5 per 100 being about the limit in price. Lily of the valley is scarce, but there is not much call for it. Growers are bringing in their crop for June business.

NOTES.

Wm. Marshall, who until last week was employed by the R. E. Wadsworth Co., of Westboro, has become a partner in the firm. Mr. Marshall has been with several of the well-known Boston growers as superintendent, having been with Wm. Nicholson for some years, previous to his connection with his present partners. This firm is cutting a nice lot of carnations at present, their Gorgeous, Pink Sensation and dark red seedling, Samuel Wheeler, being very fine quality.

Samuel Wax and Al Walsh spent an enjoyable week end at Lake Winapausaukee on a fishing trip. Mr. Wax had all the luck, catching one five-pound, one three-pound and a one and a half-pound lake trout.

The Waban Rose Conservatories, at Natick, have added an auto truck to their delivery service.

New York Florists' Club.

The club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the evening of May 8, President Weston in the chair. A. L. Miller reported on "New York day" at the National Flower Show, Philadelphia, which was a very enjoyable and successful excursion. There were 181½ fares on the trip, children going at half rate. Patrick O'Mara said it was a gracious act for the New York delegation to go in a body and that they were royally received. Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., spoke along the same lines. There was some discussion relating to a flower show in this city in 1917, and the president was empowered to appoint a committee of conference.

A resolution introduced by Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., was adopted, authorizing the appointment of a committee to examine all imported bulbs damaged in transit from foreign ports, the companies insuring shipments refusing to underwrite risks unless a committee of the New York Florists' Club will make a proper adjustment possible at the port of New York. The same request was made of the S. A. F. & O. H. for committees in other cities. A vote of thanks was tendered the Lord & Burnham Co. for cups given as prizes for the recent dinner-dance.

The following members were elected: John R. Walsh, 335 Broadway, New York; Albert Lahodney, Brookville, L. I., N. Y.; Dennis Kenna, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York; Cecil Davis, Flushing, N. Y.; A. Brundage, Rockville Center, N. Y.; Geo. Jenkins, of Wanamaker's, New York; Charles Brandt, of Hotel Manhattan, New York.

Alexander J. Guttman read a paper on "Economic Conditions of the Florists' Business". It was well received, and he was accorded a vote of thanks.

President Weston will shortly appoint a committee to obtain all the necessary information as to a suitable building in which the convention and trade exhibition may be held, should New York be so fortunate as to secure the S. A. F. convention of 1917.

MARKET BADLY OVERSTOCKED.

A big drop in prices was a feature of trade conditions during the past week. Carnations can be had from $10 to $20 per 1,000, while with roses it is simply a question of what variety you want. The market is so badly overstocked that price is a second consideration. Lily of the valley and orchids seem to be the only scarce items. Sweet peas are wholesaling from 50 cents to $1.00 per 100 for the best Spencer varieties. Gladioli are becoming more plentiful and the price ranges from $4 to $8 per 100.

NOTES.

Some very fine window displays were arranged by the trade during Horse Show week and business was more than satisfactory. The show is an important annual spring social event and there were many elaborate table decorations, both for luncheons and dinners.

M. J. McCabe is sending in some very fine baby gladioli; also some extra fine roses, including Killarney in both colors and Richmond.

O. A. C. Oehmler reports business as very satisfactory both in decorations and funeral work.

Geo. Lavelle is supplying the market with some exceptionally good irises in all colors.

ROSES of the newer forcing sorts in grafted stock are scarce. Russell and Ophelia are hardly to be had.

FARMERS' BULLETIN No. 721, issued by the department of agriculture, is devoted to "The Rose Chafer", eight pages with illustrations.

IMPORTERS will be interested in the recent orders in council of the British authorities covering the more expeditious manipulation of shipping documents, details of which will be found on page 908.

THE date of Easter next year will be April 8, about two weeks earlier than this season's festival (April 23), which has not fallen so late since 1905 and will not be so late again until 1943, when it occurs April 25.

The Boston Show.

The grand exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society opened at Horticultural hall, Wednesday afternoon, May 10, and displayed the best and largest variety of exhibits ever staged at this season. Secretary Rich stated the entries were more than twice in number that of any previous May meeting. It might be called a feature show, there was so much quality in nearly everything. The lecture room held Thomas Roland's fine group of Rambler roses and acacias, F. J. Dolansky's bank of orchids, other large groups, schizanthus, bouganvilleas, pelargoniums, F. R. Pierson's fine roses, and Penn's table of handsome baskets. In the loggia were arranged hydrangeas, calceolarias and azaleas. The stairway to the lower hall was lined with standard geraniums and fuchsias with wonderful baskets of the latter overhead. Immense groups of rhododendrons and a variety of plants were arranged for effect along the walls with center beds of hydrangeas, azaleas and a wonderful grouping of Japanese evergreens from Mrs. Larz Anderson. Farquahar's evergreen garden, very well done, occupied the end of the hall. The cut flowers were staged in the small hall adjoining, the feature being the Sim collections of sweet peas and pansies, all superb flowers. H. W. Locke's vegetables, bulbous stock, magnificent plants of hybrid calceolarias, and choice verbenas were in place at noon, with more stock coming in than could be properly accommodated. This undoubtedly is the best May show ever held by the society.

Houston Convention Garden.

I wish to call the attention of the trade to the fact that it is not too late to receive exhibits for the Convention Garden. Our garden is now an assured success. We have a great many substantial exhibits. The members of the trade should avail themselves of this opportunity of putting stock before the florists of the south. Remember that we will have a record breaking attendance from the south.

The southern florists are heavy buyers. This is possibly the richest field for the wholesaler of any sections of the country. Shrubs, evergreens, etc., five cents per square foot, blooming plants 10 cents per square foot. One hundred and fifty to 250 square feet will make an attractive medium exhibit.

Make shipments to C. L. Brock, Park Superintendent, Houston, Tex. Remember the florists of the south expect your co-operation.

R. C. KERR.

Burbank's Standing In England.

A note in the Garden attributing the phenomenal berry to Luther Burbank, recalls a recently noted fact that the company formed to exploit this so-called wizard of the west has been wound up with apparently no more tangible assets than the echoes of the wonderful stories which were built up around the name and reputation of Burbank a few years ago. Of his many creations, the phenomenal berry is perhaps the most durable testimony to his quaint exploits in hybridization. Of the stoneless plum, and the spineless cacti, beside innumerable other fearsome and awesome freaks, contemporary history is strangely silent. There is no doubt that Burbank possesses remarkable gifts and it is a pity for horticulture that he was not content to develop them upon the patient and methodical lines of horticultural science. Nature won't be hustled even by a wizard.—British Nurseryman and Seedsman.

The Late Uriah B. Wakeman.

Uriah B. Wakeman, manager of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply Co., Detroit, Mich., died in Harper's hospital, in that city, Monday night, May 1. He had been ill two weeks. Mr. Wakeman was born in Fenton, Mich., about 70 years ago. In his early life he was engaged in the produce business and entered the wholesale florist business about 10 years ago. He is survived by two brothers. His wife died several years ago. J. F. S.

American Institute of the City of N. Y.

The American Institute of the City of New York and the American Dahlia Society will hold an exhibition of dahlias in the Engineering Society building, 25-33 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, September 26-28, 1916. Eagleson, secretary of board of managers, 324 West Twenty-third street, New York.

Lincoln Highway.

The Lincoln Highway Association, at its annual meeting, determined to have as many seedling miles of concrete road built as possible during the coming year. Where the town or village, city or county will agree to build the seedling mile, the association agrees to furnish free the cement for the purpose, the local authorities to furnish the labor and other material and build according to the association's specifications.

Belgian Plants.

Arthur De Meyer, of Ghent, Belgium, grower of azaleas and other specialties, in his catalogue just received says that while he is located in the zone of active hostilities, his stock is uninjured and he expects to be able to make shipments as he did last season, with the consent of the German and British authorities. De Meyer's American agents are McHutchison & Co., New York.

American Gladiolus Society.

The seventh annual exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society will be held under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., August 11-13, 1916. The preliminary schedule covering prizes offered in 86 classes is now ready for distribution and copies may be obtained upon application to Henry Youell, secretary, 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y.

FAVORABLE WEATHER AND GOOD BUSINESS.

Trade conditions during the past week have been very good. The weather seems to have been made to order—warm days, cool nights and a dry atmosphere. Carnations sold last week at from two to three cents, closing Saturday at four cents and are now quoted at six and eight cents. It is hard to predict what they will be at the last of the week for the Mothers' day demand. Roses are more plentiful but have also advanced in price with carnations. Sweet peas are coming fine and bring from $1.00 to $1.50 per 100. Irises are of fine quality but gladioli are not up to standard. Both are selling at four cents. Outdoor stock is backward, being about three weeks behind in most cases. Peonies are in fine condition but are breaking late. Several of the local trade are refusing orders for carnations for Mothers' day on the grounds that they do not intend to have their customers who have been paying from 75 cents to $1.25 per dozen class them as "robber generals" by asking them to pay from $2 to $4. Good general business is looked for for the day, as the demand for cut stock will be as good as it was at Easter if prices are not prohibitive.

NOTES.

Wm. D. Desmond, for a number of years manager of the flower department of the L. S. Donaldson Co., has leased the S. S. Cargill establishment of about 35,000 feet of glass and 20 acres of ground for a period of 10 years. Mr. Desmond's resignation has not yet been accepted by the Donaldson Co., and he will continue at the "old stand" until Memorial day. He will grow pot plants and bulbous stock principally, for the trade only.

Hugh Will and Max Kaiser made a canvass of the city for a co-operative ad. in the daily papers and found all of the trade ready with their share of the expense. The same illustrative matter that was used last year will be used this year and the movement to stimulate greater interest in the day will be under the auspices of the florists' club.

Robert Latham has finished planting at his place at Lake Minnetonka. He reports everything a little backward, but the past few days which have been warm have started everything—including the weeds.

Thos. Lynes has been rushed with orders for church wedding decorations and funeral work since Easter. He is contemplating adding to his force.

Geo. Eckter, formerly at Wesslings Lakewood Greenhouses has taken charge of the F. P. Nash estate at Wayzata, Lake Minnetonka.

Art. Rice is manager and John Rovic, captain, of the local florists' baseball team. Keep your eye on this bunch this season.

R. N. Rudlinger, landscape architect, has a force of about 150 at work in this vicinity, and could use more if he could get them.

H. B. Whitted is showing a fine window arrangement of bird houses and garden accessories. It attracts much attention.

Gust. Malmquist has the Bell estate in fine condition at Lake Minnetonka, where he has a large force of men at work.

The next meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association will be held at the store of Holm & Olson, St. Paul.

The Eldridge Floral Co. is showing a very tasty arrangement of sweet peas, irises and gladioli in its windows.

Oscar Amundson has been on the sick list since Easter. Too much business and long hours.

Everybody is rested up after the largest volume of Easter business ever done in this city.

Rice Bros. have a new delivery truck which Ed. Rice says refuses to "eat any dust."

Chas. Crum left last week for Chicago.
T. C. R.

LAKE LINDEN, MICH.—Numerous improvements will be made at the Pearce Floral Co.'s range this spring, under direction of the superintendent, H. C. Gray.

MISSOULA, MONT.—The R. & S. Flower Store reports 1916 Easter trade double that of a year ago. The cut flower and plant supply was equal to all demands and prices, which were higher than last year, aided in the excellent sales recorded.

CARNATIONS IN HEAVY DEMAND.

Trade the past week has been very good and stock of all kinds cleaned up nicely at satisfactory prices. Orders were numerous Friday and Saturday, April 5-6, and arrived in a steady stream, making it appear as if some one had pressed a button and released them all at once. Roses are plentiful in the longer grades and there are enough to go around if one is willing to pay the price. Short roses are in brisk demand and are very scarce. Long roses are twice as long as the short roses are short, and this applies to both quantity and stem. Some exceptionally fine Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ophelia, Richmond, Rhea Reid, Milady and Hoosier Beauty are obtainable, and there now seems to be enough long stemmed American Beauty roses to go around. Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and Double White Killarney are seen in large numbers, but are moving well. Carnations are in heavy demand for Mothers' day, and are already pretty well sold up at high prices. Many of the dealers are refusing orders and are only accepting orders from their regular customers on assorted stock. The buyers will no doubt have to fall back on roses toward the end of the week, for it will be impossible to fill anywhere near the demand for carnations, and then, besides, the public in a great many instances prefer roses any way, and are not particularly interested, even though the trade may be, in whether or not the carnation is the official flower for the day. Sweet peas are plentiful and are bringing good prices and it would not be at all surprising if they cleaned up completely for Mothers' day. Orchids are still very scarce and command high prices. of the valley and gardenias are none too plentiful, but there seems to be plenty of lilies and callas on hand. Peonies are in larger supply, but most of the flowers offered are from Tennessee, and compare most favorably in quality to those which came from the same source last year. Spanish iris is in good supply and the same holds good for gladioli, which are gradually becoming more plentiful. Lupines, single and double stocks, pansies, daisies, calendulas, lilac, feverfew, sweet alyssum, candytuft, swainsonas, mignonette, Narcissus poeticus, jonquils, daffodils, poppies, tulips and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is to be had and comes in handy for basket work, funeral orders and window decorations. Some of the dealers are inclined to think that there will be plenty of stock for Mothers' day with the exception of carnations, orchids and lily of the valley, but it does not appear so to one who has kept pretty close tab on conditions and who predicts a general shortage before the stores close Sunday noon, May 14. Most of the local peony growers report that there will be very few home-grown peonies, if any, for Memorial day, for the crops are unusually late, but advices from the south are that the crop will be considerably larger than last season.

NOTES.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are handling a fine supply of roses and carnations and report a very good Mothers' day trade. Both the local and out-of-town demand for carnations for this occasion have been numerous and they had all the orders that they could conveniently handle. Mr. Vaughan thinks that roses will have a good sale the latter part of the week when the retail florists will have to fall back on them, owing to the great shortage of carnations.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting from a large crop of Mrs. George Shawyer roses which are in good demand at their store and are bringing very satisfactory prices. This firm is one of the few that are growing this variety in this vicinity and speak very highly of it. The demand for carnations for Mothers' day was heavier than ever this year at this house, and it was impossible to supply anywhere near the demand.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is in good crop with roses and are offering splendid stock in all the varieties that they grow, particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia, which are attracting the attention of the buyers at the city salesroom. The demand for carnations for Mothers' day was never better than it is this year, and while they will have a good supply to offer it will be impossible to fill all the orders that keep coming in. John Poehlmann, Jr., is on the job in the cut flower department every day and promises to be as efficient a merchant as his father, who has been in active charge for many years up to the last few months. In the supply department Manager Waters and his assistants have a large supply of made up wreaths on hand for Memorial day ready to ship out at a moment's notice.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a splendid supply of carnations in all the leading varieties which are cleaning up nicely each day. This firm has thrown out 14 houses of American Beauty roses, but are still offering a large quantity and will grow them on a large scale again next season. A liberal supply of the miniature rose, Mrs. George Elgar, are now included in their daily shipments.

Peter Reinberg is having a heavy call for stock for Mothers' day and while carnations are naturally in best demand, roses are selling nicely and Manager Reichling looks for a grand cleanup before the week is over. The shipping trade the past week has been exceedingly heavy at this house and the local demand has shown a decided improvement.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association report a great increase in sales during last April over the same month in 1915, and the outlook for May, so far, is very encouraging. Chas. W. McCauley recovered sufficiently from a severe cold to pay his regular visit to the store this week.

Percy Jones is having a big run on fancy ferns, which are the best that he ever had to offer at this season of the year. Manager Van Gelder reports trade as very good for Mothers' day with a brisk demand for carnations, particularly white.

Erne & Klingel are enjoying a splendid season and have booked a large number of nice orders for Mothers' day. They will have a large supply of peonies to offer again this season in addition to their regular complete line of stock.

Chas. W. McKellar is very sick and is confined to his country home, in Niles Township. His right hand man, Frank Ayres, is in charge at the store during his illness.

Otto Benthey, formerly foreman at the George Reinberg greenhouses, has taken charge of L. A. Budlong's new range of Dietsch houses at Niles Centre.

The John Kruchten Co. will have a large supply of peonies to offer as usual for Memorial day and is now booking orders for same.

Kyle & Foerster report a splendid demand for fancy home grown gardenias which are in good supply with them now.

M. C. Gunterberg added a new sweet pea grower to her list this week and is now soliciting regular consignments of peonies.

Harold Amling, seventeen-year-old son of E. C. Amling, is the latest addition to the E. C. Amling Co.'s store force.

Meyer & Dramm are figuring on installing a cold storage plant at their Elmhurst greenhouses in the near future.

George Wienhoeber has leased the store on East Monroe street, now occupied by the Washington Shirt Co., and will take possession August 1. The new store will be an addition to his present establishment on South Wabash avenue and all the changes that are necessary to convert the two places into one is the knocking out of the partition in the east of his place, which will give him an L shaped shop with an entrance on both streets. Mr. Wienhoeber has only been in business for himself for 16 months, but is rapidly forging to the front and when the alterations are completed, he will have one of the finest and largest retail shops in the loop.

The A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co. withdrew all its quotations on paper boxes May 4, on which day the trade was notified of a 50 per cent increase in prices. The Arnold Co. has had a banner season and their factory was operated day and night for five days a week all during April so that their orders could be all gotten out on time.

O. Johnson inspected the Batavia Greenhouse Co.'s peonies, Sunday, May 7, and says that from present indications it does not look as if there will be any stock to cut for Memorial day. He estimates that their crop will be at least one-third smaller than last season.

F. J. Benthey reports a ready demand for geraniums which they are growing in quantity at their New Castle, Ind., greenhouses.

George Perdikas has installed a Buchbinder refrigerator in his store at East Van Buren street and South Wabash avenue.

J. A. Valentine, of Denver, Colo., was a visitor this week and reports fine Easter business.

OTTAWA, ONT.—A feature of the Easter demand this year was the exceptionally heavy call for roses, due to the fact that St. George's day fell on Easter. Every man in a big church procession wore a rose.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Morrison, May 4, President Henderson in the chair. Routine business was given attention and O. J. Friedman, the well known Congress hotel florist, then introduced the matter of our next flower show, describing a plan by which a successful exhibition could be held at the Coliseum in November, the Florists' Club, Horticultural Society and the management of the Home for Crippled Children co-operating. Mr. Friedman stated the society leaders could be easily interested in such an undertaking, which should result in the financial benefit of everyone concerned and give a great impetus to business in all horticultural lines. After considerable discussion this proposition was referred to the president of the club with the suggestion that it be taken up with President Rudd, of the Horticultural Society, and the manager of the Home for Crippled Children.

A communication on Mothers' day and its founder, Miss Anna Jarvis, from Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, Pa., was presented, the writer suggesting the propriety of creating a florists' fund for the use of Miss Jarvis in her Mothers' day work, and the secretary was instructed to advise Mr. Kift that the club would be glad to give the matter its fullest consideration on receipt of information as to what other organizations have done, or propose to do with regard to it.

Anton Then sent the president a gavel made from a wild smilax root, which Mr. Then had secured on one of his trips to Magnolia Springs, Ala. The gavel was duly presented and accepted with the thanks and appreciation of the president and members.

John Smith, a local advertising man, discussed a plan of advertising in the daily papers which he thought would benefit the trade, if the growers, wholesalers and retailers could be induced to provide the necessary capital.

The proposals for membership included Carl Eiesmann, care of W. H. Amling, Maywood; W. E. O'Morrow, 558 Fulton street, and Chester P. Guion, 2730 North California avenue.

Trade visitors in attendance included J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., and Walter Mott, representing Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.

WET WEATHER FAILS TO STOP TRADE.

Business has been unusually good, notwithstanding a week of rainy weather. Stock in all lines has been equal to the demand, Easter lilies being particularly plentiful and priced low in quantities of 100 or more. Outdoor tulips and daffodils are also arriving in good quantities, but the demand is slow. Carnations are cleaning up daily, and while they will be in good supply for Mothers' day, advance orders already booked point to a short market. Roses are good in quality and the supply will be good. American Beauties will be plentiful. Gladioli are snapped up quickly and the baby variety is also good stock.

NOTES.

The feature of the May meeting of the florists' club was a lecture by Mr. Beynon of the Sheldon school, who took for his subject "How to Select Men for the Florist Business." The speaker who used phrenology, or "head reading," to a certain extent created a vast amount of interest and some amusement and gave the members present a rare treat. Felix Zelter, gardener for Price McKinney, of Wickliffe, O., staged a splendid display of carnations. Among them were some splendid Pink Sensation, Enchantress, Ward and Princess Dagmar, the blooms measuring fully five inches across.

The annual May party, held at Chamber of Industry hall, May 4, was fairly well attended and a good time is reported by all who were present.

TORONTO, ONT.—An elaborate display of plants and cut flowers was viewed by throngs of delighted visitors during Easter week at the establishment of F. W. Adams. The electric lighting of the store at night was planned in such a way as to make a very pretty color scheme. This display pleased the public, who in turn pleased Mr. Adams by increasing his Easter business nearly 60 per cent over that of 1915.

OUTDOOR PLANTING IN FULL SWING.

Real summer weather has advanced the planting season several days and everything in that line is now in full swing. Cut stock of most kinds is scarce. Roses are in the lead in numbers and sweet peas have picked up considerably, but the supply of carnations continues limited. Outdoor lilac plays a big part in the arrangement of bouquets. Pot plants continue to sell well and are substituted for cut flowers wherever possible. Indications point to a scarcity and high prices for Mothers' day.

NOTES.

H. Kusik & Co. have booked heavy orders for Mothers' day and report the demand greater than the supply. Orders for wire work continue to pour in faster than they can be handled.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports a good trade. A Mother's day window is attracting much attention at this establishment, the telegraph service being made a feature of the display.

W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports good business in general. The supply of roses and carnations is good, but there is no surplus. Boxes and basket arrangements sell well here.

Wm. Foith reports the spring trade in full swing. Numerous orders for porch boxes and baskets were in evidence on the order file.

T. J. Noll & Co. are handling good roses and carnations from Colorado. They anticipate a record breaking business for Mothers' day.

W. J. Barnes has been busy and reports good sales of plants, porch boxes, hanging baskets, etc. He has several large orders for landscape planting.

A. Newell has no complaint to make about business. Everything is moving along in good shape and the spring trade gives promise of being a "hummer."

Stock is moving well with Adolph D. Mohr. He wholesales most of the product of his establishment and hopes to clean up in two weeks or so.

TRADE CONTINUES GOOD.

Business seems to be keeping up well; in fact, just as brisk as a month ago. The stock of all varieties of flowers is holding out satisfactorily. Roses are still fine, though outdoor stock is not as good or as plentiful as a week ago. There are some bulbous stocks still being shown, such as irises and anemones. Gladioli are becoming plentiful and are looking fine. The Blushing Bride and America are varieties mostly seen. Orchids and lily of the valley may be seen in small quantities. There has been considerable business of late in both wedding and funeral work. The death of one of our police sergeants brought considerable business to some of the florists.

NOTES.

The Wright Flower Shop's window was highly and artistically decorated. Judging by the assortment shown, one could hardly imagine a flower that was not in the display, besides, several decorative plants. They usually have something to show.

O. C. Saakes reports good business this week; in fact his force was very busy when your correspondent called. He had some fine irises and anemones in yellow, and some unusually good Blushing Bride gladioli.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldenson have been showing some splendid gladioli. Their stock of roses is still up to standard. They continue to be busy with funeral work.

The Redondo Floral Co. reports a good business this week. Situated as they are, they have a fine transient trade. They had some elegant American Beauties in stock. G. H. H.

WONDERFUL DEMAND AFTER EASTER RUSH.

The weather is as usual for May, one day warm and the next cold and rainy. The reaction from Easter is very apparent. Never in the history of this city was the Easter trade as good as this year. Plant arrangements and baskets were more in demand than ever before and the call for corsages was phenomenal. Roses, carnations and other cut stock show a limited sale. American Beauties sold well as did orchids, gardenias and sweet peas, the latter of wonderful quality. Church decorations were as elaborate as in other years with a more lavish display of flowering plants which added much to the sales in that class. Following Easter was one of the busiest weeks known to the trade, due to the fact that Easter came so late, bringing many weddings into one week and the trade was tried to the limit to fill orders.

NOTES.

Vacation time is approaching. S. A. Anderson is in Michigan on his yearly trout fishing trip. W. J. Palmer has been enjoying a rest following the rush and Felix Albers has also been away. Ludwig Neubeck has been in Williamsville. The postmaster has a perennial rest. Billy Adams moved across the street—no rest.

"Near to Governor Mahoney" in the automobile "Socialist Queen", expects to tour the state, unprepared but game for the cause. His journey will begin about June 15—and he usually makes his mark.

The percentage of replaces was never so small before, practically nothing, and the florists are congratulating themselves on the few mistakes reported. System in the business is becoming more apparent each year.

S. A. Anderson has been having from three to five weddings daily, following Easter. This made April one of the best months in the year with him.

The window displays are varied with a few left over plants to the most inviting orchids, sweet peas and roses.

The Optimists now meet at the Iroquois hotel. Eddie Stroh should be on the job at all times. No excuse now.

Removals among the florists are not reported this year.

INTERESTING CLUB MEETING.

Two new members, L. B. Varney and G. W. Matthews, of Schenectady, were admitted to the florists' club at the May meeting. After a brief session an adjournment was taken to the State Education building, where Prof. Edward A. White, of the department of floriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., delivered an illustrated lecture on "Orchids." Prof. White was introduced by Fred Goldring, formerly president of the club. In the course of his address Prof. White described the various classes of orchids, their habits of growth, and commercial methods of culture. A feature of the talk was a large number of colored slides, showing specimens of the better known varieties. The lecture was heard with interest by the members of the club and a small number of citizens who were flower lovers.

One of the finest displays in the city are the tulips in bloom on the grounds of George C. Hawley, 994 Madison avenue. There are 84,000 bulbs set out in 43 beds of various sizes. The largest bed contains about 3,200 tulips and the smallest 200. The flowers are of all colors, and of both single and double varieties. The display attracts a great deal of attention; automobiles and carriages from all parts of the city drive past the front and rear of the premises. The grounds are in GREATEST OVERSUPPLY IN A YEAR.

This city experienced the first glut of the season the past week—no such quantity of flowers has been thrown on the market in an equal period of time for over a year. Easter lilies and callas appear to be very plentiful, coming in daily with no market or demand for this class of stock; whole ranges of shelves are given up to these flowers in the hope that something will turn up to make a demand for them. Roses of all kinds, snapdragon, carnations galore and all other flowers seasonable at this time fairly flood the market and tax every avenue of distribution to handle them with as little loss as possible. In speaking of market conditions Leo Niessen said the great influx of said it was tough work last week, but they had managed to move all the stock at low figures. The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. had found the market fuller than at any time this season. Cattleyas were the only scarce flower; everything else could be had in any quantity at buyers' prices. Miniature gladioli were a feature. It was thought here that the worst was over. It had been a bad week with Edward Reid; not that he had not done business, but the supply was so far ahead of the demand that it took them nearly all the time to take care of the stock. He claimed he would have a million carnations for Mothers' day.

The trade is looking forward towards Mothers' day, hoping that the demand for this new flower day may clean up the market. If it does, perhaps the great contrast between the returns of last week and this may move the growers and others benefited to come forward with a trifle of their gains to help foster and care for the Mothers' day movement that has done so much for them.

NOTES.

Not the slightest effort of any kind has been made by the trade in this city, where the idea originated, to further the movement of Mothers' day. Were the various shops under one control there is no doubt but what the possibilities of the day would be encouraged and made the most of by liberal advertising and elaborate window displays. The Western Union Telegraph Co. has appropriated $20,000 to boost Mothers' day; all of their 1,500 offices have been supplied with special Mothers' day sending and receiving blanks, leaflets calling attention to the day, and large Mothers' day counter or window cards with cuts of white carnations and the inscription, "The White Carnation is the Flower of the Day." This should give an impetus to the day such as it has never had before, and which will be felt the country over.

The King Construction Co. has opened an office at 307 Harrison building, Fifteenth and Market streets, this city. W. J. Muth is in charge. Mr. Muth reports a great increase in business. Two houses, iron frame construction, one 54x308 feet and another 16x308 feet, are going up for A. H. Hoffheimer of New Jersey; also one 42x183 feet for James Verner, Garrettsford, Pa.

H. H. Battles is now at 114 South Twelfth street, where he has greatly increased facilities. Vases of ixias and columbines were features of his Chestnut street case. The latter were very beautiful.

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.

116-118 Seventh St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

There is some talk of a combination among the commission men and growers, looking to the control of credits in this market. Nothing definite has as yet been done.

One of the central commission houses is looking for a new location, they having to move on account of change of ownership in the property. W. H. Hansell, 6025 Market street, reports a splendid spring business. His special line of funeral work keeps him at it all the time.

Very choice Prima Donna roses are being received from the Florex Gardens by Eugene Bernheimer. K.

Holyoke and Northampton Club.

The regular monthly meeting was held May 2 in the city hall, Holyoke. There was but a small attendance of members, due to the fact that many were badly hit by the "spring fever." Lucius E. Wilson, of Springfield, was a visitor and spoke entertainingly of the purposes of the Eastern States Agricultural Exposition, which is to open in West Springfield next October. Permanent buildings are now in course of erection, and the speaker suggested the possibility of arranging for a big flower show there at some future date. There was but one exhibit, an exceptionally fine plant of Hydrangea Otaksa in a 9-inch pot, grown and exhibited by George Strugnell, which was deservedly awarded a certificate of merit. He has promised to tell us how to go and do likewise. H. E. D.

MAY MAKES POOR START.

Relating to the florist business, May made a poor start, though it must be admitted that it might have been worse, for during the past week there were but two really warm days. However, it seemed to be what the old farmers call "growing weather," for a tremendous amount of stock reached this market. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, lilies and various other stocks were in great supply. Gardenias and violets have for some time been common sights on the trays of the street vendors, but now they have added roses, sweet peas, pansies and other stock. When a street corner stand can offer long stem American Beauties for $2 and $2.50 per dozen, we take it that the wholesale price must be low, for these gentlemen are not in business for their health. No doubt the cool weather has largely contributed toward the preservation of the narcissus, but its finish cannot be long delayed. As late as May 6 there was a quantity of fair yellow narcissus on the market, which wholesaled at $2 per 100. Carnations, which had been holding up better than other stocks, are now being "jettisoned," as the sailors say. It is unnecessary to add that the retail business is light. As one street corner humorist recently put it: "I could make a lot of money if I could only sell the stock." Easter lilies and callas are very plentiful and hard to move. Stocks, snapdragons, lilacs and other flowering shrubbery are in abundant supply.

May 8.—The outlook for this week is not reassuring. While prices dropped low during the past week, the prospects are that the bottom has not yet been reached. Short roses are selling as low as 25 cents per 100, and on May 6, special stock, late in the day, went as low as $3 and $4 per 100. We will repeat that we quote only fresh stock. There is practically no price on American Beauties; while some fresh stock in specials sold today for $15 per 100, there were sales of fair stock at $4 per 100. Roses that lay over a day are, as a rule, going to the push cart men. We have cut out narcissi and violets, as they are no longer factors. Down on Vesey street the auction district seems to be doing a thriving business in plants. For a block, this morning, the curb was lined with wagons loaded with bedding, carnation and other plants, waiting to be unloaded. In addition, cases of imported plants were coming in. The plant trade will loom large for the remainder of the month.

NOTES.

We have stated in our opening notes that conditions might have been worse during the past week, but in looking over the situation May 6, we concluded that it could not have been much worse. Saturday is usually looked for in this market to redeem to some extent the failures of preceding days, but on this occasion the market went broke. For a cool season the quantity of stock that arrived May 6 was surprising. As to sweet peas, it would be more appropriate to say that they came by the bale than by the box, and most of it good stock, too; but, when there is not a demand for half of it, what can be done with the remainder? It has seemed to us for years that just as soon as a good thing reaches this market all the growers jump in and spoil it. Of course, this condition cannot be expected to last long, but it is discouraging while it does last. Another feature that has been overdone is the growing of Spanish iris. We formerly saw a reasonable amount of it, which moved freely; now it comes in by the tens of thousands. It is an attractive feature, but in oversupply. Violets may as well be counted out for this season.

Dr. William H. Allen, director of the Institute for Public Safety, has written a letter to Park Commissioner Cabot Ward, protesting against the granting of concessions for restaurants in which alcoholic drinks are sold, in Central park. Dr. Allen amplified his letter by a statement which in part follows: "We have urged the park commissioner to advertise that no bids will be received next Wednesday and to draw up new advertisements and new contracts which will express modern ideas of park use and public recreation. Whatever is done with regard to dancing, we believe that parents, teachers, and social workers—and policemen—of this city will be shocked when they take in the fact that Park Commissioner Cabot Ward proposed to install in McGown's Pass tavern and the casino a combination of alcohol, tobacco, dancing and 50-cent table d'hôte." The writer believes that this is an eminently correct view. A public park, largely patronized by young men and women, is no place for "booze."

It has been said that one man's loss is another man's gain, but taken in the aggregate, we doubt it. As noted in our issue of May 6, the market gardeners and seedsmen are losing on account of the activities of the munition factories. This war cannot last forever; in fact, there are pointed indications that it will not last long. The feverish desire for high wages has drawn thousands of men away from steady and healthful employment. When the munition factories shut down, as sooner or later they must, will these men have gained?

The new store of J. H. Small & Sons, 505 Madison avenue, corner of 52d street, was opened for business May 1. As one of their competitors naively remarked: "When it comes to a fine display, Small has us all skinned alive." We shall elsewhere refer to this store. John H. Small came from Washington for the opening, and was greatly pleased. He looks as young as when we first knew him, nearly 20 years ago, which is more than can be said of most of us who have passed the half-century mark.

The spring inspection of the New York botanical gardens, Bronx Park, took place on the afternoon of May 4. Many invitations were sent out by the board of managers and the women's auxiliary. Some time was spent in viewing the palm collection and the flower gardens, after which many other points of interest were visited. Tea was poured in the Museum building at 4:30. The women's auxiliary is headed by Mrs. Henry Marquand.

A meeting of the alumni of past presidents of the New York Florists' Club was held at Traendly & Schenck's, May 8. The following were present: A. S. Burns, Frank Traendly, Wm. H. Duckham, Walter F. Sheridan, C. H. Totty, Jos. A. Manda, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Chas. Weathered. A. S. Burns is president and Joseph A. Manda, secretary. This is a social organization, and we understand that a leading feature will be a monthly re-union and dinner.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society was held at the office of Traendly & Schenck on the afternoon of May 8. There were present: S. S. Pennock, Admiral Aaron Ward, Benjamin Hammond, H. O. May, Robert Pyle and Prof. Mulford, of Washington, D. C. A more detailed report will later be furnished by Secretary Hammond.

The annual meeting of the Cut Flower Exchange was held May 6. Important business transacted was the election of five directors. Frank Milang, Anton Schultheis, Fred Smith and John Schneider were re-elected. Philip F. Kessler, who declined re-election, was succeeded by George Golsner. We understand that the exchange is in a prosperous condition.

M. A. Bowe is now well established in his new store, 332 Fifth avenue, and reports good business. Mr. Bowe is yet a comparatively young man. He started at the foot of the ladder and has worked up to be one of the most successful retailers of this city and deserves credit for it.

P. F. Kessler, in the Coogan building, is receiving nice outdoor lily of the valley, which we believe sells about as well, if not better, than the average indoor stock, much of which, for some reason, is poor.

G. E. M. Stumpp, with several of his men, is at Southampton, L. I., making preparations to reopen his summer store at that place. We understand that last year he had a very successful season.

The Walter R. Siebrecht Co. has been receiving about 4,000 Spanish irises per day and it is fine stock, but must take chances with the rest of the surplus.

Max Schling, in addition to the usual run of cut flower orders, is now very busy with landscape, window box and vase work.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., President; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., First Vice-President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer, Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20-22, 1916.

SWEET CORN is in good demand.

VISITED CHICAGO: Henry Nungesser, of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., New York.

THERE has been an increased demand for garden beans this week and nearly all kinds are sold out.

It is reported from Fremont, Neb., that the ground is dry and that wheat is beginning to show damage, some fields being plowed to replace the wheat with corn.

THE Los Angeles Times of April 30 says that congress at Washington is full of petty graft. Absence of big men is noticeable and mileage grabbers and free seed men are prominent.

OMAHA, NEB.—The Stewart Seed Co. reports splendid business in seeds, plants and garden supplies of all kinds. The store has been redecorated and presents a very attractive appearance.

VISITED NEW YORK: J. Chas. McCullough, of Cincinnati, O., and A. J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich., were in the city May 6, stopping for bait on their way to the fishing grounds down Chesapeake bay.

THE American Seed Trade Association meets at Chicago, June 20-22. Seedsmen who desire to join and participate in the proceedings should write Secretary Kendall at Cleveland, O. The association is needed by every seedsmen.

FRENCH advices at the end of April indicate that two kinds of Narcissus, Trumpet Major and Soleil d'Or, are scarce items. It is believed that the stiff prices already asked for Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora will show a tendency to go up.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade May 10 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.75 per 100 pounds.—Corn planting begins the coming week. A panicky demand for live seed has been expected, but is not yet at hand. Seed potatoes are lower.

NEW YORK.—In the downtown seed trade district business seems to have been exceptionally good the past week and this week opened with great activity. At Henderson's, Vaughan's, MacNiff's, Elliott's, Thorburn's and other stores, May 8, they seemed to have all the business they could handle.

ONION SETS of the 1916 crop at Chicago will be owned by growers as well as by contracting jobbers, since more growers than usual have made outright purchases of the seed, and will take their chances in selling the product on the open market. Just at the close of the season some attractive cut prices were made by certain overstocked California seed growers and the low rate tempted the local truckers to speculate on a supply for their acreage.

HARRISBURG, PA.—Heroic effort on the part of Mrs. Holmes, wife of H. L. Holmes, of the Holmes Seed Co., saved the life of a domestic in the Holmes residence when her clothing became ignited from a match. The girl was severely burned and Mrs. Holmes also suffered painful injury to both hand and arms from the flames.

California Frost Injury.

L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, advises that heavy frost, May 7, seriously injured sweet peas in the San Juan and Watsonville sections. The damage is irregular and can not be estimated at present. Grapefruit, potatoes and truck crops are badly damaged in the great Sacramento valley. This is the latest killing frost found in the 40 years' record of the weather bureau.

Rocky Ford Melons.

Muskmelons of the Rocky Ford type, grown in localities other than Rocky Ford, Colo., may be labeled "Rocky Ford," provided the name of the state or territory where the melons are produced is stated on the principal label, according to a recent decision of the United States bureau of chemistry. This decision was reached for the reason that the term "Rocky Ford," as applied to muskmelons, has come to mean a particular type of muskmelon grown in various localities of the United States.

Government Helps Co-operative Combines.

TO DETRIMENT OF SMALL MERCHANTS.

Flour & Feed calls attention to the fact that Secretary Houston, of the United States department of agriculture, deems it the legitimate duty of state and county agents to organize co-operative associations. The paragraph in question is as follows:

"The department considers it a legitimate function of the county agents to aid the farmers in organizing associations for the co-operative purchase of farm commodities. The agent is expected to assist in an advisory way such associations in purchasing their farm supplies upon the best possible terms."

Flour & Feed discredits this attempt to eliminate the local dealer in the various county towns, believing that such dealer is an absolute necessity to the consumer and should not be driven out of business, that he is already governed by competition and it should not be the duty of the United States agents to drive him out of business.

There would be no end to possible government operations of this kind, already widely extended, if the government is to hire experts in every line. Undoubtedly the government has just as much right to arrange for co-operative buying of cut flowers and blooming plants and establishment of agents therefor, doing away with the local florist and seedsmen as they have to establish county agents for practically the same purpose in country districts.

Clark Seed Co. Expands.

The Everett B. Clark Seed Co., of Milford, Conn., has just purchased the two adjacent seed growing establishments, including farms, buildings, and equipment of Albertus N. Clark and Clifford E. Clark, seed growers of long standing. The two farms are so situated between their own original farm and the Fenn farm purchased a year ago, as to join the two and make their present holdings one complete whole. Albertus N. Clark, in retiring from the seed growing business, thanks his numerous friends for their many years' patronage.

Shipping Documents Not Delayed.

IMPORTANT TO IMPORTERS.

Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade of Great Britain, on May 6, 1916, made the important announcement of certain orders in council in the nature of concessions to neutral trade, among which is the following order:

"Business documents from shippers to and from neutral countries will be placed in a separate bag, which will receive immediate examination, and will proceed on the ship on which it was originally mailed. No guarantee will be given that this bag will not be opened, but shippers will be assured that there will be no delay."

This is a confirmation of the agreement made at a conference between Sir Richard Crawford, of the British embassy at Washington, D. C., with Curtis Nye Smith, the counsel for the seed and nursery trade associations, on March 30, 1916, in order to overcome the very serious difficulties arising from the action of the British censor in holding up shipping documents of the seed and nursery stock shipped from neutral countries to American importers.

American Seed for Ontario.

Seeds are exported from Prince Edward county, in the Kingston consular district, to all parts of the world. This year, however, grass and all other seeds are being imported from the United States, and importers state that the demand is so great that they experienced difficulty in filling orders. The shortage of seeds is attributable principally to unfavorable weather conditions, lack of labor, and less acreage grown. More seeds will be planted this spring than ever before; vegetables of all kinds are to be raised. The canneries in this district have disposed of last year's surplus stock and with orders now on hand for the coming season, they will be kept very busy. The canning industry of Prince Edward county is the principal and most important of its kind in the Province of Ontario.

To Inoculate Seed.

Coating the seed of legumes with inoculated soil before planting is a simple method of insuring soil inoculation at slight cost. County agents in Illinois have found ordinary furniture glue effective in holding particles of inoculated soil to the seeds. This method gives each individual seed some of the particles of inoculated soil which it carries with it when it is planted. The scheme requires but a small amount of inoculated soil and costs but a few cents an acre. The method is described in Farmers' Bulletin 704 of the United States department of agriculture.

Dissolve two handfuls of furniture glue for every gallon of boiling water and allow the solution to cool. Put the seed in a washtub and then sprinkle enough of the solution on the seed to moisten but not to wet it (1 quart per bushel is sufficient) and stir the mixture thoroughly until all the seeds are moistened.

Secure the inoculated soil from a place where the same kind of plants as the seed are growing, making sure that the roots have a vigorous development of nodules. Dry the soil in the shade, preferably in the barn or basement, and pulverize it thoroughly into a dust. Scatter this dust over the moistened seed, using from one-half to one gallon of dirt for each bushel of seed, mixing thoroughly until the seed no longer stick together. The seed are then ready to sow.

Strawberry Acreage Report.

The acreage in strawberries in 19 states is estimated by the United States department of agriculture, bureau of crop estimates, to be 111,543 acres in 1916 as compared with 93,155 acres last year, an increase of 19.7 per cent. The condition of the crop, April 1, 1916, was as follows: New Jersey, 95; Delaware, 82; Virginia, 90; North Carolina, 85; South Carolina, 80; Florida, 69; Kentucky, 99; Tennessee, 95; Alabama, 80; Mississippi, 77; Louisiana, 85; Texas, 65; Arkansas, 92; Washington, 93; Oregon, 90; California, 94. No figures are available for May 1, but it is thought no material change has taken place and the condition of the crop throughout the country may be considered excellent.

Summer Treatment of Greenhouse Soil.

The application of commercial fertilizers to greenhouse soils is not a common practice and it is generally conceded that their use on good, well prepared composts is of little value. Experiments conducted at the Ohio agricultural experiment station, Wooster, and described in Bulletin No. 43, issued by that station, show that the application of nitrogenous fertilizers to tomatoes, lettuce and radishes is without decided benefit when these crops are grown on sod compost. Extended experiments by Stewart with Grand Rapids lettuce lead to the conclusion that to show results with commercial fertilizers a soil must be used that is somewhat deficient in plant food, according to Bulletin No. 84 of the Indiana agricultural experiment station. In experiments conducted to determine the relative value of commercial fertilizers and stable manure, Beach and Hasselbring, in New York experiment station Bulletin 208, issued at Geneva, report that the use of commercial fertilizers without stable manure resulted in an increased yield, but proved inadequate for forcing lettuce in a sufficiently short time to be profitable. The best crops were grown where the soil was fertilized with manure alone.

The use of commercial fertilizers is attended with many dangers and an indiscriminate application is almost certain to lead to disaster. An overdose of chemicals tends to inhibit root absorption, which in the greenhouse, where transpiration is very great, at times causes serious troubles. Very acid conditions are quickly brought about by the use of large amounts of fertilizers having acid constituents, and the effects of undesirable residues is a constant danger. Greenhouse soils are not subject to the leachings which heavy rains constantly give field soils, hence there is more danger from this source in the greenhouse than in the field.

Pittsburgh.

MARKET STOCKED TO OVERFLOWING.

The first real glut has made its appearance and we are loaded up with quantities of roses, carnations, tulips, etc., due to the warm, sunshiny weather. Business has also fallen off greatly, and selling cheaply to the street fakirs affords the only real outlet for the enormous cuts which are consigned day by day. Prices will fare much better for Mothers' day, however, and although an enormous supply of flowers is expected for this great holiday, there is sure to be an early exhaustion of stock. Carnations will, of course, be in the greatest demand, but the wholesale houses will take orders only in an equal amount of white and colored, at a general price of $6 per 100 for all colors. This will also serve as a protection for the legitimate retailers against the many "dealers", who have heretofore taken advantage of these holidays and are never heard from until the next good holiday finds them back in the business.

NOTES.

George Wessenauer of Sewickley has added a new White truck to his delivery service. His combination conservatory and salesroom affords a pretty and attractive sight to the passerby.

Randolph & McClements have sold their flower shop in the William Penn hotel to the hotel management, who will continue the business independently from now on.

Joseph Seaman, a former retailer of Washington, Pa., but now with the Hayman Greenhouse Company, Clarksburg, W. Va., visited friends here recently.

W. P. Gallaher, formerly of Gallaher & Franks, has announced his new location as 231 Diamond street, where he will continue business for himself. Karl Klinke has removed his place of residence from Walnut street, E. E., to Mississippi street, Dormont borough.

E. J. McCallum has purchased a new Overland touring car for personal use.

G. M.

Providence, R. I.

Stock in general has been very plentiful this week, with carnations almost glutting the market. Sweet peas are also coming in fast, but sell well. Outdoor daffodils are arriving, and the quality of these is very good. Several large funerals during the past week made a good demand for funeral work and the orders were well divided. Mothers' day business this year should be a hummer and the effect of the day a year ago, when a good demand was stimulated, should be felt this year.

Visitors: George Hermann, of A. Hermann, New York; Martin Reukauf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Bourgalze & Sons, of Hoxie, are supplying most of the outdoor daffodils that come to this market.

H. A. T.

Rochester, N. Y.

There is an abundance of cut stock of all kinds and the quality is very good. Roses are exceptionally good and sweet peas are arriving in large numbers and the price is consequently lower.

NOTES.

George B. Hart is handling an immense amount of out-of-town business, some of his shipments going as far west as Cleveland. He has recently purchased a new auto truck.

Edwin C. Kaehler had an attractive window display last week, fancy baskets with trellises, filled with spring flowers, being featured.

Wm. Keller of J. B. Keller Sons has returned from a short business trip.

CHESTER.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Thomas Burke, father of John T. Burke, of the well-known firm of Burke & Burns, florists, of this city, died, April 26, from injuries resulting from being struck by an electric car. He was 75 years of age, and had retired from active business after a successful career.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President;
John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

DALLAS, TEX.—The city has created a city forestry department with F. K. McGinnis as chief.

IMPORTERS will be interested in the recent orders in council of the British authorities covering the more expeditious manipulation of shipping documents, details of which will be found on page 908.

WYOMISSING, PA.—A corporation to be known as the Bertrand H. Farr-Wyomissing Nurseries Co. has applied for a charter. The incorporators are Bertrand H. Farr, Wm. P. Bowman, Ferdinand Thun, Wm. A. Goodman and L. L. Trowbridge. The capital stock is to be $150,000.

LEESBURG, FLA.—W. Schmitt, an Austrian, who represents large interests, has purchased the holdings of E. H. Mote, one of the largest property owners in this section, including the Well-knit Nurseries, with about 1,000,000 citrus trees, and will develop them on a large scale.

Forsythias at the Arnold Arboretum.

Many flower-buds of these plants have been killed as they were two years ago. All the flower-buds in the lower part of the great forsythia bed on the slope above the Bussey Hill road are entirely killed, while on the plants in the upper part of this bed, although many buds have suffered, there are open flowers enough to make this part of the bed conspicuous. In the lower ground of the general shrub collection the flower-buds of all the species and varieties of forsythia have been entirely killed with the exception of those of the Albanian F. europæa which are uninjured. If the flower-buds of this species are better able to withstand cold than those of the other species, which are all natives of eastern continental Asia, the European plant should be better known and more generally cultivated. One of the last plants discovered in Europe, it is a vigorous, fast-growing shrub with more erect stems and branches than are usually found in the other species of this genus. The flowers are not quite so showy as those of F. suspensa and its hybrids and varieties, but they are always abundantly produced and of good color. This plant is still rare in gardens and it is doubtful if it can be found in American nurseries.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 5, 1916.

New or Noteworthy Fruits.

Under the above title the New York agricultural experiment station, Geneva, has issued Bulletin No. 414, containing 10 pages of interesting information on the subject, splendidly illustrated with color plates. In this bulletin, the author, U. P. Hedrick, states that in his belief all interested in better fruits should welcome new varieties and he calls particular attention to the following varieties of late introduction:

Perfect apple, which is regarded as an improvement over Baldwin, as it is a better keeper, being equally good in other qualities. At the station for three seasons it has been a month later in coming into edible condition and has remained in season a month or six weeks longer than Baldwin.

Rochester peach meets the need of New York growers who have long desired an early yellow freestone. Like the varieties, Edgemont and Niagara, it is a member of the Crawford group and is in several respects a marked improvement over the well-known Early Crawford.

Reine Hortense cherry is as good as any and better than most and has several qualities that fit it admirably for home plantings. The trees are almost dwarf and can be trained on walls or buildings. The flavor commingles the refreshing acidity of the sour cherry with the richness of the sweet.

Empire State grape compared with Niagara is as vigorous, as productive, as free from insects and fungi, is far better in quality and keeps longer. It approaches in flavor any of the good Old World sorts.

Herbert raspberry has been grown in New York for 10 years, more or less, but has not attained the popularity it deserves. It has great vigor, is harder than Cuthbert, and is nearly twice as productive. The berries are also more sprightly in flavor, a little larger, rounder, but unfortunately a little softer. The berries will carry to nearby markets, however, with ordinary care.

CRANFORD, N. J.—A retail store has been opened at 25 Union avenue by the H. & H. Florists.

TAMPA, FLA.—The increase in Easter sales over those of a year ago is estimated at about 15 per cent by the Tampa Floral Co. Prices were about the same as usual and there was a plentiful supply of stock. There was little call for plants of any kind.

Get Your Banker's Advice

Giblin Green-House Heaters

SUPPOSE every morning during the cold season you entered your greenhouse, you found a nice, clean, new TWO DOLLAR BILL on the bench, and it was yours to keep,

HOW WOULD YOU FEEL?

The cold season would probably have 150 mornings
THEN you would have 150 nice TWO DOLLAR BILLS, $300.00.

DO YOU WANT IT? Listen!

Manufacturers of other Greenhouse Boilers admit that $3.50 per day per ten thousand feet of glass heated to 60 degrees in zero weather is a reasonable fuel cost.

WHAT IS YOUR FUEL COST?

WE SAY it ought to be $1.75 per day and can prove that fuel for our boilers costs but this amount.

IF YOU use another boiler and have 11,500 square feet of glass, your cost per day is probably $4.00. Change to our boiler and your cost per day will probably be $2.00, so 150 days gives you the $300.00.

Again we say:

DO YOU WANT IT?

WHY the difference? It's in the CONSTRUCTION and draft travel.

Besides, you cut out the NIGHT WATCHMAN and save his WAGES.

DO you want to save $100.00 on the FIRST cost of a boiler or $300.00 every year?

Do you doubt these statements?

Let us tell you the facts, figures, names and places.

Use The Garland Cast Iron Gutter When You Build

It has made good in hundreds of large ranges throughout the country and is recognized by all the growers who have used it as the best in the field. Gutters that were used for twenty years in old houses were found to be practically as good as new and when the other material was thrown on the rubbish heap the Garland Cast Iron Gutters were set aside to be used in the new range. Absolutely the best and safest Gutter to use. It costs no more and lasts a life time. Get in touch with us whenever you need anything in Greenhouse Materials. Always remember that we make the greenhouse complete and that it pays to get our sketches and estimates before you build.

Memorial Day Preparations

Memorial Day.

The last floral holiday and final busy period of the closing season will soon be here. While Memorial day taxes the facilities of many of the trade, it is not so much the particular business of the day itself, as the preparation in the weeks previous, that makes this such a busy time. Particularly is this true of the craft who cater to the cemetery trade; those who plant and care for lots in these cities of the dead. No matter how late the season, or how backward the stock, the lot must be in perfect order; the grass cut, the beds planted, and the vases and hanging baskets filled and in place May 29.

West Laurel Hill cemetery, one of the most modern and up to date in Philadelphia, Pa., makes a special feature of Memorial day, and sends out a booklet, emphasizing the importance of its proper celebration. The following paragraph presents a good definition of the day and its observance: "Memorial day is the day set apart by this nation to commemorate the heroes who fought, that the nation might live. The Grand Army of the Republic, which still lives, and the Grander Army of the Republic, who are dead, call upon the younger generation to visit the graves of the nation's defenders; to give up business, recreation and the parks, that these United States may by this attention, show a proper respect to the men who cemented the Union. President Lincoln, when he dedicated the battle-field at Gettysburg, Nov. 19, 1863, consecrated every cemetery where a soldier lies, and called upon the rising generation to remember the soldier dead." President Lincoln's immortal dedication speech is also given a page.

They believe the annual issuance of this and similar booklets to be a great factor in promoting interest in the event. Very many permanent orders have been received to decorate graves with wreaths and cut flowers on the annual recurrence of the day. The company reserve to themselves the right to furnish and plant all flower beds, vases, care of lots, and work of this character. They have a retail department, where all kinds of made up work is displayed, and also keep on hand a stock of cut flowers, baskets, etc. On Memorial day, a large force is necessary to attend to the decoration of the graves and supply the wants of the visitors.

In some sections of the country, the beautiful custom of decorating the graves of the soldiers and all other occupants of these final resting places, is thought by some to be dying out. We can scarcely credit this, as around Boston and throughout the New England States, where it is their largest flower week of the year, preparations are going forward for a record breaking season. We believe its greater or less observance lies in the hands of the florists of any community. By a well planned publicity movement, supported and vigorously pushed by all the trade, it is possible to arouse a public interest in the day that will result in new business very much in excess of the cost of production. Much of the most effective material for a campaign of this character should get into the reading columns. A recital of the deeds of valor that took place during the war, and particularly the actions in which the local heroes participated, is sure to prove attractive matter. A description of the great national cemeteries, and the important exercises that take place on that day, is almost sure to help arouse a perhaps dormant local spirit. A good newspaper man, who could be made to feel the spirit of the occasion, should do wonderful work in this line in a series of articles during the month of May, this work to be supplemented by co-operative advertising of the local trade, and a general preparedness and display of everything pertaining to the day. If every member of the craft in a community, put his best foot forward in preparing for and boosting the day, there would be no question but what the most lethargic people would wake up, and be made to see their duty in the matter.

Those who are known as cemetery florists nearly always have their hands full, but they too by looking ahead and being prepared for more trade, will find it will come to them. Plans submitted for more or less elaborate decoration of large monuments will nearly always secure the order. The object should be to raise the standard and make the work of such a character that it can be arranged for in advance, so as to relieve the pressure of the final day. Much of this work is left to the Grand Army posts, whose ranks are now, however, becoming sadly thinned. An effective enthusiasm should be worked up among the survivors or their sons and daughters, so that the continuation of this annual custom shall not die out.

The visitor to the florist's establishment should see every evidence of the day; wreaths of galax, magnolias, oak leaves, sago palms, artistically combining the national colors in immortelles, with tri-color ribbons and flags, should be displayed in a variety of forms and sizes. The windows, arranged with the implements of war, guns stacked, drums, flags and other accompanying relics, will make a very attractive picture. A bust of Lincoln, together with a copy of his immortal address printed in large type, make a very appropriate feature. It is this bid for business that does so much to effect the result. The difference between sitting down and waiting for it to come and getting up and hustling after the trade, makes a wonderful difference in the results. To get business one must believe in it, must become enthusiastic—nothing is so contagious as enthusiasm. Particularly is this true where a number get together; their several ideas kindle a fire that accomplishes very much more than could be done by individual efforts.

So this year let everybody determine to make the most of the day by working every channel. Particularly is the store to be made so attractive that new customers may be drawn in, and see to it, as well, that all the regular patrons are not forgotten in reminders to them of the importance of the holiday. Public Water Power.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I write to ask your help to defeat a most serious attack on our public resources. Since the fight over the Alaska resources was won there has not been so pressing a threat against the conservation policy as the present effort in Congress to give our public water powers for nothing into monopolistic control.

The Shields bill, now before the Senate, gives to the power interests, without compensation, the use of water power on navigable streams. The amount of water power these streams will supply is larger by far than all the power of every kind now in use in the United States. It pretends to, but does not, enable the people to take back their own property at the end of fifty years, for in order to do so under the bill, the government would have to pay the unearned increment, and to take over whole lighting systems of cities and whole manufacturing plants. Private corporations are authorized to seize upon any land, private or public, they choose to condemn.

Bills which gave away public water powers without due compensation were vetoed by President Roosevelt and President Taft. The Shields bill would do precisely the same thing today.

Another water power bill, the Ferris bill, relating to the public lands and national forests, was in the main a good bill as it passed the House. As reported to the Senate, it encourages monopoly by permitting a corporation to take as many public water power sites as it may please. Under it the corporations could not even be kept from fastening upon the Grand canyon, the greatest natural wonder on this continent. This bill takes the care of water powers on national forests from the experienced and competent forest service, and gives it to the Interior Department, thus entailing duplication and needless expense.

In my opinion, there is undue carelessness as to the disposal of public resources at present in Washington. The water power legislation now before the Senate is too favorable to the men who, as Secretary Houston's admirable recent report shows, control through 18 corporations more than one-half of the total water power used in public service throughout the United States. The water power men charge that conservation hampers development. The Houston report shows, on the contrary, that the most rapid development is in the national forests, where conservation is best enforced. On the other hand, 120 public service corporations own and are holding undeveloped and out of use, an amount of water power equal to four-fifths of all there is developed and in use by all the public service corporations in the whole United States.

As I said in an open letter of January 29 to the President:

"Natural resources lie at the foundation of all preparedness, whether for peace or for war. No plan for national defense can be effective unless it provides for adequate public control of all the raw materials out of which the defensive strength of a nation is made. Of these raw materials water power is the most essential, because without electricity generated from water power we can not manufacture nitrates, and nitrates are the basis of gunpowder. There are no great natural deposits of nitrates in the United States as there are in Chili. It would be folly to allow the public water powers, which can supply this indispensable basis of national defense, to pass out of effective public control."

A concerted movement is on foot to break down the conservation policy. Feeble resistance or none at all is being made by official Washington. Unless the press and the people come to the rescue, the power interests are likely to win. This is a public matter wholly removed from political partizanship. Your help is needed, and that of your paper. For nearly 10 years this fight for the public water powers has gone on. We ought not to lose it now.

Mothers' Day at Boston.

UP-TO-DATE WINDOW DISPLAYS A FEATURE.

Boston is noted for its many fine cut flower stores, many of them right in the busy shopping districts. Thos. F. Galvin, in his elegant new store on Park street, and his large Back Bay conservatory on Boylston street has two very up-to-date stores. Penn, The Florist's, new store on Tremont street, with its large show windows and elegant appointments, is one of the best in the country. Philip L. Carbone's large double store in Boylston street, with its splendid assortment of artistic pottery, is also a very high class place. On Tremont street, Wax Brothers have a very showy shop, while Julius Zinn, Houghton & Gorney, and H. R. Comley, are almost side by side at the old Park church corner. There are hundreds more, many of them quite important, who are factors in the trade and nearly all appreciate the importance of the show window and are up-to-date in this respect.

Penn's windows for Mothers' day were quite elaborately decorated. The ceiling of one was covered with wistaria flowers which hung down gracefully, interspersed with Florida moss. The floor was covered with sheet moss, several logs with lichens, were laid about and a low vase of callas and grasses was in the rear, with a bank of cibotiums and other ferns for a background. In the foreground was a magnolia leafed frame surrounding an etching of Whistler's picture of his mother. A long purple velvet scarf draped the frame. Pink sweet peas were also used. Over the picture in the frame was this inscription: "Be thoughtful of your loving mother—send her a box of flowers for Mothers' day." Underneath was a line, "Wear a flower in memory of mother." No white carnations were seen or any reference to them; there was a good stock in the flower cases, but no effort to push them. The other large window was filled with baskets of cut flowers.

Other stores simply had copies or proof sheets of an ad that had appeared in the Boston Post, and was paid for by a number of the trade. Some few did have a window card gotten up by themselves, and others displayed the Mothers' day card gotten out by the Western Union Telegraph Co., and which were to be had for the asking.

The effect of the day on the market was wonderful. Carnations brought five and six cents for all good stock—no straight white were sold, about half pink had to be included in the order. A week before, $2 would have bought the same grade.

In the two growers' markets it was said to be the best single day of the year next to Christmas and Easter; there was a general clean up in almost everything. It was much better than last season and all think it will increase in volume. An effort was made by the Boston Globe to get the whole trade interested in a large ad, but the best the Globe man could do in four days' canvassing was about $130. If all the stores in Boston had been under one management, no doubt this sum would have been a thousand and results would doubtless have shown it to be money well spent.

BOY SCOUTS' EMBLEM.

By J. H. Small & Sons, New York.

Some of the growers in the market are deploring the fact that they are losing control. Smaller growers, whose business is not sufficient to bring them to town every day, or who cannot stay until they sell out, employ a man in conjunction with others like themselves to handle their stock on a commission basis. Such an agent will have several (from four to six growers), and at the election gathers proxies together and votes them to change the management so as to give themselves more privileges. There are something over 300 stalls in the two markets and an immense amount of stock is handled on a busy day; one would wonder where it all went to. Patrick Welsh says it will never pay a small grower to sell his own stock—a grower does not know any more about selling than a commission man does about growing, and that is not very much. He says the markets are a propagating bed for commission men; they are being sprouted there all the time, but whether controlled by growers or their salesmen, the markets are fulfilling their mission. All are well served and mutually benefited by what they see and hear, and prices are regulated solely by the law of supply and demand.

IN PROVIDENCE.

This is a wide awake city with a number of flower stores that are alive to their opportunities. T. J. Johnston & Co., on Weybossett street appear to have a very active business. The window was nicely decorated with all white flowers, carnations, white sweet peas and snapdragons. A large window card, done in white and yellow with white ribbon bows, carried the inscription: "Mothers' Day, May 14. Wear a Flower in Honor of Your Mother." This firm did a very large business, having difficulty in waiting on all the trade and cleaned up everything saleable. In speaking of Memorial day Mr. Johnston said that he specializes in pans of scarlet geraniums which run from 10 to 14 inches. These he finds a good sale for at satisfactory prices. Growers get them up to his order. Wreaths are also sold in quantity.

Timothy O'Connor, 126 Union street, has a fine large up-to-date store with the best appointments in ice boxes and fixtures.

McMair, Florist, 322-328 Weybossett street, has two stores, one for high and the other for lower priced trade; they both had a very busy day. Everything sold and much more could have been handled. Johnson Bros., on Dorrance street, have an inviting looking shop and enjoyed a good share of the Mothers' day trade. They found it much better than last season.

Smith, The Florist, on Washington street, was much pleased with the holiday, and the prospects for Memorial day looked very good from the advance orders he had received.

Jos. E. Koppelman, wholesale florist and dealer in supplies, has a large store well stocked. He finds that Providence wanted just such a store and is giving him much trade.

K.

The Magnolia Wreath.

Preparedness is a word which has forged to the front the past year and occupies a large place in the public mind. It is a word that in its general definition of being prepared when the emergency arises, should be underscored in every florist's vocabulary. Prepared to meet the call, to grasp and make the most of the opportunity when it is presented, is always good business, and should result in the most profit to the dealer as well as satisfaction to the customer. For the hurry-up emblem that must be made ready in a few minutes, there is nothing better than the magnolia wreath, which, if in stock, can be decorated with the flowers at hand in a very few minutes. There is nothing particularly new about the wreaths of magnolia, but there is a deal of difference in their make up; the piece with a generous showing of carefully placed leaves on a well mossed frame, presents a finished appearance, that attracts attention and is at once satisfactory. This of itself, with the addition of a bow of purple ribbon and a few sprays of ivy or pair of Sago palms, is acceptable and appropriate for the funeral of an elderly person. It can, however, be made the foundation for something much more expensive, and in its artistic decoration with almost any choice flower, becomes quite an elaborate affair.

In the placing of flowers as much of the wreath as possible should show; a crescent form is desirable with the cluster of flowers covering the full part in the center. The placing of the roses, if such are used, should be studied; if the flowers are choice specimens there is need for but comparatively few, but each should be given prominence, some high, others low, with flowers projecting over the inside and outside of the center, so that the cluster is irregularly round. A dozen cattleyas in a moderate sized wreath are sufficient to make a good showing for the moderate purse and a little good maidenhair helps cover any wire or sticks that should on no account be visible. To the practised hand it takes a very short time to trim up a prepared wreath, as almost any kind of flower or combination can be worked up, but always avoiding a crowded effect, so as to make each blossom do its part and not encroach too much on the wreath, which carries the form and character of the design.

While the prepared bronze colored leaves are almost indestructible and always ready for service, their all-too-evident artificial appearance makes them objectionable to many discriminating customers who will have nothing but the freshly cut leaves. For this demand there are the fresh green magnolias, which, if kept cool and closed from the air, will remain fresh for quite a while, and are decorated the same as the bronze. A well-made, fresh leaf wreath, decorated with choice flowers, is handsome to a degree and more profitable than almost any other arrangement. The preparation of this formal wreath is important. It is best made on a flat not box wire mossed frame, which should first be wrapped with green foil to better hold the moss and present a finished surface for the bottom of the design. The moss, either sphagnum or clump, should be tied on rather full, and well rounded and afterwards clipped to remove loose or projecting particles. The leaves should be pinned on with bent wire or fern pins, the latter being best. Commencing at the narrow part with the smaller leaves go down one side, laying one over the other like shingles and gradually increasing in size until the middle is reached. Then follow with the other side in the same manner, finishing in the center, so that only the wire fastening the last leaf shall show.

Bronze or green leucothoe sprays make a very beautiful foundation wreath. These are arranged in a mossed frame, stemmed or the sprays stuck in, until a neatly made form is the result. When an imitation bay leaf wreath is wanted, it can be made by taking the leaves of the green sprays and pinning them down as with the magnolias, or wrapping them on with green thread or fine wire. A wreath of this character, when decorated with orchids, is considered very choice. Wreaths of green or bronze galax leaves, pinned on by the thatched or one leaf overlapping another method, will keep fresh for quite a while. The loose or full wreath of galax, in which the leaves are used, are stemmed together on wire, toothpicks or on stemming sticks, and is very popular. When one realizes how general has become the use of the galax leaf, the fact is lost sight of that it was only after persistent efforts and considerable expense by the southern dealers, who had faith in its utility, that the florists of the country at last saw how galax could be profitable to them and their use became universal.

Garden Notes.

If Ananias were alive today he could get a fine job writing seed catalogues.

About this time harvest the fine crop of tin cans, old bottles and other junk that has come up in the garden.

When planting peas you will have better results if you remove the can. The best method, however, and one that yields more satisfactory results, is to make soup out of the peas and forget it.

Sprinkle your radishes with salt and pepper before planting them if you would have them in good season.

We know an amateur gardener who actually paid off the mortgage on his house just with his garden. He sold it to a neighbor for a garage lot.

Buckwheat cakes should be set out edgewise, as they take up too much space when planted flat.

WREATH OF MAGNOLIA LEAVES.

PLANT NOTES.

Peonies.

The peony is one of the most important flowers to the florist during the early part of summer, and they are used in large quantities for decorations and other floral work. In cutting peonies for market, especially those that are to be shipped, it is best to cut them when the first petals unfold, and allow them to open in water. They ship much better in this condition and also last much longer. Where they are allowed to remain on the plant until open the flowers not only bruise more or less in transportation, but the petals drop more easily when the flowers are unpacked if they are open when cut and made ready for shipment. In cutting the flowers from the plant, many growers make the mistake of cutting too low. The demand of the customers is of course for long stems, but for the good of the plant there should be left two well-formed leaves upon the stem when the flower is cut off. This will allow enough foliage for the plant to continue its growth and thoroughly ripen off. Where the plant is cut back too severely the root action is injured and a diminished number of flowers will be the result in the succeeding year. Keep the plants tied up by stakes and strings outside of the row; a heavy rain when the plants are heavy with buds will often knock them down and ruin many of the flowers.

Dahlias.

Although the dahlia is of very robust growth and comparatively easy of culture yet it is one of the most tender plants and will not stand any cold treatment, for the slightest frost will check the growth and almost invariably kill the plant back. It is then too early yet to plant the clumps except where all danger of late frosts has passed, but the eyes may start into growth during the warm days of May, so they should be kept in safe and warm quarters. Where the grower has a good, tight frame that is frost proof the clumps can be taken from storage and placed in the frame and the tubers will grow plump and the eyes break ready for planting as soon as the weather grows warm enough. The place selected for growing them the coming season should, however, be prepared, the ground spaded deeply and if not manured last fall, some well-rotted manure spaded in. Many growers do not advise heavy manuring when the clumps are planted and especially no fresh manure, much preferring to get a fair supply in the ground the previous fall so that the rankness will be dissipated in the soil, for too strong manure causes a rank growth, and the plants do not bloom as early. With enough manure incorporated in the soil to produce a good hard growth, and not too soft, and then mulch with manure when the buds begin to set, is the manner of some of the most successful growers. The young stock that was propagated from clumps started in March should now be good, stocky little plants, and the last of the propagating should be done early in May to have good stock for June planting. Keep the young plants under safe cover and plunge the pots in soil to keep them moist and not require too frequent or too heavy watering.

Ficus Elastica.

While the rubber plants do not enjoy the popularity that they did ten or more years ago, yet there is always more or less demand for good small plants every fall and cuttings rooted now and given good culture can be grown to fine stock at that time. Every plantsman will have plants of Ficus elastica that have outgrown the salable size or have lost many of the lower leaves and the tops of these can be propagated during the warm weather. The best way to root the young plants is on the plant by mossing the cut. Make an incision in the stem about half way through, in which insert a small stick about the size of a match stick to keep the cut open. Bind around the cut wet moss which should be firmly tied on with raffia and kept wet constantly. The plant should then be placed in a warm, moist house, kept fairly close, and in two or four weeks the roots will be seen protruding from the moss. The top should then be cut off and potted in a 4-inch or 5-inch pot and grown in a warm, close house until the roots have become established in the soil. If a number of these plants are being grown, a mild hotbed can be made up outside, built up with boards so as to allow 18 inches of room between the soil and glass, and covered with a shaded sash. Plunge the pots in the soil and if the frame is kept close, allowing air only on the warmest days, the plants will grow rapidly. As fall approaches more air can be admitted and the plants gradually hardened off and splendid stock will be the result.

Boston Spring Show.

The grand May show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which was held in Horticultural hall, Boston, May 10-14, preliminary mention of the opening of which was announced in our issue of May 13, was a great success from every point of view. It was the first time that an entrance fee had ever been charged, but it was thought on account of the effort to standardize the exhibition and bring it up to the full-fledged show point that it would be worth the 50 cent admission, and the large attendance proved it. It was opened officially on Wednesday evening by the governor of the state, S. W. McCall, who made a very happy address, likening floriculture to the arts, such as printing, sculpture, music, etc. The quality of the various exhibits was quite up to the high standard set by the society. The exhibit of orchids by the Julius Roehrs Co., on Thursday, was a valuable feature. The entry of Penn the Florist, for made-up baskets and decorated Leghorn hats, was a feature that received the silver medal of the society.

The lower lobby, or forum, was filled with nicely grouped evergreens from the Blue Hill Nursery of Julius Heurlin, Braintree, Mass., a splendid collection with roots done up in burlap. On each side of the landing leading to the lecture room were staged marguerites, yellow daisies, white hydrangeas and genistas, while inside the hall were splendid snapdragons, in pots and pans, named Weld Pink from the estate of Mrs. C. W. Weld, Brookline. A display of schizanthus, not overly large in size but rich in color, and specimen plants of bougainvilleas, superbly colored and loaded with bloom, were staged by Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass. A square of Calceolaria Stewartii, exhibited by Winthrop Ames (D. White, Gr.) showed good culture. A group of Azalea chinensis, from the estate of Walter Hunnewell, the tubs being concealed by pots of hemlock, were a cloud of yellow. A low table of Japanese azaleas, in variety, arranged with a border of ferns was also very showy. Rhemanni angulata, variety Pink Perfection, from Professor C. S. Sargent, director of Arnold Arboretum, was a pretty novelty with its tall spikes of pink flowers.

The stage was filled with a fine group of Thomas Roland's rambler roses, among the varieties being Hia-watha, Tausendschon, both white and pink, Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay. They made a fine showing, while specimen plants of Acacia armata, loaded with yellow plume-like sprays, from Walter Hunnewell, were a noticeable feature. The orchid display of F. J. Dolansky, Lynn, Mass., was splendid. The group, which consisted of Cattleyas gigas and Mossie and Dendrobium thrysiflorum, embellished with cocus, asparagus and cibotium, was one of the features of the show. Well flowered plants of pelargonium, in variety, staged by Mrs. C. G. Weld, were also much admired. These captured first honors, the second prize being awarded to Miss Cornelia Warren, Waltham, Mass.

The loggia was filled with specimen Hydrangea Otaksa from the establishment of Frank Edgar, Waverley, a splendid display in every way, while perfect specimens of the French varieties, well colored, were sent by a number of growers, those of the Wm. W. Edgar Co., Waverley, being especially fine. E. A. Clark, Jamaica Plain, Mass., also staged some very large plants of the French and Japanese sorts. These were in the main hall. Mme. Raymond, a particularly dark blue sort, is said to come true to this color from cuttings, planted in any soil. A bed of the new light pink geranium, Mrs. Lester Leland, exhibited by E. H. Witterlow, looks very promising. S. J. Goddard's standard geraniums and fuchsias, on stems four feet high, were full of bloom and very showy. These were arranged on both sides of the steps leading to the main hall.

A feature of the large auditorium was a bed or collection of Japanese dwarf evergreens and maples. The center specimen, in a large earthen bowl, had the appearance of being worth a fortune, while a number of others must have been very valuable. These were exhibited by the Weld Garden. The Walter Hunnewell rhododendrons, large plants in 24-inch tubs, were an important display. They were splendidly flowered—just right in point of time for the exhibition. A. M. Davenport, Watertown, Mass., was awarded the $100 prize for the best group of azaleas; finely flowered and shapely plants, and a great feature of the show.

The groups of foliage and flowering plants, arranged for effect, three in number, occupied from 300 to 400 square feet each, with an abundance of material that would have filled spaces twice the size. The A. M. Davenport entry contained a wonderful collection of hybrid calceolarias, gloxinias, tuberous begonias, hydrangeas, rambler roses, laburnums, acacias, pelargoniums, heliotropes, lilacs and orchids—not one, but dozens of a kind, and not a single passee looking plant in the lot. Variegated foliage added to the effect, noteworthy being Begonia Rex, coleus, caladiums, bird's nest ferns and cibotiums. The arrangement was a bit even and compact, although an effort had been made to relieve the monotony by elevating a number of the choice specimens. This group attracted a great deal of attention. Ernest B. Dane had a nicely arranged group of choice specimens, well flowered, in the effect of a quarter circle, the center being in one corner of the building and was about 10 feet in height. Single stemmed hydrangeas, calceolarias, schizanthuses, spireas and azaleas were prominent here. The Wm. W. Edgar Co. staged the other entry. This consisted of well flowered fuchsias, rambler roses, genistas, Easter lilies, spireas, etc., with a background of palms, baytrees and ferns, and a border of geraniums and pansies. This was a very striking group.

The garden of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, at one end of the hall, was of tall evergreens, baytrees, boxwood and flowering shrubbery. A border of pink geraniums and blue hyacinths added color, and a latticed arbor in the rear center presented a pleasing effect. Tan bark covered the ground and in the center of the exhibit was a fountain in a setting of elegantissima and bird's nest ferns, with pink geraniums and calla lilies. Two immense plants of wistaria in a group of imantophyllum from the collection of Professor C. S. Sargent, formed a pretty entrance. A group of greenhouse foliage plants, staged by N. F. Kidder, among which were well flowered anthuriums, variegated pineapple, aralias, davallias and Pandanus Veitchii, made an attractive corner. The Faulkner farm exhibited fine plants of marguerites; also standard heliotropes, for both of which they were awarded first prizes.

Hybrid calceolarias were conspicuous in the small hall adjoining, superbly flowered plants, 25 in number being arranged on a low table. The flowers were immense and of the most brilliant coloring—they were one of the gems of the show. There were several exhibits, the first honors going to Mrs. J. L. Gardner (Wm. Thatcher, Gr.), E. A. Clark (A. MacKay, Gr.), was second, and the third prize went to D. R. Craig (W. Rust, Gr.). Faulkner farm exhibited some wonderful Hydrangea Otaksa on single stems, in 5-inch pots, the heads being 12 inches in diameter; also verbenas in pans. These were the Miss Wilmott variety and were very effective with their beautiful, large, pink flowers. This variety should be in every florist's collection. A plant of Médinilla magnifica superba in a 7-inch pot with three handsome spikes of bloom was a beauty. A single specimen of Nasturtium crispa was attractive, as were also two plants of hydrangea bearing the label H. Ajisai, a curious looking pink sort. Several entries of streptocarpus in various shades were interesting.

In the cut flower division there was a splendid collection of tulips, daffodils, jonquils and narcissi, filling a table very attractively arranged. In the class for sweet peas, Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, was first with a very fine entry, which included the following varieties: Mrs. A. Skach, Yarrawa, Venus, Orchid Beauty, White Spencer, Orange Orchid, Apple Blossom and a blue seedling, unnamed. These were all superb flowers, with stems from 15 to 20 inches in length. They were beautifully staged. The Sim entry of 100 vases of pansies was also a superb collection and was given first honors, Chas. T. Beasley & Co., East Milton, Mass., being second with a collection containing great variety. A table of Darwin tulips, containing 36 choice sorts, exhibited by the Weld estate, all fine flowers, received a blue ribbon. A vase of Delphinium Clivedon Beauty, a perfect azure blue in color, an exhibit of F. W. Fletcher, was very attractive. In the classes for roses, limited to displays of private growers, all of the first prizes were captured by Mrs. C. G. Weld.

In the lecture room were staged the roses and snapdragons. The Waban Rose Co., Natick, Mass., were given first honors for a vase of 50 superb Hadley and scored again with a vase of 50 Mrs. Bayard Thayer, very fine flowers. McAlpine Bros., Exeter, N. H., were second in the class of reds with Crimson Queen, which looked very good. F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., were first with 50 White Killarney, second with Sunburst, first with Mrs. Aaron Ward, second with Killarney Queen and also captured the prize of $100 for exhibit of roses occupying 100 square feet. This was a handsome display of 18 large and small vases, baskets and hampers, the varieties staged being Ophelia, White Killarney, Richmond, Killarney Queen, American Beauty, Mrs. Geo. Sawyer, Cecile Brunner, George Elgar, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Francis Scott Key. McAlpine Bros. also exhibited fine vases of Sunburst and Killarney Queen.

One of the most attractive features of the entire exhibition was the elaborate display of baskets of cut flowers staged by Penn. The Florist, Boston. These were arranged on a table six feet wide and 20 feet in length. The center was a huge basket about six feet high with mossed handles, decorated with asparagus and pink rambler roses in glass tubes. The basket was filled with pink snapdragons on very long stems, while on the outside were cattleyas arranged in flower tubes. A large bow of pink ribbon gave the finishing touch. Long-handled baskets, elegantly filled, two with excellent yellow daisies, two with blue Spanish iris and yellow ranunculus, one with immense spikes of pink snapdragons, one with yellow irises and pink rambler roses, and all with appropriate ribbon decorations, were wonderfully showy and attracted much attention. Two large straw garden hats decorated with fresh flowers and ribbon looked too artificial to be natural. A number of smaller baskets of yellow daisies, one of lavender sweet peas, others of ranunculus, mignonette and a beautiful plumed green grass were very striking. All of these also had appropriate ribbons.

The vases of snapdragons showed great quality. The first prize went to the Faulkner farm for the best six varieties. These were white, yellow, light and dark shades of pink. There were no shades of orange, which omission in this section, the home of the snapdragon, seems singular. The first prize for the best single vase went to Paul E. Richwagen, Needham, Mass., whose entry of Virginia, dark pink, was very fine. Mrs. C. G. Weld was second with a vase of immense spikes of light pink.

A. W. Preston (I. L. Smith, Gr.), staged a splendid Brassocattleya maronal, carrying three splendid flowers. J. W. Butterworth exhibited six orchids in variety for which he was awarded first prize. Cymbidium Lowianum cincolor was a beautiful specimen in this collection. Dendrobium nobile and Oncidium flexuosum were two pretty plants displayed by Miss C. Warren.

Professor C. S. Sargent displayed a seedling rhododendron, a full, fine, mauve colored flower; also a Cyrtododium punctatum with a fine spike of yellow flowers. A vase of a new deep pink carnation, named Albert Roper, a very fine flower, perfect in every way, exhibited by the Albert Roper estate, Tewksbury, Mass., was awarded a silver medal. S. J. Davis, a new crimson carnation, staged by S. J. Goddard, won a certificate of merit. James Wheeler was awarded a silver medal for superior culture of the yellow marguerite, Etoile d'Or. These were splendid flowers. He also won first prize for the best 100 flowers of the same. The Spanish irises entered by Esty Bros. showed careful culture and they were given first prize for six vases, six varieties.

Wichita, Kansas.MOTHERS' DAY DEMAND HEAVY.

Mothers' day, 1916, held true to the record of the past two years as a real flower day. The volume of business was the heaviest ever for that day, showing a fair increase in all departments of the retail trade. Cut flowers led in demand and carnations led the cut flowers, with supply inadequate and prices advanced about 10 to 20 per cent over every day prices, but there was no advance in prices of roses or other flowers. Plant sales were good, medium and low priced items being most in supply and demand. The individual sales would probably be found to average rather low in amount, but there were many sales and consequently a large quantity of stock was moved and at reasonable prices. The florists are now in the middle of the usual spring rush of sales and planting. Generally speaking stocks are in good shape and a good business is being done. A "city beautiful" campaign inaugurated by the newspapers and leading citizens, is giving the florists a good deal of extra demand for their goods, and all are doing their share in helping the matter along.

NOTES.

Walter Davidson, foreman for W. H. Culp & Co., set a record for carnation planting here. Making himself one of a gang of five men, they planted into the field 8,500 carnations in 8½ hours, actual working time, in one day. And Walter himself put all the plants into the ground, and the plants were watered as planted too.

Chas. P. Mueller's new greenhouses are showing up fine, and will soon be ready for the crops to be planted in. Mr. Mueller has a new delivery car on the streets, and it is a good one.

Mr. McCabe, representing A. L. Randall Co., was a recent and welcome visitor; of course he did some business.

F. Kuechenmeister handled the decorations for the Shriners' banquet last week. About 1,000 plates were laid. C.

Buffalo.MOTHERS' DAY POPULARITY GAINS.

Mothers' day trade has developed into proportions that make it rank almost on a par with Easter. On the Saturday preceding the sales far exceeded the corresponding day last year, and while great preparations were made to handle the business, the demand was far beyond all expectations. Carnations were far short of requirements and the supply was limited by Saturday noon. Fortunately roses were in good supply and helped to a wonderful degree in satisfying the demand. The call for other flowers was also heavy.

NOTES.

From now until July 1, it will be next to impossible to get much attention from the greenhouse man other than to have him say: "Geraniums are so much per dozen," or, "We can give you a good veranda box or cemetery vase at from $3 up with good healthy plants, pretty vines, etc., or a dandy veranda box of Boston ferns."

Wm. F. Kasting, our genial postmaster, was in Washington last week, and from his stature, Mr. Burleson evidently thinks "Buffalo uber alles"—and Billy is "some postmaster."

The death of one of this city's oldest and most prominent citizens, May 13, gave S. A. Anderson an order for a handsome blanket of white sweet peas.

E. J. Fancourt, representing S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, was a caller last week.

S. A. Anderson and wife have returned from a fishing trip in Michigan. BISON.

Cleveland.BEST MOTHERS' DAY TRADE IN HISTORY.

The old saying, "Love Rules the World", has been proven, and the love for one's mother is the most beautiful and holy of all; therefore this Mothers' day which locally was freely advertised, both individually by the retailers and collectively by the florists' club has been better from a business standpoint than any previous Mothers' day since the day was first inaugurated. About everything saleable was disposed of in both cut flowers and plants. Carnations of course were favorites in demand, but everything else sold well. There was a good supply of Ward, Sunburst, Ophelia, Shawyer, Rhea Reid, Kaiserin, Hadley, Killarney, American Beauties and La Detroit roses. Retailers in ordering mentioned mostly "mixed roses" and any color and all colors were given and accepted. Long stemmed American Beauties did not move well, the demand being mostly for medium and shorter grades, but in the other roses all sizes cleaned up entirely. America and Hadley gladioli, baby gladioli, Spanish iris, mostly light colors, snapdragons in all colors, lilac, both white and purple, sweet peas, orchids, daisies and tulips were in good supply and of excellent quality. Easter lilies did not move any too well, probably being too close after Easter. A few larkspur were on the market; also a few Missouri peonies. Prices on stock did not advance materially, except on carnations, which nearly doubled in price in a week's time. All stock was in good supply and of very good quality. Greens were equal to the demand.

Fire of unknown origin in the store and basement of the Kirchner Floral Co. caused a loss of $500 Sunday, May 14. C. F. B.

MOTHERS' DAY BETTER THAN 1915.

Only one leading florist appears to have had a falling off on Mothers' day trade as compared with last year, and in his case the difference was small and due to a 60 per cent decrease in supply of carnations. As a rule receipts were larger. Several concerns show a smaller net profit, owing to the high price of shipped-in carnations and to the fact that part of this stock was unfit for sale by the time the demand set in. Many very inferior carnations were on sale, but went readily when better ones were exhausted. In the white variety some florists were sold up by Thursday, and the famine was general by the last day of the week. There was not a strict uniformity in price among the trade. The Livingston Seed Co., whose supply ran to 11,000, nearly as ample as last year, held the white at $1.25 and the colored at $1. The average price elsewhere was $1.50 for both, although in a few instances $2 was realized on the white. Taking the trade as a whole, the carnation supply was very short, and probably not equal to the demand by 50 per cent. The sale of other flowers, particularly roses, was large. All good blooming plants were in demand, anything in white being given the preference. The parcel-post trade was a big factor, coming from a radius of 100 miles and over. A good portion of it had to be turned down, because of short stock.

Memorial day outlook is uncertain. It will take a week yet to determine what part home-growing will play in the supply of peonies and other standard flowers for that occasion. Bedding is starting in with a rush, and a big season seems to be assured. Aside from this not much is expected by the trade in the immediate future. J.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

An extra large number of members were in attendance at the regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, which was held in Glen Cove, Wednesday evening, May 10. President James McDonald occupied the chair and a great deal of routine business was transacted. Final arrangements were made for holding a tulip show, May 19, and a rose show in June. It was found necessary to change the date of this show, which had previously been set for June 14, and it was left to the executive committee to select another one. Ernest Westlake was appointed manager. While the main classes in these exhibitions will be devoted to tulips or roses, as the case may be, there will also be other classes for seasonable flowers, plants and vegetables.

Secretary Gibson read a large number of letters, which he had received, offering prizes for our coming autumn exhibition. The essay "Horticulture as a Profession, from the Standpoint of a Gardener", by John Johnson, of New York, which was received from the National Association of Gardeners, was listened to with appreciative interest by the members present.

The judges of the exhibits were Henry Gaut, James Gladstone and Harry Goodband, and they turned in the following report: For 12 spikes of gladioli—John W. Everett, 1st. Three head of cauliflower—Robert Jones, 1st. Twelve pansies—Thomas Twigg, 1st.

Three vases of pansies—Thomas Twigg, cultural certificate. Vase of roses—John W. Everett, honorable mention. Frank Dinda of Farmingdale exhibited both cut flowers and blooming plants of his novelty chrysanthemums, Alex Guttman and Emma, for which he was accorded the thanks of the society.

Detroit.HEAVY ROSE SALES MARK MOTHERS' DAY.

Mothers' day business was big and exceeded in volume the most sanguine expectations of the most enthusiastic. Great preparations were made in anticipation of a good business, but the tremendous call for flowers of all kinds that came throughout Saturday from early morning till nearly midnight, surprised everyone, and in some cases the magnitude of the trade closely approached that of Easter Saturday. It is thought by many, that had the florists been fully prepared with both stock and facilities for handling it, as they were at Easter, the trade of Mothers' day would fully equal that of Easter. Co-operative advertising was done to the extent of about $500 in the three leading daily papers and just how much of the business can be attributed to this is hard to estimate, but it kept alive the idea of flowers for Mothers' day and young and old alike seemed full of the spirit of the day and its full meaning. A conspicuous feature of the trade was the solemn edict sent out during the week by the big growers of carnations, that the minimum price would be $8 per hundred wholesale and with equal unanimity of mind the florists who usually sell big quantities of carnations retaliated by declaring the price of $8 per hundred wholesale excessive, because it implied the retail price of two dollars per dozen, a figure regarded by them as being unpopular and really destructive to the best interests of the trade, and they accordingly refused to accede to the demands of the growers and left the carnations severely alone, discouraged their use, and encouraged their patrons to buy roses instead.

The result was clearly shown, that the florists who are in daily touch with the consumer, were able without the least trouble to divert the trade in this case from carnations to roses and other flowers, including flowering plants, which happily for all were quite plentiful. But roses were clearly the most popular of all and it is estimated that from Chicago there were as many as 50,000 roses sent to this market, and these added to the local supply, will indicate that it was "rose day" in Detroit. Saturday the weather was beautiful and most favorable to the buying public, but Sunday brought rain in torrents and yet the people braved the inclemency of the weather and sought the flower shops to give expression to their love for mother.

The club meeting, May 9, was devoted chiefly to the discussion of the prospects for Mothers' day, and probable prices for carnations. At this meeting the retailers deplored the efforts of the growers to boost the prices and thus disgust the public by their evident avarice and attempt to convert the day into one of commercial gain. This caution, however, was totally disregarded by the growers who irrespective of the results demanded the highest figure for their product.

Boston:SATISFACTORY MOTHERS' DAY BUSINESS.

After a rather discouraging week, business picked up, Saturday, May 13, to one of the best days of the season for both wholesalers and retailers. During the week there were plenty of flowers obtainable and prospects were not very bright. Roses especially, were in good supply and short demand. Even on Friday, although prices did advance to some extent, the market was sluggish and buying was not very brisk. Saturday morning, however, there was a very fine market. Carnations went at top notch figures. Many white were sold at $6 and $8 per 100, while colored varieties brought from $4 to $6. Roses ran in price from $3 per 100 up, white being most in demand. Bulbous stock, which now is of very good quality, found a fairly good market also. Yellow marguerites were in heavy supply and did not sell as well this year as in years previous, but considering the quantity of flowers obtainable, they went very well. Sweet peas continue to find good sale. The Christmas Pink variety is the most popular. Prices ranged from 50 cents per 100 to $1.50. The plant trade is rather quiet, hydrangeas being the main supply.

Malcomb Orr, of North Sawyers, has sold his establishment to H. Curti. Mr. Orr moved to Cambridge, N. Y., May 15 to take charge of a private estate.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellsley, has purchased a new automobile in which he will recreate during the summer months. F. L. W.

Minneapolis.MOTHERS' DAY TRADE BREAKS ALL RECORDS.

The 1916 Mothers' day trade in this city broke all records, both in the volume of business and the amount of stock, a generous proportion of which was pickled, however. Carnations cleaned up entirely, prices being six cents for colored and eight cents for white, but the supply was only sufficient to meet half of the requirements. Most of the retailers substituted other flowers. Roses sold only when carnations were not to be had. The trade in general kept to a uniform price of $1.50 per dozen for colored and $2 per dozen for white carnations, but some of the fruit stores disposed of the white varieties at 50 cents each in some instances after the florists were sold out Sunday. The flower buying public in this city are asking: "Who makes all the profit"? Two dollars is certainly high enough at this season of the year, and few complain of that figure, but they will not stand a higher price. All of the florists had all the business they could attend to, but had to divide their stock among their customers, so as to try and satisfy all.

NOTES.

W. D. Desmond, who has been in charge of the flower department of the L. S. Donaldson Co., and Wm. Vaska, who has been in charge of that firm's greenhouses, are taking a well-earned rest, both having severed their connection with the Donaldson Co. Mr. Desmond will take charge of his own establishment, May 22.

Oscar Amundson was confronted with a large funeral order Monday morning, following a clean up for Mothers' day. He refused orders for carnations after 2 o'clock Saturday as everything was booked far in advance. His trade was easily double that of last year.

The W. D. Desmond Co. was incorporated May 18, with a capital stock of $50,000. W. D. Desmond is president and manager and the company will take over the Cargill range in this city, growing for the trade only.

H. B. Whitted kept both stores filled with the finest that the market afforded, but finally had to refuse carnation orders, as more stock in this line was not to be had.

Thomas Hall came in with a cut of 800 White Wonder, which were very fine. His other stock, especially roses, was in good crop. His trade was double that of a year ago.

John Rovick, captain of the Minneapolis florists' ball club, says he has some good players booked, and A. S. Rice, manager, says he can get all the games he wants.

Karl Lindskoog had everything his own way on Franklin street. He had an unusually large supply, but not enough to take care of all orders in full.

Manager Lindsey, of the Hiawatha Gardens, reports Mothers' day results all right, but would have been more pleased if he could have secured more stock.

Frank Hayden of The Flower Shop had to go to St. Paul, Saturday night, to get two dozen roses to fill an order. Too bad, in all that rain.

Rice Bros. placed orders for all the stock they could get, both local and from outside points, but had to turn down late orders.

Miss H. B. Whitted was quite ill two days last week, but recovered and was on hand for the Mothers' day rush as young as ever.

Will Bros. had their usual good luck and were right on hand with fine crops of all kinds of carnations and roses.

Swanson & Co. had their usual large supply of stock but the demand swept everything clean.

Thomas Lynes had a big Mothers' day trade and cleaned up completely in everything.

Cal Rice, of Rice Bros., is going to take a fishing trip and rest up after the rush. T. C. R.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Robt. Marchant & Son have added two houses to their range.

Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society.

A large percentage of the membership of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was present at the monthly meeting which was held in the society's rooms at Greenwich, Conn., May 12, President W. J. Sealy in the chair. A fine display of cut flowers and plants occupied the exhibition tables, a special feature being a vase of outdoor flowers arranged for effect, although all of the displays were most excellent and reflected great credit upon the exhibitors. The competition was open to assistant gardeners only. First honors went to Alex. Clarkson. In the non-competitive display the judges made the following awards:

Cultural certificates—James Stuart for Calceolaria Stewartii; Thomas Ryan, display of Spencer type sweet peas; Wm. Graham, splendid vase of antirrhinum; Honorable mention—Wm. Whittin, display of sweet peas; James Linane, vase of Mignonette Triumph; P. W. Popp, Non Plus Ultra gladiolus; John Andrew, plate of Bonnie Best tomatoes. Votes of thanks—Wm. Whittin for hydrangeas and calceolarias and to James Linane for specimen plant of Clarkia elegans. Mr. Linane was also highly commended for specimen plant of calceolaria. The summer and fall show committees reported progress and stated that several substantial additions to the premium lists for both exhibitions had been received. The summer show will be held at Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 16-17. An attractive schedule will be offered and a very high grade exhibition of flowers, fruits and vegetables is anticipated. The next meeting of the society will be held June 9 and a display of seasonable plants and flowers will be in order.

good and cut flowers of which there were an abundance, sold well. Plants were also much in demand.

NOTES.

The Rochester Floral Co. had an attractive Mothers' day window, consisting of floral arrangements with ribbons leading to cities and towns on a large map, calling attention to the fact that flowers could be sent by this firm to "any mother anywhere."

The monthly meeting of the florists' association was held May 8. An interesting feature was a talk on "Landscape Architecture" by Fred Toon.

H. E. Wilson reports a good Mothers' day business. He is very busy with outdoor work at present.

Choice American Beauties were a feature with J. B. Kellar's Sons.

Max Lehman has entered the employ of Henry P. Neun.

Geo. B. Hart has returned from a fishing trip.

GOOD SUPPLY BUT TRADE QUIET.

The weather has been warm and outdoor roses on the decline. Good carnations are none too plentiful, but the cheap outdoor sorts are overstocking the market. Gladioli are becoming more plentiful. Some fine Shasta daisies are coming in, while many of the garden flowers, like delphiniums, aquilegias, centureas, coreopsis and gaillardias are being displayed by all the dealers. Aside from funeral work, trade is quiet.

NOTES.

S. Murata & Co. are doing a good business in their shipping department. Cheap carnations permit long shipments throughout the east. Besides carnations, they are shipping roses and gladioli.

J. W. Wolters sent out two big loads of funeral pieces in one day, and is unusually busy.

Redondo Floral Co. has been showing some pretty Mariposa lilies.

Worcester, Mass.

Judging by the volume of business done by Worcester florists for Mothers' day, very few mothers passed the day without a floral remembrance. Co-operative advertising by the local members of the trade did much to bring about the proper observance of the day. Carnations especially, went well. The color part of the Mothers' day custom was little observed, and flowers of all lines were worn indiscriminately. R.

OBITUARY.

Alfred Ross.

Alfred Ross, head of the seed and commission firm of Ross Bros., Wichita, Kan., is dead at the age of 67 years. Death came suddenly at his home in that city, May 14. Heart failure is given as the cause of his death.

Mr. Ross was the oldest Douglas avenue merchant, having been in business in the third block on that thoroughfare more than 30 years. More than that, he was one of the best known merchants of that city, especially among the farming community. He had sold seeds, poultry, bee and orchard supplies to the people of the country many years.

Mr. Ross was born July 23, 1849, at Mill Creek, Berkeley county, Va. His father, brother and himself were millers. He and his brother, J. M. Ross, came to Wichita December 1, 1884, and soon opened a produce and feed store at 319 East Douglas avenue, under the firm name of Ross Bros., a name that has since remained unchanged. Within three years the firm engaged in the seed business almost exclusively and its business has grown to such proportions that it supplies seeds at retail and wholesale to all parts of the southwest. Alfred Ross was never married. Until two years ago he made his home with his brother, J. M., and after the death of the latter in 1903, with his sister-in-law. Two years ago he built a fine residence at 1064 North Market street, and his sister, Miss Lizzie A. Ross, came here from Springfield, Mo., to keep house for him. In business he was successful though he and his brother started with but little. Besides his fine residence, Mr. Ross owned one of the best orchards in Sedgwick county, in addition to the property of the company owned jointly by him and his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. M. Ross. The business will be continued under the firm name with L. B. McCausland, who has been with the firm the past 17 years, as active manager.

Funeral services were held Tuesday, May 16, at 3:30 o'clock at the late residence in charge of Dr. A. M. Brodie, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. The pallbearers were Judge Jesse D. Wall, L. B. McCausland, F. W. Brose, John Christopher, Walter Christopher, Jesse Crane, Charles Dye and M. J. Koenigsman. With the exception of Judge Wall, all of the other pallbearers are in the employ of the firm. Two of these men, John Christopher and Fred Brose, have been with the firm more than 20 years.

Joseph Krug.

Joseph Krug, for 55 years a resident of Alton, Ill., and who for many years conducted the only florist business in that vicinity, died at his home, May 8, aged 79 years. He had been ill for some time, being confined to the house the greater part of the past winter, but his health began to improve and a few weeks ago he was able to be about his establishment, but suffered a relapse and the end came within a week.

Mr. Krug purchased the site of his present establishment when it was a woods and started in business as a vegetable grower, but later added a floral department. Both branches of the business grew steadily, more land was purchased, and house after house was added to the range. The deceased and his widow celebrated their golden wedding anniversary 10 years ago. The widow, three sons and seven daughters, all residents of Alton, survive.

Joseph Krug was a man of sterling character with high business principles and he made many friends with his kind hearted disposition. The funeral was held May 10, members of Branch No. 9, Western Catholic Union, of which he was a charter member, attending in a body. Many handsome floral tributes which accompanied him to his last resting place, told of the esteem in which he was held by his townsmen, among whom he had spent nearly three score years of his life.

William G. Rowand.

William G. Rowand, for many years in charge of the warehouse of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., died Wednesday morning, May 10, at his home, Haddonfield, N. J. He had been a member of the "Dreer" force for 30 years, and by his faithful and loyal service had gained the confidence of his employers and also the high regard of his fellow workers. Funeral services were held at his home, Sunday afternoon, May 14.

SALEM, ORE.—Horace Skiff has been appointed superintendent of the floral department at the state fair this year.

HOUSTON, TEX.—H. H. Kuhlmann, who has been at Kerrville, Tex., for his health, is reported much improved and will return home soon.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—Allison's Flower Shop has purchased the West Asheville Greenhouses and will make a number of improvements.

ERIE, PA.—S. Alfred Baur says it will take fully another year to clear up the legal tangles in which he is involved with floral concerns here.

BRAINARD, MINN.—S. N. Miehlin, formerly in charge of the greenhouses at the state school at Owatonna, Minn., will go into business for himself in this city.

ATCHISON, KAN.—New greenhouses and an up-to-date office building are being erected by the Grove Floral Co. When completed, this establishment will be one of the finest in this section of the country.

MOBILE, ALA.—The Gulf Coast Horticultural Society has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Dr. O. F. E. Winberg, Silver Hill, Ala.; president; W. S. Reeves, Pensacola, Fla., vice-president; Colin McDonald, Grand Bay, Ala., secretary-treasurer.

PETERBORO, ONT.—The 1916 Easter trade in this city was very satisfactory, the volume of business being equal to that of other years. Both the Peterboro Floral Co. and Jordan Bros. cleaned up nicely. Lilies were in heavy demand and Baby Rambler roses, which took the place of azaleas, also had a strong call.

MONTREAL, QUE.—Roses were the leaders in the Easter trade this year. By Saturday evening the supply was cleaned up completely, carnations then met the same fate, and late buyers had to be satisfied with sweet peas and daffodils. For the first time in many years the lily supply was equal to the demand. The call for cut flowers of all kinds was phenomenal.

SEDALIA, MO.—The Archias' Floral Co. reports Easter sales this year much better than those of a year ago. Prices were also better and the supply was plentiful, with the exception of carnations and the better grades of roses in the cut flower class. That the delivery of flowers by parcel post and through the telegraph delivery is gaining in favor is shown by the fact that sales along these lines were double those of a year ago.

Mothers' Day Trade.

A wonderful demand for flowers and plants for Mothers' day this year, and an increase in volume of business as compared with that of a year ago makes evident the fact that this comparatively new flower day is gaining in popular favor with each succeeding year; in fact, in several instances the demand is reported as being almost as great as at Easter and Christmas. Newspaper and other means of publicity were employed to a greater extent this year than ever before, and the results in every case were gratifying. The supply of white carnations was of course far below requirements, but the public readily accepted the colored varieties, and in fact, cut flowers of all sorts, cleaned up to the last bloom before closing time. Flowering plants also showed increased popularity for the occasion, sales being better than last year. While the heavy demand forced up the price of carnations, the retail price varying from $1.25 to $2 per dozen, there was little change in prices of other cut flowers.

HOUSTON CONVENTION GARDEN.

Superintendent Brock of the Convention Garden now being installed on city property at Houston, reports that the exhibits received so far are small in number. Intending exhibitors are requested to send forward their exhibits at once, as the convention dates are rapidly approaching. The very liberal treatment accorded our society by the City of Houston, in setting apart a splendid site for the garden, and arranging to take upon itself the burden of furnishing labor and material in order to make the installation a success, deserves more than the scanty recognition at present forthcoming.

All who can exhibit plants and shrubs are urged to do so. The cost, 10 cents per square foot, is ridiculously small, insufficient to prevent anyone from exhibiting on the ground of expense, and in making an exhibit there surely is some pleasure to be found in aiding the society to carry out its plans to have a convention garden wherever the annual convention may go.

Superintendent Brock would be pleased even if at least 50 exhibitors would take 100 square feet each. He points out that although the date is late, pot stock can be plunged in, and a creditable showing made.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Growers of Foreign Bamboo Warned.

The United States department of agriculture has been advised of the presence of the smut disease of bamboos on certain plantings of imported bamboos in the United States. The disease has appeared in three separate localities, but so far as known has not spread so widely but that prompt action now may completely eradicate it from the whole country. Like smut of wheat or corn, this disease appears as black powdery swellings on the small twigs or branches about the size of a knitting needle. The black powder easily comes off on one's fingers, and this powder is composed of the spores which spread the disease. Every owner of a bamboo clump is requested to examine the young leafy branches of his plants carefully, and if he finds a black powder on them, to send to the Department of Agriculture, Quarantine Inspection Room, Washington, D. C., a small twig of the affected plant, carefully sealed in an envelope. Directions for treatment will be sent by mail or telegraph in case the specimen proves that the clump is diseased.

In view of the adaptability of this very useful class of plants to the climate and soil of the United States, it is of the utmost importance that the department be informed immediately of the locality of every clump of imported bamboo in the country, in order to advise all owners of bamboo clumps how to prevent them from becoming diseased in case the smut should be reported from a near-by locality.

Chimney Stack Dimensions.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please advise the size of chimney required to take care of three boilers, the grate surface of each being 3 ft. 6 in. by 3 ft. 6 in. I have only two boilers now, but would like to have a chimney big enough for another. Which is the cheapest and most satisfactory, steel or brick? Illinois. X.

In estimating the size of a chimney, much depends upon the kind of coal to be used, as well as upon the construction of the boilers, size of openings in the grate bars, proximity of buildings, etc.

Under average conditions, if run of mine coal is to be used, we would suggest the use of a chimney 24 inches in diameter and 40 feet high, for three boilers having grates 3½ feet square. In case the nature of the surroundings makes the use of a higher chimney desirable a corresponding decrease may be made in the diameter of the chimney.

In most sections of the country a brick chimney will cost no more than one of steel at the present time, and if constructed of good materials, will be far more durable than one of ordinary steel construction.

EXCEPTIONAL MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

The early part of last week found market conditions in a rather quiet state. The demand in most lines was not as brisk as the week previous, and with the supply fully as large as heretofore, it meant hustle to keep things moving. But all this time orders were being booked for Mothers' day, the heaviest call being for carnations. Now, whether due to the local cooperative advertising of the florists' club, or to the ever increasing popularity of the day, it must be admitted, that in spite of the inclement weather conditions on Sunday, for it was cool and accompanied by rain at times, business was far beyond expectations. No one had any stock left by the close of the day. The carnation, and especially the white, was "King of the day" and although $6 per 100 for assorted and $8.00 per 100 for white alone, was asked, the supply of good stock was far short of the demand. Owing no doubt to the advance prices given out, quite a few carnations were held too long, with the result that the prices went down instead of up. This pickled stock could not be shipped so went at face value. The supply of roses and sweet peas was about equal to the demand, the former bringing 3 cents to 10 cents. White sweet peas, according to quality, ranged from 50 cents to $1.50 per 100. Quite a few peonies were also to be seen and realized from 4 cents to 6 cents. Although Easter and calla lilies were white, they did not move briskly; in fact, some were left.

NOTES.

To show in what high esteem the late Robert Haentze, of Fond du Lac, Wis., was held, C. C. Pollworth, who attended the funeral, said that business in that city was at a complete standstill on that day, and considering the size of the city, it was the largest funeral he had ever witnessed.

Wm. Lubliner, the Grand avenue florist, who was operated on for appendicitis, May 8, is recovering nicely and expects to be able to attend to business in about a week.

L. L. May, of St. Paul, Minn., arrived here May 9 to enter the Mount Sinai hospital for a period of about four weeks, according to his own statement. E. O.

MOTHERS' DAY TRADE LIKE EASTER RUSH.

A highly satisfactory Mothers' day business was recorded by the Pittsburgh florists this year, and the volume of business done in some places gave the appearance of an Easter or Christmas rush. Carnations were in the most demand, of course, and brought very good returns. Roses and peonies also took well and the wholesale houses found themselves cleaned up almost entirely by Saturday night. Needless to say, there could have been five or six times as many carnations used as were on the market and orders were cut down considerably in order that each might get a proportionate amount of stock. At the present time there still remains a scarcity of carnations, sweet peas and lilies. Tea roses and American Beauties are plentiful. The plantmen are at the height of their busy season and only two weeks remain until Memorial day.

Indications point to a good supply of peonies for Memorial day, which will be quite the opposite of last year's experience, when some of the most disagreeable weather possible halted the big crops just a week or so before the desirable time, but with a con-

MOTHERS' DAY COMPLETE CLEANUP.

In spite of the cool and rainy weather, everything in cut flowers and pot plants in bloom sold on Mothers' day and any amount of orders had to be turned down on account of insufficient stock. The supply was of fair quality and commanded good prices. The daily papers boosted Mothers' day, displaying on their front page an illustration of a carnation, and telling the public to wear that flower. There was a strong call for red carnations, second to white. Mothers' day is getting better for the trade from year to year and will in time be the most profitable day or week on the florists' calendar.

J. A. Valentine, of Denver, stopped here on his way home, Sunday, May 13.

RAIN HURTS MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

Business has been very brisk in all lines during the past week. Stock showed up well and was in fair supply. Mothers' day sales showed a big increase over previous years, but a heavy rain hurt sales to quite an extent. Carnations and roses seemed plentiful, but owing to the heavy demand, there were not enough to supply all orders. Easter and calla lilies played a big part and sweet peas sold out early in the game. Pink gladioli and peonies also had quick sales. Pot plants and made up baskets were also as popular as ever.

NOTES.

W. J. Barnes reports the heaviest week's business for this time of the year in his history. Added to the heavy Mothers' day trade, his force was kept busy with selling and planting boxes, baskets and bedding plants—and the end is not yet.

H. Kusik & Co. had a heavy trade all week and cleaned out completely on Mothers' day. They handled thousands of carnations and roses but did not have enough to go around. Gladioli, lilies, peonies and sweet peas were also ready sellers.

A. Elberfield has the honor of being the second florist who contributed to the Mothers' Day International Association fund, having received a cordial letter from Miss Anna Jarvis to that effect.

T. J. Noll & Co. had the biggest Mothers' day trade in their history. They handled an immense amount of stock in all lines, among other items being 20,000 carnations.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a record breaking business for Mothers' day. The supply of cut stock was plentiful and included 25,000 carnations.

August Luther has no complaint to make. Mothers' day trade here was a heavy rush, and calls for porch boxes, baskets and bedding stock are many.

A. F. Barbee had an immense cemetery trade for Mothers' day. He sold out completely and reports a big increase in sales over last year.

MOTHERS' DAY TRADE SHOWS INCREASE.

The Mothers' day trade was much better than last year and stock of all kinds, with one or two exceptions, cleaned up nicely each day at very satisfactory figures, especially carnations, which sold at high prices and were in exceedingly short supply. Both the local and shipping trade were surprisingly good and there were not enough carnations to go around, consequently roses sold well and some of the dealers found it necessary to cut their rose orders down about 30 per cent so that all their customers would receive some. American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell were in good demand, especially in the shorter grades, and the same applied to all other varieties, which cleaned up completely. Sweet peas sold unusually well and cleaned up nicely each day at good prices, but lilac was in large supply and moved quickly and the same was true of peonies, which were in fairly good supply. Snapdragons, gladioli, daisies, lupines, calendulas, tulips, poppies and all miscellaneous seasonable stock had a good call, and with the exception of lilies, were all disposed of. Carnations in the better grades sold at prices ranging from $5 to $8 per 100 at wholesale and at $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen retail, but did not move any too well at those figures and toward Saturday evening after the rain had set in many of the retailers were willing to dispose of all they had to offer at $1.00 to $1.50 per dozen. Many of the buyers refused to pay such high prices for carnations and either walked out of the store or bought roses at about the same figure in the shorter grades or took miscellaneous stock instead. Considerable advertising was done in the daily papers, special folders were sent out and many of the stores displayed appropriate window cards which were sent out free by the Mothers' Day International Association. Mothers' day was nearly as good as Easter as far as the wholesalers were concerned and the retailers all report good business and would have done much better if it had not rained a good part of Saturday afternoon and all Sunday morning, but as it was, everyone was satisfied and but few complaints are heard. Plants sold well and there is no question but what Mothers' day in the future will be one of the biggest flower days in the year and will compare favorably with Christmas and Easter as far as cut flowers are concerned. Memorial day is next on the list, and while there promises to be a good supply of stock of all kinds for this occasion, especially roses and peonies, there will be no great surplus when the rush is over and everyone would do well to place their orders far in advance so as to insure their supply. EXPRESSMEN STRIKE AT CHICAGO.

The wholesale florists have been affected somewhat by the strike of the express companies and helpers called Tuesday, May 16. The large concerns hit by the walk-out are the Adams, Wells-Fargo, American, Western, Great Northern, Merchants' National and Northern Express companies. The companies admit that their business was badly crippled the first day, but assert that a strong effort will be made to make deliveries throughout the city and that within a few days the system will be back to normal with nonunion men on the wagons. So far the wholesale florists have been able to get practically all their packages to and from the depots by using their own wagons or sending them by messengers or by express wagons manned with nonunion drivers and helpers, accompanied by two police guards each. The strikers are asking recognition of the union, shorter hours and a hearing of grievances. The florists have held several meetings since the strike and a committee has been appointed, headed by Fred Lautenschlager, to try and make some arrangements with the union in regard to getting the shipments to the depots. Mr. Lautenschlager and W. L. Kroeschell have met with the union officials several times, but so far no definite arrangements have been made and each dealer is do-

CHICAGO, ILL.

Bryan Lathrop, one of this city's foremost citizens for the past fifty years in the field of art, civic uplift, charity and business, died unexpectedly Saturday, May 13, at the age of 72 years. As one of the Lincoln Park commissioners, to which position he was elected in 1901, Mr. Lathrop drew up a plan for the extension of Lincoln Park north on Diversey boulevard to Cornelia street. Bonds for the carrying forward of this project, which added 600 acres to the park, were issued twice. The work is still going on.

The Raedlein Basket Co. has finished work on its new sales and display rooms and cordially invites the trade to inspect its line whenever the opportunity presents itself. This firm has just installed a new $500 air brush, which makes the third outfit of its kind in use at the establishment and keeps six men busy all the time. Several experienced basket men were added to the regular force this week and there is enough work on hand to keep the entire crew busy from early in the morning until late at night.

Bassett & Washburn's sales for Mothers' day were 50 per cent better than last year, according to C. L. Washburn, and stock of all kinds cleaned up completely at an early hour, especially roses and carnations, which were in best demand. Mr. Washburn says that Mothers' day was celebrated more generally throughout the country than heretofore and that the shipping trade was much better than he expected it would be.

Peter Reinberg cleaned up completely in all lines of stock for Mothers' day and Manager Reichling reports that their sales were as good as those of last Easter. Both the local and shipping trade were heavy and they had a large cut of both roses and carnations for the occasion. This firm will be in good crop for Memorial day and the outlook for another big week's business is very encouraging.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. enjoyed a splendid Mothers' day trade and cleaned up all the stock that they had to offer every day at good prices. The shipping trade particularly was very heavy and the city demand was surprisingly good. The outlook is bright for a large supply of stock for Memorial day and a large supply of peonies will be handled in addition to their regular line of cut flowers.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are busy making up magnolia wreaths for Memorial day and are mailing a special supply circular to the trade this week, which they will be pleased to mail to anyone upon request. In the cut flower department a fine line of stock is seen and the report here is that they will have a large supply for Memorial day.

J. A. Budlong added a peony grower to their list of consignors this week, which will give them an extra supply to offer for Memorial day. Philip Schupp was pleased with Budlong's Mothers' day trade, which was by far the best in years and is proving to be almost as good a flower day as Christmas and Easter.

Allie Zech says that Zech & Mann were more than satisfied with their Mothers' day trade, which was exceptionally heavy and compared most favorably with that of Easter. This firm is featuring a large supply of fancy sweet peas and Mrs. Chas Russell roses, which will be their chief leaders for Memorial day.

W. J. Miller, of Pontiac, was a visitor in the wholesale market this week. He reports a splendid Mothers' day business and says that white sweet peas, which were in good crop with him, sold quickly after his white carnations were all disposed of.

Hoerber Bros. are cutting a fine supply of roses in all the leading varieties and their Killarney are showing exceptionally fine color at present. This firm had no trouble in disposing of all the stock that they had to offer for their Mothers' day trade, which was the best ever.

At the John Kruchten Co.'s store peonies are arriving in large quantities and they will have a better supply than ever to offer for Memorial day. Trade at this establishment was very good for Mothers' day and everything in carnations and roses cleaned up at an early hour.

Erne & Klingel's sales for Mothers' day were unusually good and fully 50 per cent better than those of last year. Chas. Erne is of the opinion that peonies will be plentiful for Memorial day, but thinks that carnations will be rather scarce.

Joseph Ziska & Sons report business as good and have so many city deliveries that their delivery truck is kept on the go all day long. John Ziska celebrated his thirty-second birthday May 13.

Sinner Bros. had a dandy Mothers' day trade and the outlook for a large supply of roses and carnations for Memorial day is very encouraging, for they are in good crop with both.

Kyle & Foerster are having a good call for fancy sweet peas, which they are handling in quantity and which will be one of their leaders for Memorial day.

At Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store the receipts of peonies are very heavy and some exceptionally fine stock is included in the daily shipments.

Miller & Musser are celebrating their second Memorial day in the wholesale business and are gradually building up a splendid trade.

Sam Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, left for home this week to get a new line of creations to show his customers on his next trip.

Wietor Bros. are very enthusiastic over their Mothers' day trade, which was the best ever and compared most favorably with Easter. N. J. Wietor says that he is willing to head a subscription list with $25 and believes that the other wholesalers would do their share if they were only approached, the entire amount to be turned over to the Chicago Florists' Club, to be forwarded to the Mothers' Day International Association, who asked for financial assistance through Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, Pa., at the last meeting. Wietor Bros. are now cutting from a splendid crop of Sunburst roses, which are in brisk demand.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. cleaned up completely in all lines for Mothers' day, which was surprisingly good, and much better than last year. Roses and carnations sold best, but miscellaneous stock had a good call and everything was disposed of at an early hour each day. At Morton Grove, Tony Gabel and his crew have finished planting 250,000 carnation plants out in the field and are now busy propagating chrysanthemums. Tom Conlon, superintendent of the plant department, reports a good demand for calceolarias, which the retailers claim is not only a good seller, but a dandy window attraction.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. is delivering four 300 h. p. Kroeschell steam boilers to the A. F. Amling Co., at Maywood this week which will be installed to heat their large new range of rose houses now nearly completed. The Kroeschell Co. will soon deliver a 160 h. p. steam boiler to J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. at Joliet which will help to keep Aviator and all their other good carnations warm next winter.

The George Wittbold Co. will be located in their new store on Buckingham Place much earlier than they expect if the second section of the Wittbold apartments is completed as rapidly as the first. They are working under difficulties in the store now, but are taking care of all their customers, as well as they did before, but will no doubt be better pleased when all the building operations are completed.

Weiland & Risch are cutting exceptionally fine Mrs. Francis King, Augusta and America gladioli. They have a supply of their new rose, Champ Weiland, on display every day at their store where it is always an object of interest to the trade. John Risch says that Weiland & Risch will grow this variety on a large scale next season and have already planted six large houses to it.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. were more than pleased with their Mothers' day trade which was much better than Easter and cleaned up completely in all lines before the rush was over. This firm is showing a fine supply of peonies in all colors and in all grades and will have a tremendous supply to offer for Memorial day in addition to their regular complete line of cut flowers.

Paul Klingsporn says that trade for Mothers' day was surprisingly good at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association store and that the sales compared most favorably with those of Easter which were a record breaker. Both the local and shipping trade were brisk and a grand clean up was experienced.

The A. Dietsch Co. delivered the last car of greenhouse material this week to Furrow & Co., of Guthrie, Okla., for their new range of seven houses, each 27x150 feet. This is the third range that Furrow & Co. have built in which Dietsch material has been used.

The Central Floral Co.'s new store on North State street looks 100 per cent better since their new set of Buchbinder fixtures have been installed and compares most favorably with any other retail establishment in the city.

John Michelson says that the E. C. Amling Co. had a splendid Mothers' day trade and that the total sales were away ahead of last year. This firm is handling a large supply of fine Ophelia, Milady and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses.

Bernie A. Zalinger says that trade has been good right along at his store at 175 West Jackson boulevard and reports a brisk Mothers' day trade.

The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Company has already delivered several carloads of material for Gullett & Sons' new range at Lincoln.

The A. L. Randall Co. disposed of a large supply of peonies for Mothers' day which were in good demand owing to the shortage of other stock.

The Ickes-Braun Mill Co., 2340 Wabansia avenue, report business as good and that inquiries from prospective builders are numerous.

Bob Tesson, who was formerly engaged in the retail florist business at St. Louis, Mo., visited old acquaintances here this week.

E. F. Winterson Co. report a highly satisfactory Mothers' day trade, equal almost to that of the last big flower day.

Vaughan's Seed Store will receive a big shipment of bay trees on the S. S. New Amsterdam, due next week.

Robert Northam is pleasing George Reinberg's customers with a fine grade of Richmond and Ophelia roses.

William F. Vlk, 5118 South Ashland avenue, has added a new panel top car to his delivery service.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. sold a large quantity of cut lilac for Mothers' day.

GOOD MOTHERS' DAY SALES.

Mothers' day business cleaned up everything in the market, the demand being very good. The growers cut everything so close for last week's demand that the market was still tight the early part of this week, but toward the middle of the week, however, it eased somewhat. American Beauties and other roses are in a good supply and carnations, too, are plentiful. The cut of Easter lilies is still very heavy. Irises are now coming in and have been meeting with a fair market and snapdragons meet with a fair call. Sweet peas are plentiful and the first peonies have made their appearance. Gladioli sell well. Other offerings include lily of the valley and orchids.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market with peonies. He has already made arrangements for a large supply for Memorial day.

Fred Brueggemann and wife, of New Castle, Ind., are in the city renewing old friendships.

P. J. Olinger is having an excellent cut of roses.

French & Salm are cutting a magnificent supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses and will have a large, steady cut from now on all through the summer months. They have three large houses, each 58x350 feet or about 75,000 feet of glass all told, devoted exclusively to this variety and the stock is in such splendid condition that it is worth going a long distance to see. Trade visitors have been numerous at this establishment the past few months and everyone has been greatly surprised at the wonderful condition of the 36,000 plants which are just starting their second season. The plants are big, strong and bushy and well laden with that much desired dark green foliage and the bottom shoots are a sight to behold. They are in splendid crop right now and the plants are producing almost as heavily as Killarney and the cuts average from 4,000 to 5,000 flowers a day. The houses which are of Lord & Burnham construction are modern in every respect with both top and side ventilation and seven acres of land adjoining the greenhouses will give them all the soil that is needed for years to come and the local supply of cow manure is plentiful enough so that the plants will receive all the nourishment that is necessary and which is quite an asset to the growers nowadays. Guy and Dick, as the proprietors are best known to the trade, took charge of this place March 1, 1915, and are more than pleased with the success that they have had since then. One can get a better idea of the condition of the stock by inspecting same for it is in such splendid condition that it is rather difficult to properly describe it in so small a space and then besides the latch string is always out and everyone is welcome. It would not be at all surprising if several houses were added before the year is over and is almost safe to gamble that American Beauty roses will be given considerable bench space in the new range. An Enchantress colored sport of Mrs. Chas. Russell is attracting the attention of the visitors and has all the good points of the parent variety and looks very promising.

Mothers' day trade in this city was enormous, far surpassing any previous observance. Newspaper advertising and other publicity did much to stimulate interest and bring about a call for flowers other than the white carnation, with the result that everything sold well, roses especially. Business in general is good and the bedding season has now opened in earnest. An immense trade for Memorial day is anticipated.

NOTES.

A communication recently received in this city states that another monument to Johnny Appleseed was erected at Ashland, O., July 28, 1915, more than 1,000 school children contributing five cents each for the purpose.

In the civic beautification contest a prize of $50 has been offered in the backyard contest which has brought forth more than 2,000 entries, which mean good business for the florist who deals in shrubs, etc.

MOTHERS' DAY TRADE BETTER THAN 1915.

The feature of the week was the business of Mothers' day. All looked forward to it with interest, but very few took the trouble to help it along by advertising, window decorations, or by sending cards to their customers. Charles Grakelow made an appropriate window decoration and also a display in the lobby of the Grand Opera house. His business for this day was much better than last season. John Gracey did very well—better than last year, and from nearly all the uptown florists, the report was the same. In fact all the trade in the residence districts felt the increase of business and were much benefited by the observance of the day. The central city shops did a fair business, but not so much in proportion to their volume of trade as the smaller stores. The street men handled large quantities of carnations, according to Edward Reid; they are the only ones who will take a chance, most of the store men being "dead ones", afraid of their shadows. The market was very full as a great deal of stock had been "prepared", so that there should be sufficient for the demand. The wholesale men claim to have sold out at prices ranging from $4 to $8 for the white, a few extra fine ones bringing twelve. S. S. Pennock is of the opinion that it would be a good thing if the retailers would get together and plan to boost other flowers; they did not like to have to charge so much for white carnations, but were driven to it by the demand. He believes the business showed quite an increase over that of last season. The market is very full of flowers. All kinds of roses are arriving in quantities that make them difficult to handle. There are also some very good sweet peas, which sell as well as anything. Carnations are back again to normal figures, but still reflect the demand of Mothers' day. Easter lilies are still very plentiful and selling at prices that favor the buyer.

NOTES.

Julius Wolff, Jr., is giving up his greenhouses at Sedgely avenue, having sold the ground to the Pennsylvania R. R., which is widening its road-bed at that point and requires quite a slice of the property. He will give up the wholesale decorative business in which he did so much for the trade in renting palms, and confine his efforts entirely to the demands of his retail store and the smaller decorative work necessary in carrying it on. He thinks after all his years of hard work he can afford to take it a little easier.

Edward Reid is well pleased with his clean up for Mothers' day. He had a big stock of carnations and sold them all at prices he said would be satisfactory to the growers. Choice Mock roses are a feature here.

Choice orchid sweet peas and good Maryland roses were seen at the Berger Brothers' Market. High grade lily of the valley is also in stock. A very good demand for Mothers' day is the report.

American Beauties are leaders with the Leo Niessen Co. Snapdragons and sweet peas are also features. K.

GREAT MOTHERS' DAY BUSINESS.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mothers' day this year followed so closely after the Easter rush, the trade in this city under the auspices of the florists' club made determined and intelligent effort to prevent any slowing down. Florists were furnished with window cards and banners for their delivery cars, advertisements were inserted in the newspapers, and the results have justified the preparation. The market was in splendid condition. All seasonable flowers were in good supply, and the cuts of carnations and roses were especially liberal. Sweet peas were in splendid crop and sold in great quantities. Advertising has

NEW MEETING PLACE OF FLORISTS' CLUB.

Through the efforts of Arthur C. Kneisel, secretary, the florists' club now has a splendid meeting place on the fifteenth floor of the Nicholas building. These rooms were donated to the use of the club by the Retail Merchants' Board of this city. J. H. Coombs, secretary of this board, was present and gave the large attendance of florists a stirring insight into the real meaning of co-operation and how it would result in immeasurable benefit to all. The proposition suggested by THE AMERICAN FLORIST of giving Miss Anna Jarvis an appropriate testimonial to aid her in carrying on her Mothers' day work was discussed. This matter will again be taken up at the June meeting of the club.

NOTES.

The writer spent an hour the other day with Tom Magee, the genial manager of the Scottwood Greenhouse, and found that worthy head over heels in work, preparing for spring planting and Mothers' day. While there the writer saw some magnificent specimen hydrangea plants. Tom has a great reputation as a grower and produces some splendid stock. His geraniums are in great condition and are the best the writer has seen here.

Hirzel Brothers is the name of the firm that succeeds to the long established business of E. A. Kuhnke in East Toledo. This firm joined the florists' club at the last meeting. They are live wires and are doing an encouraging business.

Warning's Flower Shop has been on Broadway but a year now, and is making rapid strides in business. This is a good residence district and offers a good opportunity for a live florist.

LOW PRICES RULE THE MARKET.

There has been little change in the condition of the wholesale trade since our last notes were written. On account of "Mothers' day" there has been a stronger demand for white carnations, the price of which ranged from $3 to $6 per 100. Possibly a few novelties sold at the rate of $8 per 100, but they were exceptions. Pink carnations ranged from $2 to $4 per 100, it being very special stock that brought the latter price. American Beauties have been doing a little better on account of the supply being somewhat lighter, but $20 per 100 is the best price. In other roses there is no change worthy of note. Asked about lilies, a leading wholesaler said: "They are selling at whatever we can get for them," which tells the story. Sweet peas are yet in abundant supply and are selling very cheap. The peonies will soon be a leading factor, as there is a great stock in sight. One dollar per dozen for southern stock is now the ruling price.

May 15.—While there was more or less buying in the wholesale market this morning, business in general is quiet. Reports on the Mothers' day trade are to the effect that white carnations went to six, eight and in a few instances ten cents on account of buyers from Philadelphia and other cities drawing on this market. The majority of retailers interviewed state that their sales in this line were light and some did not buy white at all. Pink varieties sold slow and four cents was the best price. In other stock there was no material change in prices.

NOTES.

Much has been said and written about Mothers' day. The writer does not doubt that the lady who originated it was prompted by the highest and purest motives. She did not realize that a holy sentiment would be commercialized—but it has been done. We believe that there are features of this life that are far above money-making, and mother love should be one of them. Pushing up the price of white carnations from $2 to $6 per 100 is not increasing mother love; it is putting it on the market to the highest bidder. In one stanza of her poem, "Rock Me to Sleep," Mrs. Allen stated a matchless sentiment:

"Over my heart in the days that are flown,
No love like mother-love ever has shone;
No other worship abides and endures,— Faithful, unselfish, and patient like yours;
None like a mother can charm away pain
From the sick soul and the world-weary brain."

That is a too high and holy sentiment to be commercialized.

The following appeared in the New York Times, of May 15. If the suffragists can clean up the market on that day, they will win a lot of converts in the wholesale district: "Women who are to sell flowers in the big suffrage flower market, to be held on the corners of Fifth avenue cross streets from Thirty-fourth to Fifty-eighth streets, Saturday, May 27, are to take lessons of professional salesmen for the work, and definite arrangements for flower-selling lessons will be made on Friday of this week. The market will be held from 10:30 a. m. until dark and will open with a parade of 100 flower-filled automobiles which will run up Fifth avenue from Washington square to Fifty-ninth street and returning leave two automobiles at each of the intersecting streets, one at the northwest and the other at the southeast corner. There will be three suffragist sales women to a car dressed in white, each wearing a suffrage sash and a brilliant colored crepe paper hat."

Turning to the Brooklyn plantmen, they, too, are active. We have said in that past that Louis Schmutz, father and son, were wizards in plant growing, and every time we call on them we are confirmed in that opinion. They are selling all the time, but manage to always have a good stock on hand. At present they have a fine stock of hydrangeas in all sizes. Pandanus Veitchii, gloxinias, tuberous rooted begonias, dracaenas and much other fine stock. Not being able to get rubbers from Belgium this year, they got them from New Orleans, and are well pleased with the stock. They have a nice stock of pink and white oleanders, plants that are now but little grown, but deserve a better fate than to be discarded. A well grown oleander is a highly ornamental plant.

Visiting the Flatbush, Brooklyn, growers the past week, we found them well satisfied with the season's business and they are yet showing good stock. The carnation growers have their young stock planted in the field and, so far as we could observe, it is doing well. The Flatbush growers look with but slight favor on Alice and Pink Sensation. Whatever the two varieties may have done in other places, they are practical failures there.

Fred. Cucker, who for the past seven years has worked in Paul Meconi's wholesale store, has enlisted in the U. S. army and is now stationed at Fort Slocum. He is a very bright and active young man and has had an eventful career. He was born in China, his father, who died in this city about two weeks ago, being a missionary there at the time of his birth. As a soldier, we do not doubt that he will make good.

George W. Crawbuck, who for a number of years has been manager of the Greater New York Florists' Association, 162 Livingstone street, Brooklyn, has resigned and taken the store at 57 West 28th street, New York, where he will open as a wholesaler, about June 1, as George W. Crawbuck, Incorporated. He is a clever and active man and we wish him success.

It has been said that troubles never come singly, and it often seems so. We have noted the illness of Jonathan Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash. Now, we learn that John Kral, their head salesman, is down with an attack of pneumonia. John is one of the finest men in the wholesale district; there is not a kink in his character, and we hope to see him about soon.

At the D. Y. Mellis range near Holy Cross cemetery, Brooklyn, Manager Boyd has a great stock of plants. As the business of this range is largely cemetery work, stock is grown to meet the demand. The venerable Mrs. T. J. Dixon, who is also located near Holy Cross cemetery, though 78 years old keeps about and assists with business.

Julius Chevally, of Blue Point, one of the leading carnation growers of Long Island, was in this city May 12-13. The King Construction Co. is erecting a new carnation house for him, 60x200 feet. Blue Point has become a great center for carnation growing.

Philip Krebs, a grower of Orangeburg, N. Y., and well known in the wholesale district, has just bought a nice automobile and now makes his daily trips in about one hour, the distance being about 25 miles. Philip is a hard worker, and we are pleased to note his prosperity.

A. Demeusey, Brooklyn, had a very fine stock of carnations. He has quite a stock of a deep pink sport of Enchantress that sported in his stock. We have seen no sport of Enchantress that has impressed us more favorably.

At Dailedouze Brothers, Brooklyn, we noted a fine house of Mrs. Ward and another of Enchantress Supreme. A fine stock of white carnations was brought in for Mothers' day. The rose Ophelia is noteworthy at this range.

The first peonies of the season arrived at J. K. Allen's, 118 West 28th street, May 10. They were shipped from Virginia and were in good condition. Indications point to a very heavy peony crop for this season.

G. Messeberg, Brooklyn, divides his attention between cut flowers and plants, growing good carnations and other cut stock and a variety of plants. We found him shipping out a fine lot of euonymus.

James Conlon, the retailer, of 46 Smith street, Brooklyn, had large orders for funeral work during the past week, and we noticed a number of fine designs. He is also doing a good business in plants.

The Twentieth Century Flower Shop is the title of a retail enterprise, recently started at 1 West 42d street by P. Hecht, formerly of Boston. This is one of the most desirable locations in the city.

The firm of Goldstein & Futterman is handling very attractive novelties. They have a splendid stock of yellow daisies, Spanish iris and corn flowers, as well as lilies, roses and carnations.

Robert M. Smith, formerly with Guttman & Raynor, Inc., and well known in the wholesale district, is now managing the Kopp retail store at 1766 Broadway, Brooklyn.

Jonathan Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, was kept from business during the past week by an attack of grippe, but we are pleased to state that he is now greatly improved.

At the Henry Hession range, Brooklyn, they are growing fine carnations. They have a stock of a crimson seedling of their own production that looks very promising.

In speaking of Brooklyn wholesale florists, Samuel Stone, of 359 Jay street, must not be forgotten. He is always on the job and is doing business.

Louis Constant, formerly of Pitot & Constant, 144 Columbus avenue, who left for France about the first of this year, is now in the French army.

ALFRED ROSS, of Ross Bros., Wichita, Kans., died May 14. The business will be continued as heretofore with L. B. McCausland manager. For further details see obituary column.

THE crop of onion sets in the Chicago district is looking well. Cultivation began last week and good rains are helping crop conditions, although increasing labor in the weeding. Some lots on high ground suffered from the heavy winds last week.

PARIS, FRANCE. — Sergeant Rene Godineau, of the Seventy-first Regiment Territorials, charged to assist a superior officer in a perilous and difficult undertaking on March 10, accomplished the task so creditably, with such disregard of danger and such control of his subordinates that he has been decorated with the cross of war.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade May 17 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $8.00 per 100 pounds.—Peter Hollenbach will celebrate his sixty-sixth birthday anniversary May 26. Chas. Hollenbach expects to start on a Pacific coast trip this week, returning in time for the seed trade convention in this city, June 20-22.

Narcissus Mother Bulbs Duty Free.

In Treasury Decisions No. 39598, protest 778435 of Maltus & Ware, New York, Narcissus Bulbs—Mother Flowering Bulbs, Narcissus bulbs classified at $1 per thousand under paragraph 210, tariff act of 1913, are claimed free of duty as mature mother flowering bulbs under the proviso to paragraph 210.

It was found that the narcissus bulbs in question are mature mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes. They were held free of duty under paragraph 210.

CALIFORNIA seed growers are apprehensive of the results from continued drought. "Onion", according to one correspondent, "is really the most promising crop just now and on land which carries moisture and did not flood last winter should make a fair crop, say 75 per cent of normal. Some fields look better than average and some way below it."

Plant Importations by Mail Prohibited.

The secretary of agriculture has advised the treasury department that the prohibition of the importation of plants by mail has been extended to include all growing or living plants, seeds and other plant products for propagation, except field, vegetable and flower seeds, and that the term "field seeds" includes only seeds of cereals, grasses and other annual farm crops and does not include bulbs and tubers.

California Frost Injury.

The frost in the San Juan and Watsonville sections, May 7, reported in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of last week, said to be the latest killing frost of that territory in the 40 years' record of the weather bureau, was followed by lighter frosts May 10, 11 and 12. Seed crops appear to have been damaged only in spots, but it is impossible at this time to estimate the amount of injury. Sweet peas and radish appear to have suffered most.

Shipping Documents Not Delayed.

In further explanation of the British orders in council issued May 6, 1916, in reference to the examination of shipping documents by the British censor and saving valuable time in transmission of these papers to American importers, the British embassy at Washington has sent out the further statement as follows:

"It will, however, not be practicable to carry out the arrangements contemplated unless the documents, whether bills of lading, consular invoices, or other similar papers, are forwarded unaccompanied by any other mail matter, in special bags labelled or marked 'shipping documents.' These bags shall be forwarded by the vessel carrying the cargo to which the documents in question relate."

CURTIS NYE SMITH.

French Crops and Conditions.

Jacques Courtine, representing Bremond Freres, Ollioules, L. Clause, Bretigny, and E. Turbat & Co., Orleans, who favored us with a call May 15, says general business conditions in France on account of the war are rather dull, due principally to lack of labor, all available Frenchmen having been called to the colors. The older men, women and children are unable to properly care for the seed, bulb and nursery crops and in the south the Italian workmen, who rendered material assistance last year have returned to their own country for military service. On account of this labor shortage, a portion of the French bulb crop will remain in the ground unharvested. In general, says Mr. Courtine, while the prices are higher than those of last year, they are not prohibitive and every one concerned hopes for their return to normal with the early close of the war.

The prospective transportation facilities from France to the United States are fair. The Fabre line from Marseilles will have boats available for the bulb trade in July and August and the freight is said to be only about 50 per cent higher than the prices ruling before the war. From Havre and Bordeaux, although both these ports are much congested, it is easier to send goods to the United States than to receive them from other countries and the freight rates have not advanced to such an extent as the freights from the United States to Europe.

Lumber at present is high in France and for this reason the price of packing will be advanced about 50 per cent.

Dutch Bulbs For Food.

A brilliant suggestion which will at one and the same moment relieve a stricken Dutch industry and feed the German people is put forward by the Frankfurter Zeitung:

Holland supplies the world, and in particular the English gardens, with innumerable flower bulbs. As a consequence of the war, however, these articles of luxury are at present but little in demand, the result being that the market is flooded with unsalable wares. Why, then, should not these bulbs be utilized in the kitchen?

Our aesthetic sentiments may revolt against the idea of regarding these glorious blooms from a culinary standpoint—who would not shudder with a species of remorse at devouring the splendid golden lily?—but after a time those feelings would fade away into the consciousness that we had endowed the German people with a fresh means of sustenance and of bidding defiance to the vile machinations of our enemies.

The beauteous floral trophies would then come to be regarded merely as a new species of turnip or onion. The bulbs may be recommended as a most nutritious description of food; they are rich in glucose and dextrin. Mashed, an excellent soup may be prepared from them; they are also very appetizing when cooked with sugar and soy-bean milk.

The California Seed Growers' Association issued the following report on crop conditions May 6:

Since our report, dated April 7, we have not had one drop of rain. During the planting months we had too much rain, much more than needed, during the spring months practically none. In March we had less than one-half of normal and during April we had no rain, whereas the normal rainfall for April is 1.41 inches. While there is considerable moisture in the ground the warm weather is fast reducing it and unless we have some good showers in May all crops, both annuals and biennials, will yield much less to the acre than if we had normal spring rains.

In order to overcome the effects of the dry condition of our beets, principally, we have started our pumps at the various growing stations and have irrigated all of our beet crops so as to insure a good crop of well filled seed. We have also irrigated some onion fields where the ground seemed to be drying out too fast and our general report is as follows:

Beet—Fields show marked improvement since they were irrigated and crop is quite promising.

Carrot—All planted on land where moisture can be held and fields look well.

Endive—Stand is poor owing to lack of rain after planting.

Lettuce—Looking very good at present time. Majority of acreage on land that holds moisture well.

Mustard—Looking good.

Parsley—Looking very good at present.

Parsnip—Small acreage remaining. Looking only fair.

Salsify—Very poor. Plants rotted badly.

Radish—Looking fair. Can not tell as yet whether crops will suffer from continued dryness.

Sweet Peas—Looking quite promising at present.

Onion—This crop is holding up very well. If no mildew attacks fields during May the stand will be very good on most all varieties.

Should we have a little rain during May all lettuce, radish and other annuals will be benefited. If we have no rain all these crops will be reduced in yield.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 16.—Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 35 to 50 cents per carton; lettuce, cases, 30 cents; radishes, 25 cents to 50 cents per doz. bunches; celery, $1.75 to $2.00 per crate; tomatoes, six baskets, $2.00 to $3.50; cucumbers, per doz., 75 cents to $1.00.

New York, May 16.—Celery, per 12-inch crate, $1.00 to $1.75; cucumbers, 75 cents to 90 cents per dozen; mushrooms, 40 cents to $1.75 per 4 pound basket; tomatoes 10 cents to 20 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $3.00; lettuce, per strap, $1.50 to $2.50; rhubarb, per dozen bunches, 25 to 35 cents.

Cauliflower.

For the average market gardener there is probably no more unsatisfactory crop to grow than cauliflower.
From start to finish, everything seems to be against the crop. The seed is high-priced; the seedlings are subject to black root and damping off; the plants are subject to the attack of the radish maggot; the plant is very sensitive to checks in growth, causing the crop to button; weather conditions at maturity have much to do with success, and as the demand is limited, if conditions are too favorable, the market is easily over done. We have used the crop as a greenhouse crop recently, to avoid the market trouble of the open air crop, and have been very successful.

For indoor culture there is probably no better variety than Ey Erfurt;
most of the Extra Earlies offered by our seedsmen are nothing but Erfurt stocks renamed. With all early cauliflowers, there is a constant danger of heading up too soon, called buttoning;
this is caused by checks of some kind.
To avoid this, the crop must be pushed from the start. One of the most frequent causes is repeated transplanting.
They do not recover readily from two shifts; therefore, it is best to either sow the seeds very sparingly in plant beds and avoid pricking out, or pot up the seedlings as soon as the character leaf appears. The pot method is the surest way to success, provided the plants are set out in permanent beds at the right time. If they are allowed to remain in pots too long they are worthless.

We have grown Ey Erfurt cauliflower on greenhouse benches in 5 inch soil spaced 12x16 inches with excellent results. However, on such benches they need much attention in regard to watering and feeding. They respond to frequent syringing in warm weather and will stand high feeding with manure and fertilizers both. We have never found a better combination than poultry droppings, and bone meal, provided the droppings are saved and dried indoors and protected from loss by some absorbent material. Outdoors the crop responds to mechanical watering, in fact this is a necessity.

Shrubs Sold Without Certificate—Fine $25.

Because Oscar Metz, a florist at 5525 Harper avenue, Chicago, sold some shrubs without giving the purchaser a certificate from the state entomologist certifying that the shrubs were free from plant disease, he was fined $25 by Judge Flanagan May 12. It happened that Metz sold the shrubs to the wife of Charles B. Dull, an inspector for the state entomologist.

American Peony Society.

We have received from A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., secretary of the American Peony Society, preliminary premium list of the annual exhibition to be held in conjunction with the Horticultural Society of New York at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, June 9-11.

This list is unofficial, and is issued only in order that possible exhibitors may have it early in their hands. The official premium list, containing fuller information as to the exhibition, will appear later, and should be obtained by all intending exhibitors from Geo. V. Nash, Secretary of the Horticultural Society of New York, Bronx Park, New York.

Hybrid Forsythias at Arnold Arboretum.

By the path in the rear of the group of forsythias on the slope at the foot of the Bussey Hill road are several specimens of forms of the hybrid between Forsythia suspensa and F. viridissima. The general name of these hybrids is F. intermedia, and there are several distinct forms. The plants are in a sheltered position and their flower-buds have not been injured. The handsomest of them is F. intermedia spectabilis, and of all the forsythias which have been grown in the arboretum this is perhaps the most beautiful. The flowers are larger than those of either of its parents, deep bright yellow, and are produced this year in countless numbers, completely covering the wide-spreading branches. This plant was probably raised in Germany as it was sent to the arboretum from the Spath Nursery in Berlin. Other distinct and handsome forms of this hybrid are var. primulina and var. pallida; the former has pale primrose-colored flowers and appeared as a seedling in the arboretum a few years ago. The var. pallida has pale straw-colored flowers which are of a lighter color than those of other forsythias. This plant also first came to the arboretum from Germany. These hybrids are beautiful garden plants, handsomer and perhaps hardier than either of their parents, and they are interesting as showing what may be expected from crossing different species of other trees and shrubs. A good deal has already been done in hybridizing roses and rhododendrons. New races of lilacs, spiræas and Philadelphus produced by the skill of the hybridizer already beautify our gardens, but this business is only in its infancy and greater results may be expected from it than have ever yet been obtained.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 9, 1916.

Providence, R. I.

SATISFACTORY MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

Mothers' day trade in this city this year was splendid, all stock being in good demand, with an especially heavy call for white carnations as usual on this occasion. Other colors sold remarkably well, however, and the demand for sweet peas was brisk. Most of the white carnations came from the Boston markets. They were of good size and the quality was excellent. There were no special window displays as in former years.

NOTES.

Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, was a visitor over Sunday, May 14. He called on most of the trade and left for New York that evening.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society will have as a feature of its meeting this week a lecture on "Cultivation of Dahlias."

Olney Williams had a very heavy cut of carnations, principally Enchantress, for Mothers' day. H. A. T.

New London Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the New London Horticultural Society was held May 11, the feature of the evening being an illustrated lecture on "Brown Tail and Gypsy Moths" by Professor Davis of the Connecticut experiment station. He told in a very interesting way of the work being done by the state in the control of these pests and both the lecturer and his assistant were given a hearty vote of thanks. H. E. L.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The meeting of this society turned out to be a first-class exhibition of spring flowers. John F. Huss, superintendent for Mrs. James J. Goodwin, exhibited six hydrangeas, the plants showing fine growth and blooms of magnificent proportions, one plant bearing 15 blooms, some of which measured 14 inches in diameter, white, pink, and red in color. With the hydrangeas was also a fine collection of polyanthus comprising some 11 varieties. Warren S. Mason, superintendent of the Pope estate at Farmington, exhibited a collection of primroses, consisting of some 23 varieties, the flowers being unusually large and the texture velvety, like that of the pansy. The exhibits as a whole made an excellent showing and came in for a good share of praise.

President G. H. Hollister named A. Righenzi, John C. Willard and Samuel S. Deming, judges; and they awarded the hydrangeas a first-class certificate; also special mention be entered in the minutes. The primrose of Mr. Mason also received a first-class certificate, and in Mr. Huss' remarks he emphasized the beauty of the specimens exhibited. Mr. Huss among other things stated that the winter had been especially hard on all kinds of shrubs. The California privet hedge that surrounds the Goodwin estate, has been killed in many places, which to say the least is very discouraging after years of laborious work in trimming and culture to its present excellent growth. Next meeting will be "tulip night" and all members are invited to bring specimens.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

Worcester County Hort. Society.

The annual May exhibit of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall, Worcester, Thursday, May 11, and was largely attended. By many visitors the exhibition was characterized as the best May show ever held by the society. A display of plants by H. F. A. Lange, and an artistic garden of bay trees and hardy shrubs by Edward W. Breed were especially fine. The awards were:

Cut flowers—H. F. A. Lange, 1st; Allen Jenkins, 2d.

Round basket—H. F. A. Lange, 1st; L. C. Midgley, 2d; Mrs. Percy G. Forbes, 3d; Lucy M. Coulson, 4th.

Hyacinths—E. W. Breed, 1st; Mrs. Herbert L. White, 2d.

Tulips—H. F. A. Lange, 1st; Walter D. Ross, 2d; Mrs. W. E. Sargent, 3d; Mrs. H. L. White, 4th.

Pansies—E. W. Breed, 1st; L. C. Midgley, 2d; L. M. Coulson, 3d; Mrs. Edward Warren, 4th.

Zonale geranium—H. F. A. Lange, 1st; W. D. Ross, 2d; L. M. Coulson, 3d; A. W. Hixon, 4th.

Table decorations—H. F. A. Lange, 1st; L. M. Coulson, 2d; Mrs. L. C. Midgley, 3d; Mrs. P. G. Forbes, 4th.

Plant display—H. F. A. Lange, 1st; E. W. Breed, 2d; Mrs. H. L. White, 3d.

Table of wild flowers—Mrs. M. A. Maynard. R.

SAVANNAH, GA.—A. C. Oelschig & Sons report Easter trade for 1916 about the same in volume as that of a year ago. Stock of all kinds was in ample supply, with the exception of pot geraniums. Cut flower prices averaged better than usual at this season, and there was a good demand for all kinds, especially roses. More sweet peas could have been sold had they been available.

Lawn and Garden Vases

The Lawn Vase.

As an ornament for the lawn, where for one reason or another, a bed of foliage or flowering plants is not thought desirable, such as a too contracted space or the green surface is to be kept intact, the vase will be found very satisfactory and well worth the care necessary to keep it in good condition. The vase is also a feature of much of the ornamental or formal gardens that surround the handsome suburban residences of the larger cities. Here they are largely used to relieve straight lines along terraces, at the landings of steps, tops of gate posts, and in a number of other points where they help out the decorative scheme. For many purposes the large vitrified terra cotta pot or jar is found satisfactory; its shape fits in with balustrades and tops of posts between sections of which it appears a part. Its great durability is also a favorable point as the frost has no effect on it. When filled with evergreens after the summer plants are gone, it continues its usefulness throughout the winter.

When one runs over the catalogues there is seen to be a great variety to choose from, made of all kinds of material. To begin with the home made article. One driving along the country roads will admire a mass of plants and vines growing from the top of the stump of a dead tree, which is found on examination to be planted in a receptacle made of half an oil or whiskey barrel. This fits in well with the whitewashed fence and is the pride of the farmer's wife who cares for it. The rustic box on a stand of stout knotty branches is practical and often used as a porch ornament. Plain or tulip-shaded terra cotta vases made to fit on square bases are a popular form that is useful to adorn home grounds, and with its good foundation, is suitable for the cemetery, where it is often left long times without attention. To secure all kinds of vases, so there is no danger of accident during high winds, is a practical point that should be looked after in every case. The vase can be fastened to the base through the bottom with iron flanges and a stove nut or thumb screw; then stakes driven into the ground, that the base will fit snugly over, will be found sufficient to keep it in place.

The iron vase is both ornamental and practical. They are seen in many shapes and patterns, very often with high ornamental side handles, from which they take the name of urn. Some of these are fitted with self-watering devices, which are more or less useful, depending on the weather. When very wet for any length of time they become waterlogged, but this is offset by their usefulness when in the hot dry times their reservoirs can be drawn on for the so-much-needed moisture.

The various plants that will be found most effective for the vase are quite numerous, but first a word about the soil. For such a lot of plants as are necessary to crowd together in the limited space so as to get the proper effect there should be provided the best of food in good well manured compost, which will, in the middle of summer, be helped out by a liberal top dressing of sheep manure. Many a passe vase has taken on new life after a feast of this kind. All vases should be watered regularly, as neglect in this respect is sure to spell disaster, and it soon ceases to be an ornamental feature. Depending on their size, certain plants are available as centers; dwarf cannas, good sized specimens of Dracena indivisa, Phoenix dactylifera, or Pandanus Veitchii are fine for large vases, while small plants of the same, together with geraniums, crotons, coleus, etc., are practical for the smaller sizes. Much of the same stock that is found useful for the window box, both in plants and vines, will do well in these larger and deeper holders. For shady places, almost all foliage, the various types of the Boston ferns, cro-tons, Pteris argyrea, Asparagus Sprengeri, with ivy and variegated periwinkle for vine, will give a pretty effect that should last all summer. For the sunny situation, geraniums, neurembergias, calendulas, coleus, ageratum, nasturtiums, petunias, sweet alyssum and a number of other plants will all do well. For vines, there is nothing better than the hardy ivy and variegated periwinkle. Scotti ferns and Asparagus Sprengeri are good, if room can be made for them. Color effects are often desirable, such as pink geraniums and blue ageratum or Plumbago Capensis, which blooms the whole summer long. All red geraniums with pandanus center, white petunias, and sweet alyssum, is very effective. A number of equally striking combinations will suggest themselves to fit in with the surroundings in which they are to be placed.

When the chilly fall season takes away the life and vigor of the summer beauty they are then to be replaced with box or evergreens; these can be used in assortment as desired, there being many suitable varieties with much diversity of color in foliage. Nothing makes a better showing or is more symmetrical, than a single specimen of Norway or Colorado spruce, or well shaped boxwood, which even after it loses its color in past midwinter, as they all do, still holds its shape, and is not knocked awry by the wind or weight of snow.

K.

Looking Forward and Looking Backward.

A paper by Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., read at the May meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Your programme committee in asking me to write a paper for you, gave me the privilege of selecting my own subject, and as we old men have a tendency to brag about the good old times, and to prophesy as to the future, the above heading is given to a little rambling talk I shall give you, and having so little time to give the subject I trust you will not be too harsh in your criticisms.

Looking backward to the beginning of my actual experience in the florist business, takes me back to the days of A. D. Rohrer & Bro., when as a fifteen-year-old youngster, I put in some good long days and some pretty hard work with that firm. The one thing that stands out most vividly in my memory of those days was the houses (not the house) of geraniums we grew in 5-inch pots and sold readily at $2.50 per dozen, and let me tell you that they were "some geraniums." Looking forward I can see no reason why the same market is not in existence today, nor why it is not worked up by some good live wire with the ability and cash to do it. The only true road to success in this or any other business is in service, or in other words, in giving your customers real value for their money. Those 5-inch pot geraniums were real value to the buyer at any price up to $5 per dozen. Without actual figures as to the cost of their production, I do know that if 4-inch pot geraniums can be grown and sold for $1 per dozen, 5-inch stock could be produced and sold for $2.50 per dozen. Right in this town, there are people who would pay $5 per dozen for such stock if properly educated to it and be better satisfied than they are today with their

$1 a dozen stock. We all grow and sell entirely too much second-class stock.

Another market for geraniums is for porch decoration, and if it is not worked up by some one with sufficient nerve and a little capital, it is simply one of many neglected opportunities. These geraniums should be grown into 12-inch pot specimen plants on up into regular tub size to be sold at from $2.50 to $10 each. In this city where almost 90 per cent of the homes have front porches, there should be hundreds of porches where a good specimen geranium would be an addition to the regular porch decoration. Right here I want to say, never sell one of these specimen geraniums where you, as an educated florist, know that it will not give satisfactory results and the customer the best of satisfaction; better to lose 20 sales than to have one dissatisfied customer, who can truly attribute their dissatisfaction to you.

Looking backward again to those A. D. Rohrer & Bro. days we sold pansies at 10 cents each or $1 per dozen from cold frames and our customers were more than satisfied. The plants were a mass of flowers and bloom, and sold early in the season with the express understanding that when the hot weather came they should be thrown out and other stock planted into the bed. Today pansies are sold here for from 50 cents per dozen for fair plants to as low as 10 cents a dozen, and even the latter are not mean stock, but they do not give the satisfaction to the customer, as they are hardly started into bloom properly before the hot weather is on them and it is goodbye beauty. Looking backward over this pansy business, I can distinctly recall the work and expense I put in getting up an especially fine strain of pansies, which for a number of years I sold at $4 per 1,000 direct from the seed bed. This looked like a gold mine to some others and the price was cut until it reached as low as $2 per 1,000, with quality lowered accordingly and my sales reduced to an annual amount that did not warrant me in keeping up my selection, and rather than grow a cheap strain, pansies were dropped, and without any undue conceit, the florists of the United States are the losers, as they always are when they purchase cheap stock. There is no fortune awaiting the man who tackles this same problem that I did, but a young man who would undertake the improvement and selection of panies today, would, I believe, find the market ripe before many years for pansies of quality at a reasonably fair price.

After the pansies and bulbous stock were through in the spring, we used to follow up with formal beds of coleus, alternantheras and kindred foliage plants, exercising our ingenuity in creating new combinations for each season. These were varied with beds of Phlox Drummondii, portulacas, petunias and their brothers and sisters, with geranium and salvia beds growing in prominence each year. Almost any city yard was large enough to make some attempt at this style of bedding, and few there were who did not buy their quota of plants each season. Today this style of bedding has in a large measure died out through the persistent efforts of our landscape gardeners and "artistic decorators" (God save the mark) who have trees, shrubbery and hardy stock to sell, but without business instinct enough to know that the ordinary city yard is not their field of endeavor, the sale being as far as they can see. Fortunately for the general good of the florists' business this class of landscape men are few, and the real ones know when and where to sell their stock so that it will be a permanent advertisement for them.

Our retail plantmen should exercise their selling powers to counteract this planting of shrubbery and get the people back to the beauty of a real flower bed or two; in fact, I believe that if one or two of the old-time coleus beds were planted this summer, that for 1917 there would be call for a number of them. One could go on indefinitely enumerating opportunities for improvement along these lines and still not cover the ground. These are given simply to start a train of thought and create some discussion.

In the matter of hardy stock we are in the present, and the future and the advance depends entirely on the men who handle it as to what the future will bring forth. Many city yards are large enough to stand some of this planting, but the most of them are too small and had better be left religiously alone. I can go to any part of this city and pick out yard after yard where the planting of shrubbery is ridiculous and an offense to any one with an artistic sense. A lecturer here recently told us that a bed of red geraniums was a slap in the face to any one with an artistic sense; some of these hardy plantings are enough to give any one with just a love for the beautiful and artistic, paralysis. For the sake of the business do not let the sale be the only object; let us live up to our profession and beautify the world, and there is opportunity without end right here in this hardy plant business.

VASE ON BALCONY OF FIRST NATIONAL BANK BUILDING, CHICAGO.

Window boxes and porch decorations are coming to be more of a feature in this business day after day and should be made the special study of every retail florist, so that he can properly advise his customers and have them get the best satisfaction possible out of their investment. One thing right here, and that is, when you sell your material for boxes and your customer wants something that will not last the season through, educate them to throw it out and replace it once or twice during the summer. This may be a bit hard to do, but a little personal work on your part will give results that will make of them a permanent customer, and as this end of the business is in its infancy, the wagging tongue of a satisfied customer is your best advertisement for future business.

In a long drawn out conclusion, I would say, do not neglect the lessons of the past, but make use of every opportunity offered you to create new outlets for your products and vary these products to meet the new demands coming up daily. I can see no chance of a florist accumulating any great wealth, excepting the few who have it to start with, but there is just as much opportunity in this as there is in any business for a reasonable remuneration for your effort, providing you work along business principles.

Looking backward to the days of A. D. Rohrer & Bro. again, along the business end of the line, I find that we had our coal delivered to the bins at $2.75 per ton and our labor averaged $1 per day. At present we are paying almost three times as much for coal and over twice as much for labor and selling stock for considerable less money. This discrepancy may not be as much as it at first sight seems, but right now, the man who does not seriously set himself to the task of getting a little more money for his stock is not going to win out. The retailer does not feel this quite as keenly as we wholesalers, who have been working on a narrow margin of profit right along.

Personally I know that it is not possible for wholesalers to sell stock at last season's price the coming winter and continue in business, unless the quality of the stock is cheapened considerably, and in this case the buyer will not get full satisfaction for his money. If you expect to grow good quality stock, it will pay you to buy good quality stock from your grower. To the few members of this club who grow for the wholesale trade, I would like to impress you with the fact that if we want Lancaster county to be looked up to as a safe place to send orders, we must not consider how cheap we can grow stock, but how near right we can grow it, and make the price accordingly. Estimate your costs carefully, including everything, upkeep of your place, wear and tear, labor, heat and all incidentals such as tools, manures, etc., and you will be surprised to find out how little you are making on some lines of the stock you are handling. Then figure an increase on the cost of your next winter's coal and everything else you buy; even a 50 per cent increase on the envelopes you use to send out letters. Can you grow stock for the same money as last season?

You retail men should go through the same line of cost estimating, and for goodness sake stop cutting prices. You do no good to yourself and very little harm to the other fellow and a lot of harm to the trade in general. In a town like this, uniform price is an impossibility, as one man can sell a plant at a profit for a nickel that another man would have to sell at seven or eight cents. Rather than sell at a loss, cut some lines out and co-operate with the other fellow. Co-operation means a whole lot more than we as a club seem to realize. Where would Sam Pennock's tug-of-war team been last summer at our picnic, if they had not all pulled together? Let us pull together and upbuild this business of ours, is the earnest wish of the writer.

Iowa State College.

NEW FLORICULTURAL COURSE AT AMES.

The latest development in the department of horticulture of the Iowa State College is the announcement of a four-year course in floriculture leading to the degree of B. S. in Floriculture. For the past few years considerable floricultural work has been given in connection with the general gardening course. This work is now to be supplemented with several new courses, constituting a major course in floriculture and greenhouse management. Strong courses in landscape gardening and market gardening will be given to supplement the floricultural work.

The college has recently built a new range of commercial greenhouses, which brings the total greenhouse space up to about 35,000 square feet of glass. The new course is to be started next fall, but there are already seven junior students enrolled in the work. One of the illustrations shows some of the work of the class in the course in floral arrangements. The other illustration shows a float which was designed and constructed by the same class, as their entry in the recent agricultural carnival held at Ames. The work is at present in charge of J. T. Rosa, and John Reardon, champion chrysanthemum grower of the Missouri valley, is head gardener and florist.

Stevia.

If the stevia cuttings have not been rooted this should be attended to at once. As these plants grow very rapidly they are generally the last to be propagated, but the rooting of any stock in June is always attempted with more or less chance of failure unless under the most favorable conditions. As soon as rooted they should be potted in 3-inch pots and placed in a cold frame, the pots plunged in the soil and shifted into large sizes as required. Keep the plants pinched back until the middle or last of July, when they should be potted in their blooming pots and placed in quarters safe from high winds and early frosts. The dwarf stevias may be grown in the field, being kept pinched back during the summer and potted the last of August or first of September.

PLANT NOTES.

Peonies.

The work on these plants is not finished by any means when the blooms are cut, for they must be taken care of to insure a good crop for another year. Where the plants are grown in rows the constant traveling has packed the soil down hard and the ground should be given a good cultivation in order to lighten it up. The weeds should be kept down all summer and not allowed to rob the soil of its richness. If the plants were severely cut in harvesting the bloom, so that there is not much foliage left on the plant, it is well to spread a mulch of strawy manure on the surface. This is often the case with the officinalis varieties, which do not make the heavy growth of the later varieties, and as it is natural for the roots of the peonies to have the shade of the heavy foliage of the plants during the summer, the cutting of the stems and foliage of these varieties robs the roots of this, and a mulch that will protect the ground from the hot summer sun is very beneficial and will also reduce the labor of weeding. Any old blooms left on the plant should be cut and thrown away. Plants that have become broken down by high winds or heavy rains should be tied up in shape.

Small Ferns.

The fern spores that were sown in late winter should now be in condition to transplant into flats. It will be difficult to separate the plants yet into individual specimens, but little clumps can be lifted with a toothpick and planted in flats about an inch apart. The flats or boxes should not be deep; about an inch and a half of soil is sufficient. The soil should be composed of two parts live loam and fronds. If the grower has not grown his own ferns, it is a good time now to place an order for them with the fern specialists, for they can be purchased at very low prices and they are very easily grown on, and where there are many fern dishes to be filled in the fall, the difference in cost of the young plants lifted from the flats in midsummer and those purchased out of small pots in the fall is considerable; plants that will cost three and four dollars a hundred at that time can now be obtained for one-third of that amount, and a thousand or more of this small stock does not take up much space and will be disposed of before the bench room is needed in winter.

Solanums.

These little Christmas plants should not be allowed to stand around in the hot greenhouses badly pot bound and drying up every day, for they will grow hard and it cannot be expected to obtain a good plant under these conditions. They will stand lots of abuse and do fairly well, and that is the reason, probably, that they are so often neglected during the busy days. But it is much better to plant them out in the field than to carry them along in this condition. They can be easily handled in this manner, lifting them early in the fall. They will need to be kept pinched back into shape—any strong leading shoots should be cut back when they are soft. They can be planted fairly close together and will need frequent cultivation. If there is no suitable outside location where they can be planted out they can be plunged in a frame and potted up as it becomes necessary, but outside treatment of some kind is far preferable to the greenhouse, which is too warm, unless shaded, and they make better growth and bloom more freely in the bright sunlight.

one part leaf mold, with a generous sprinkling of sand, and sifted through a fine sieve. The flats should be placed in a moist house that is well shaded, and the walks kept well wet down all through the hot weather. If a nice warm moist temperature is maintained, the plants themselves will not require much watering, only light sprinklings, and they will very rapidly root into the new soil and send forth their Primulas.

The young primulas that were sown early should now be in 3-inch pots and be given as cool and airy a location as possible. To get the best growth on these plants, they should never be subjected to great heat, for the species are naturally a cool growing plant on the edges of the woodland in their native state. Outside in a frame with a lath covering is the best place that they can be grown, the pots sunk in the soil even to the rim. In potting these plants they should be placed in the soil deep enough for them to stand firmly; they will not stand deep potting, but many growers do not pot them deep enough, and they frequently get turned over sideways during the watering. They must be watered carefully and preferably with a can with a fine rose. The later sowings will have to be carried on in the houses until they are large enough to be placed outside. They will have to be shaded, but do not shade them heavily enough to cause them to get drawn.

Larkspur.

Larkspur or "poison weed" is treated of in a recent bulletin of the department of agriculture, in which it is pointed out that many losses are suffered each year by western ranchmen by reason of the stock eating the weed. There are two groups of these larkspurs on the ranges, the tall and the low varieties. The low larkspurs prefer the hills and rather dry ground, while the tall kinds grow in the gulches and canyons. Among the tall species are Delphinium barbeyi and D. cucullatum. The tall larkspur is easily distinguished after it blossoms, but in the early stages is often confused with the geranium and aconite. Of the low larkspurs D. Nelsoni is a type. It grows in considerable abundance in Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah. The root is short and tuberous and the plant never exceeds a foot in height. The blossoms are a violet blue. They appear, arranged in a loose raceme, in May.

Cinerarias.

The sowing of cinerarias is better done in June than later. Many postpone this until July, but during the extremely hot days of that month it is often difficult to obtain good germination, and the seed pans or boxes will have to be watched carefully or they will become dry and the young seedlings burn off. The soil should be well shaded until the young seedlings show themselves, when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as the plants have one or two well defined leaves, they should be potted in small pots and given a nice airy position near the glass, which should be shaded, but care should be taken that the young stock does not get drawn. Always bear in mind that the one thing in growing cinerarias to be on the watch for is the aphid. These insects quickly infest these plants and rapidly suck the life out of them. Constant fumigation will keep them in check, but if not attended to regularly it will be time and money thrown away to attempt their culture. Cineraria hybrida is the variety most grown, and these are obtainable in some elegant strains with large high-colored flowers. The Cineraria stellata is a much larger and more rapid growing plant which is very showy, but is not so well adapted for house culture when in flower.

Winter Flowering Geraniums.

With all growers having a greenhouse and doing a retail business there is in the fall a good demand for pot geraniums for house culture. Plants lifted from the open ground and potted in the fall are not very satisfactory, for the plants recover from the later transplanting slowly and go out of bloom, and often do not flower again until spring. It is better to grow plants for this purpose in pots through the summer and these with good culture will bloom all winter long if in a sunny position. Cuttings taken at this time will make nice stock for this purpose, or small plants left over after the spring sales can be used. The plants should be potted firmly so that they will make a short, stocky growth, and kept well pinched back throughout the summer, that as many branches may be procured as is possible. All buds should be picked off as soon as formed, allowing no blooms until the plants are firmly established in blooming pots, in which they should be planted the last of August. A 6-inch pot makes the best size for house culture and the plant can be easily grown so that it will fill this size nicely. A frame outside is the most convenient and best place for growing them through the summer months.

Ardiasias

One of the most popular berried plants for Christmas is the ardisia, but it is not grown as generally as it should be, the production being left to a few plant growers, for it is of very easy culture, the only drawback being that it is of very slow growth. The seeds of the old plants are now thoroughly ripened and should be sown at this time. They germinate slowly and should be sown about an inch apart, in rows the same distance apart, and they can then be left in the seedbox until early summer, and potted in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, and grown in a warm, lightly shaded location. They should be potted in good fibrous loam and kept in a moist close house that all the growth possible may be obtained at this time, for the plant naturally checks in winter. In early spring these young plants will flower and produce a crop of berries for the next winter. The plants that have been grown for three years or more have generally passed the ornamental stage, for they lose their leaves and have a "leggy" appearance. When they reach this stage the tops can be rooted and a fine plant obtained. This can best be done at this time of the year by cutting into the stem and wrapping the cut with wet moss firmly tied around. Keep the plants in a warm, close atmosphere and the moss continually damp, and in four or five weeks new roots will grow in the moss, when the top can be cut off and potted, still keeping the plant in the same temperature until new growths start. This operation will not interfere in any way with the plants blooming, for they frequently set an abundance of buds while the top is making new roots. The brown scale is the greatest enemy of ardisias even in the young stage and they must be removed at once when found, for they sap the strength of the plant. The older plants should be frequently sponged with strong nicotine solution.

DALLAS, TEX.—The Rische Floral Co., in the Elm street arcade, has taken another booth in the same building, doubling the space formerly occupied.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Bench Stock For Cut Blooms.

The plants intended to produce exhibition or high grade commercial blooms should now be planted into their permanent quarters on the benches. The grower who is able to plant his exhibition stock by May 15, has a big advantage over the man planting a month later, and the same rule applies to the early varieties. A week or two gained in getting these started in the benches goes a long way toward solving the problem of being able to have large blooms ahead of the general supply, a time when the demand and prices are both good.

SOIL.

Good soil is essential for producing high grade chrysanthemums, especially so with early planted stock, which have a long season of growth and attain a strong, vigorous habit, requiring lots of strength for the best development of their blooms. While a good soil is necessary, it is not advisable that it should be heavily composted with rich manures at the start, but as the season advances and the plants gain strength and growth, the manures can be added from time to time. A stiff clay loam is better suited to the growth of chrysanthemums than a light, sandy soil—in a stiff soil the growth is more short and sturdy, but when the soil is too light and spongy, the plants make a long-jointed, spindly growth. Most of the growers who are noted for the high quality of the chrysanthemum blooms they turn out, prepare their soil or compost in the fall of the season before they intend to use it. This preparation is done by taking off the fresh sod from a piece of pasture or specially prepared land, then adding well rotted manure in proportion of one of manure to three of the sod, stacking it in a pile to stand over winter, where it remains until turned over in the spring and made ready for planting. The grower who has this soil pile to draw from is fortunate and can go ahead at any time with the work of filling the benches. The grower who has no prepared compost pile to depend on, but has to draw his planting soil direct from the field, should now plough up enough of the sod for his planting requirements before the grass gets too much of a start, then as the benches are made ready, the manure can be added to the soil in the same proportion as advised for the compost pile and hauled in.

FILLING THE BENCHES.

Some of the varieties planted in May will grow to the height of seven feet or more, so that it is very important when mapping out the planting, to be sure the plants will have plenty of head room for the proper development of their blooms; 10 feet from the top of the bench to the glass is not any too much. Five inches of soil, firmed down, should be provided at the start, so that when the benches are six inches deep, it will allow for mulching during the season as the plants need it. Before bringing in the soil, we spread a thin layer of well rotted manure over the bottom of the benches; this prevents the fine soil from running through the cracks as well as being good for the plants to work in later on. After the soil is brought in, bone-meal and limestone screenings are scattered over the surface, about 50 pounds of each to a bench 5x100 feet. This is worked into the soil, after which the beds are well firmed down and leveled off. They are then ready for planting.

DISTANCE APART TO PLANT.

This is one of the important parts in the culture of early planted stock, and room must be given the plants for their proper development; it is useless to plant early and crowd the plants. After a few weeks the foliage growth will be very heavy, and if there is not good air space between the plants, they are going to suffer; 5x7 and 6x8 inches apart will do for stock planted after June 15, but earlier planted stock should be allowed 7x9 or 8x10 inches apart, according to the variety, the location of the benches and the style of house in which they are being grown. The center benches of the high and wide modern houses allow for closer planting than the side benches, or in houses where there is not such a free circulation of air.

PLANTING AND WATERING IN.

A grower must know the varieties under his care to get the most out of a bench of plants; he will then plant the dwarf varieties separate from the tall growers. When a dwarf grower is planted between two tall varieties it is lost before the season is very far advanced. Firm planting is essential and extra care should be exercised in the watering of the plants directly after planting; water each plant in after a bench is finished. This will carry them for a few days. When root action will have commenced again, light syringings can be given each day to prevent wilting, but it is a mistake to flood the beds directly after planting before the plants have had a chance to get a root hold.

SUPPORTING THE PLANTS.

This work commences right away after planting, and whether the supporting is done by stakes, wires, or strings, it should be attended to as quickly as the plants are in need of it from the time of planting.

GROWING EXHIBITION STOCK IN POTS.

This method of culture is generally followed out by the leading chrysanthemum exhibitors of the country, and owing to the grower being able to control the root action, as well as the ripening of the wood better than when the plants are bench grown, the method is in favor with most chrysanthemum experts. To be successful, the plants should now be well established stock in 4, 5 or 6-inch pots, ready for the final shift into 8, 9 or 10-inch pots, according to the limit to which one is willing to go. The important considerations connected with the final potting are a rich compost, provide for a good drainage and firm potting. It is best not to fill the pots too full of soil at time of potting, but make allowance for giving the plants a mulch as they advance in growth. The one very important point to consider at all times in this method of culture is, not to over-water, but give the roots a chance to be working all the time by keeping the soil sweet. Staking is also very important; attend to it as needed so that the plants can be properly supported. Make a special effort to rid the plants of insects by spraying or fumigating while the weather is still cool; it will save lots of worry and trouble later on.

CARE OF STOCK FOR LATE PLANTING.

The plants in pots for June or later planting should receive the attention they need; if they show signs of becoming hard before being able to plant, then they ought to be shifted into a larger pot. With our cemetery work to attend to for Memorial day, we have to shift our cut bloom chrysanthemum stock into 4-inch pots to carry them safely over to the middle of June for planting; it means extra labor, but when every inch of bench room is occupied with other plants there is nothing else that can be done.

POMPONS.

According to the remarks of several growers, these are going to be planted in larger quantities than ever this season. They can still be propagated and make profitable plants. Pot up as soon as rooted, and after becoming established, pinch the tops out to make them break out with ample shoots or sprays. Those now in pots should also be topped and cared for to prevent them becoming hard. Any time during June is the best time for planting the pompons into their permanent quarters.

SINGLES.

The method best to follow for the pompons, also applies to the single varieties, but there is one important consideration that should be borne in mind; be sure and grow varieties that are durable enough to stand the necessary handling.

Height of Chrysanthemums.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please give me the height of the following chrysanthemums and which are early and late. I want to plant two benches with them and wish to begin with the early ones at one end and follow with the others. My varieties are given in the list herewith and it would be sufficient for my purpose if you would give the height and season after the names.

Cleveland's Early Autumn Show.

What is announced to be eight shows included in one, one of the most important divisions of which will be a flower show, will be held in Cleveland, O., September 2-9, under the name of the Industrial exposition and fair. The co-operation of the Cleveland Florists' Club, the Ohio Horticultural Society, the Cleveland Garden Club and other kindred organizations has been invited and committees representing these societies will meet in the near future to arrange the details for the premium list which will be published early in June.

H. P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., well-known florists of Cleveland, is a director and member of the executive committee of the coming event, and M. A. Vinson, manager of the Cleveland Flower show last November, will have active charge and general direction of the entire show. Copies of the premium list may be secured by addressing M. A. Vinson, 2515 Franklin avenue, care of Cleveland Chamber of Industry, Cleveland, O.

Carrying Plants Through Pruning Time.

The plants that are to be carried through until pruning time in mid-summer will have to be fed right along and cared for the same as during the winter months, in order to have them produce good salable blooms up to the first of July or later. Plants that are mulched along about February or March will require another liberal application at this time, alternating with liquid manure after the first few waterings. Usually about May 1 there is quite a free germination of weed and other seeds in the old mulch, and before applying another supply all of the beds should be carefully weeded. It will be advisable to have the one that does the watering follow up behind the mulch as fast as it is applied, for at this season the manure will dry out rapidly, and if allowed to crust over the water will only partially dissolve it. Care should also be taken to have the mulch broken up as finely as possible.

Keep up the disbudding and pinching the same as usual, and now that firing is about over in many sections, one should have on hand a supply of grape dust, and a good sulphur gun, and dust the plants over lightly at least once a week, even should there be no signs of mildew. If this plan is followed, very seldom will one be bothered with mildew, if the airing is done carefully. It is now time to keep right after the composting, and if the soil was composted last fall or through the winter it can be now turned and broken up finely in time for the indoor planting. Perhaps one has a house of American Beauties to plant, or move, and it is always a good plan to get this variety in as early as possible, and also to have a good stiff soil for them. They usually do better planted in about six inches of soil on raised benches anywhere from six inches from the ground to a bench 18 inches high. As the American Beauty is very susceptible to black spot, and this is often brought on through not having as good control of the watering when grown in the solid borders, the raised benches offer the best solution to the difficulty, we believe. Care should be taken to have the young stock kept moving, and it should be allowed considerable room to keep it clean and the wood in a normal condition. Keep the young rose stock shifted right along, and stake all of the grafted plants after shifting from the 2¼ or 2½-inch pots, otherwise a great many will become broken at the union by syringing them. We might state further, that Sunburst is another variety that seems to like the raised benches for the same reason given for American Beauty; also we believe one can cut flowers with better color on Sunbursts when grown this way. As Sunburst is also grown principally on their own roots, they will require a heavy clay soil and should be planted in about five inches of soil after it is firmly packed on the tables. Russell will soon stand frequent syringing, but do it early and keep the walks as dry as possible.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. C. E. Buckbee.

Mrs. Catherine E. Buckbee, mother of H. W. and John T. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., died at her home in that city May 20. Mrs. Buckbee was the descendant of sturdy colonial ancestors. Her maiden name was Catherine Elizabeth Allington, and she was born March 27, 1836, at Van Ettenville, Chemung county, N. Y. She was the daughter of Jacob and Catherine Westbrook Allington, who were of Scotch extraction. The mother of Jacob Allington was Elizabeth Swarthwood, whose ancestor, Peter Swarthwood, was one of four original Swarthwoods who emigrated from Holland long before the American revolution, in which war Peter's grandson, Jacob Swarthwood, became a general.

Mrs. Buckbee's father was a Methodist preacher and lumberman. She was one of eight children. Her mother passed away when she was seven years old and her father when she was 12. She was educated in Lima, N. Y., after which she taught school for several years. With an older brother and sister she went to Rockford in 1855, settling on Kishwaukee street in the same block on which the present Buckbee homestead is located. On February 11, 1860, she married Theodore E. Buckbee, driving to Beloit, where the ceremony was performed.

In addition to her two sons, two grand-daughters, Frances and Mary Buckbee, survive. Her husband, who was a prominent citizen of Rockford, died June 6, 1904.

John Kral.

John Kral, for a number of years head salesman for Moore, Hentz & Nash, in the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co., died at his home in Portchester, N. Y., on the morning of May 21. He had been ill about two weeks with pneumonia. In the death of John Kral, the writer has a feeling of personal bereavement, because we were close friends. He was, physically, a man of small stature, but he had a large heart and brain, and we shall honor his memory. He had been with the New York Cut Flower Co. for over 20 years, and every man connected with that company, in all those years, testifies to his fine character. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, and was buried on May 24 with Masonic honors. He was 42 years old, and is survived by a widow and one child.

American Rose Society at Washington.

The inspection of the National Rose Garden and trial grounds at Washington by the American Rose Society May 23 was very interesting. There were in attendance some 25 members from Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana and the city of Washington. Assembling at 9:30 a. m., at Gude Bros. Co.'s store on F street, autos bridged the distance to the gardens which, in spite of a gentle drizzle, afforded the visitors a useful hour of inspection. Admiral Ward, E. G. Hill and Robert Pyle formed the committee who judged the newer varieties that had passed their first year in the garden. The new rose scale of points recently adopted by the society was tried for the first time and appeared to work very well. The backward season interfered seriously with the inspection as but few of the various classes were in flower. In another week or 10 days the roses will be at their best.

At 11:30 the party paid a visit to Twin Oaks, the handsome grounds of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Bell, where, after an inspection of the beautiful rose arbors, they enjoyed refreshments served by Mrs. Alexander. Mrs. Bell being confined to her room through illness. At a beautifully decorated table, with Radiance roses as a feature, a substantial luncheon was followed by a feast of rose lore, past, present and future. President S. S. Pennock introduced the speakers. Telegrams of felicitation were sent to Secretary Benjamin Hammond and Theodore Wirth, who were unable to be present. Robert Pyle, Wm. F. Gude, J. Horace McFarland, Prof. Mulford, Admiral Ward, Prof. Carey, E. G. Hill and George W. Hess all made addresses, which were full of admiration of the work being done in the Washington and other gardens and predicted a great future for the society.

FALL EXHIBITION PROPOSED.

At the recent annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, held at Moline, it was decided to hold a fall meeting and, if possible, a small show in connection with it at Bloomington, Ill. I have since been informed by A. Washburn & Sons of that place that they would contribute $250 towards premiums for a fall show to be held there. I consider this very liberal on their part, and took it upon myself to write the members asking for a small contribution towards raising a fund to the extent of at least that same amount. It is thought a $500 premium list will give us a very creditable show for a beginner. Won't you please pledge us something, just say on a postal card what you will agree to donate, cash from $5 to $10, or a definite number of roses, carnations or chrysanthemum blooms by November 1, 1916.

New York Summer Show.

Preparations have been completed for the first summer show of the International Garden Club, to be held June 1-4, on its grounds, Pelham Manor, Pelham Bay park, New York City. Two large tents and smaller tents will be erected and a sunken garden effect arranged in the tents for the display of the groups of plants, etc. The schedules are now ready with entry blanks and same can be had from the secretary-manager of the show, Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J. The grounds can be easily reached by automobile, is on the main Boston road, from New York. It is also on the Harlem division of the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R., and freight and express can be sent to City Island station, which is nearest the grounds. People coming from the east can change at New Rochelle or can take the Third avenue elevated trains to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, where they can get the train to City Island station.

A generous prize list of nearly $5,000 is being offered, about equally divided between the trade and private estates, and additional premiums will be given to meritorious exhibits. Governor Whitman opened the grounds last year for the club and it is expected that Mayor Mitchel will be on hand to open the flower show. For further information, address Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J. H. W. B.

Windler For Sunday Closing.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co., St. Louis, Mo., makes the announcement that its establishment will be closed on Sundays. Frank Windler, head of the concern, is standing on the courage of his convictions that Sunday is the one day in the week of seven to refuse to do business and the closing of the Windler Co.'s store on that day is taking the initiative in that city in a reform of no small measure.

DARK WEATHER AND SUPPLY IS SHORT.

The weather during the past week has been very dark and wet and inasmuch as everything was cut so short for the Mothers' day demand, stock has been in limited supply in consequence. On the Monday following Mothers' day, white carnations dropped from eight cents to four cents, but there were few to be had. Peonies are not meeting with a very good demand, as the keeping qualities seem poor, evidently due to some fault in the packing. Roses are still holding their own at prices varying from three to 12 cents. Outdoor stock has not made a good showing owing to the cool weather. Business has been good in all lines of the trade since Mothers' day—"since Easter" used to be the by-word, but this has been changed now to "since Mothers' day."

NOTES.

Minnesota State Florists' Association held its regular meeting at the store of Holm & Olson, St. Paul, May 17. A committee was appointed to arrange for a big meeting at which will be shown stereopticon views of the Minneapolis park system and a lecture on same by Theo. Wirth, superintendent of parks of this city. Addresses by other prominent speakers on different subjects are being arranged for at this meeting which will take place in June.

Wm. Vasatka, for the past three years foreman at the L. S. Donaldson Co.'s greenhouses, has taken the position as florist at the Minnesota state fair grounds. The "boys" all wish Will the best of success, and if his subordinates in his new position are like the old, they will have one of the best florists and foremen who will look out for their interests and advancement at all times.

Ralph Latham had a delegation from the unions of this city call on him to know the reasons for the high prices on Mothers' day, but they wanted something more definite than "supply and demand." They were not able to understand that his selling percentage was just the same whether he paid four cents or 15 cents, as it cost him just so much to do business.

One of the growers who wanted to force the price of white carnations up to 12 cents for Mothers' day, fell down on the job when other growers and the wholesalers refused to get in line with him. Most of the trade thought the eight-cent price satisfactory, especially considering the fact that if it were not for Mothers' day they would be glad to consider three cents.

Wm. Topel, who has been assistant to Wm. Desmond at Donaldson's, has taken the position as store manager and will also be in charge at the greenhouses. It has been erroneously reported that the range was to be torn down, but such is not the case according to Mr. Topel.

W. D. Desmond returned from Sioux Falls, S. D., with John G. Coleman, who has purchased the Sioux Falls Greenhouses and the retail store in connection with the business. He is going to enlarge same and make the establishment first-class in every way.

The Eldridge Floral Co. looks forward to having one of the prettiest stores in this city after the new fixtures and ice box, which are being furnished by Buchbinder Bros., Chicago, and which were built especially for this store, are installed.

Oscar Amundson has planted a block of sweet peas for his store trade this summer. He has 21 rows, each 140 feet long, and all the grandiflora types are represented. They seem to stand up better here than the Spencers.

John Rovick of the base ball team is a very enthusiastic captain and has them practising every evening. Manager Art Rice is booked for some very hard games a little later in the season.

Lakewood cemetery greenhouses have nearly all of the planting of the cemetery to themselves this year and the force is very busy. Outsiders can only plant what is used in the iron vases.

Julius Rieck, one of our prominent local florists, has filed his petition to be put on the ballot for mayor. A florist ought to make a good mayor. Phil Breitmeyer did in Detroit.

Cal Rice is going to treat the "boys" to a fish dinner upon his return from the lakes—and he is always there with the "speckled beauties" when it comes to fishing.

Henry Will has purchased a new Cadillac touring car, with which he expects to visit the lakes and bring back some fish this summer.

H. B. Whitted lost a valuable automobile May 20, when the machine exploded after entering the garage. No one was injured.

Minneapolis Floral Co. is hustling with outside planting and getting small plants ready for shipment.

Max Kaiser of Merriam Park is sending in some very fine My Maryland roses on three-foot stems.

Hans Rosacker is a great admirer of Milady roses and thinks they cannot be beat.

O. H. Kaiser is proud of his Hoosier Beauties and will plant more next season. T. C. R.

Columbus, O.

Several local florists ran advertisements in a special "clean-up" edition of one of the Columbus newspapers. Clean-up week, May 1-6, was ushered in the previous Saturday by a monster municipal parade, in which the mayor marched, dressed in a suit of overalls and carrying a broom.

Harry Holbrook, architect, has awarded to the J. C. Moninger Company, Chicago, a contract for building the new S. S. Myers greenhouse plant at Bexley, a suburb of this city. The plant is to consist of three houses, 30x125 feet each, a boiler house and a workshop.

William Pitkin, Jr., Rochester, N. Y., has prepared extensive landscaping plans for "Beechwood," a large new addition north of Columbus, to be put on the market by the Dominion Land Company. Each lot will contain at least one of the virgin forest trees. J.

Los Angeles.

TRADE IN GENERAL SATISFACTORY.

Reports from dealers regarding the trade of Mothers' day, do not agree. While some state a good business was done in that line, others could see no appreciable difference in business that could be regarded as especially for Mothers' day. One salesman who came here direct from a Philadelphia florist says the sales for the special purpose of commemorating Mothers' day in Los Angeles cannot be compared with the sales in the former city. However, as it was, the supply of good white carnations was at a premium, and by Sunday they were out of sight. Next to carnations, roses had the best sale. Roses are reported scarce by some dealers, while others seem to have a good variety, unless it be in American Beauties. As the season advances, other flowers are coming in, so that in variety the dealers are now about at the height of the season. Ordinary business is still good in all lines. Some fancy American Beauty roses are being received from San Francisco.

NOTES.

Wright's Flower Shop, Inc., were showing some beautiful gloxinias. Another flower shown (while not new it is not common) is the pink flowering gypsophila. The flowers were extra large. Mr. Garland, of this establishment, was telling a fish story the other day. It did not relate to the size or number of trout caught, but to an empty gasoline tank, a stalled car and all that usually goes with such an exploit.

At Darling's Flower Shop, there appeared to be no special business that could be traced to Mothers' day, and no special effort was made to boost that particular trade, though all varieties of flowers sold well at that time. Darling's had the choicest American Beauties seen and they were also showing some fancy northern grown peonies.

The Redondo Floral Co. reports the busiest week since Easter. They report a scarcity of good roses. A special window decoration for Mothers' day attracted many who otherwise might have forgotten mother.

O. C. Saakes did a fine business for Mothers' day. He reported that white carnations of the indoor type hadn't been so scarce in years. Roses were in good demand. Daily sales fair.

Howard & Smith had only a fair trade Mothers' day, but have been having an unusually brisk business in funeral work the past week or two.

Broadway Florists report an immense business Saturday and Sunday in white and pink carnations. They had a good display of asters this week.

S. Murata & Co. report shipping business the biggest ever preceding Mothers' day, especially in carnations.

J. W. Wolters sold large quantities of roses and white and pink carnations for Mothers' day, and reports a good business then and now. G. H. H.

PLENTIFUL SUPPLY AND GOOD SALES.

Stock was plentiful and of good quality during the past week and some of it was disposed of at fancy prices. Mrs. Charles Russell, Sunburst and Ophelia took the lead in roses and the Killarneys, both white and pink, showed improvement over the previous week. Sweet peas are slowing up, but carnations are coming better. Peonies are of good quality and more plentiful and snapdragons are better than usual at this season. Pot plants are good sellers and made up baskets are very popular. Stock for Memorial day from all indications will be plentiful.

NOTES.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to the families and relatives of Patrick Larkin and Mrs. Charles Biederman, both of whom passed away last week. Patrick Larkin's death was the result of a fall from a motor car last fall. Mrs. Biederman, who had been a resident of this city for more than 50 years, died from a nervous affection at the age of 70 years.

The Hotel Muehlebach was the scene of the first amateur flower show ever held in this city, May 20. The ballroom was filled with a surprisingly fine exhibition, rich in both variety and quality. The exhibition was attended by over six hundred visitors who paid admission, and so successful was the show that it will become an annual event.

H. Kusik & Co. are handling quality stock in roses, carnations and peonies and clean up each day. They will have the largest supply in their history for Memorial day.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports trade good in all departments.

The local trade were favored with two Mothers' days last week. In addition to the national day of observance, Billy Sunday requested all who attended his tabernacle on Friday to wear a carnation. His subjects for the day were "Motherhood" and "Repentance."

Ed. Humfeld reports record-breaking business. Mothers' day demand was heavy and his planting of the grounds at Electric park made a busy week.

Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., in addition to a good supply of stock in general, will be well supplied with peonies for Memorial day.

Arthur Newell had the decorations for two large out-of-town weddings last week. He looks for a wonderful Memorial day business.

T. J. Noll & Co. report good business with a very heavy shipping trade. Preparations are complete for a big Memorial day business.

MANY MEMORIAL DAY ORDERS BOOKED.

Stock of all kinds with one or two exceptions is very plentiful and the retailer now has a splendid variety to select from at reasonable prices. Lily of the valley is scarce and cleans up at an early hour each day at high figures. Orchids are in better supply, but still command high prices and there is just about enough to fill all the orders that are booked. Gardenias are in fair supply and the first Cape Jessamines of the season made their appearance this week. Roses of all kinds are seen in large quantities at all of the stores and are to be had in large lots at very reasonable prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell are being received in large quantities but are in good demand and clean up fairly well every day at prices that could be much better. The receipts of American Beauty roses are fairly large and there are more than enough to go around. Some especially fine Sunburst, Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. George Shawyer, Milady, Rhea Reid, and Richmond are seen and the same holds good for Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and White Killarney. Carnations are in good supply, but move nicely each day at fair prices, especially in the better grades. Sweet peas are plentiful and in good demand. Peonies are seen in large quantities and are selling well. Cut lilac is plentiful and in brisk demand. Some especially fine Mrs. Francis King, America and Augusta gladioli are being offered, but are not having much of a call. Miniature gladioli are moving freely. Snapdragons, mignonette, Double White narcissi, lupines, tulips, daffodils, jonquils, daisies, corn flowers, pansies, forget-me-nots, violets, Spanish irises, candytuft, lilies, callas, swainsonas, gypsophilas, calendulas, trailing arbutus and other miscellaneous stock is to be had and comes in handy for basket work, window displays and funeral work. Trade the past week as far as the city is concerned, was very quiet and the call was principally for funeral work which was about all that the retail florists especially in the loop report any kind of a demand for. The expressmen's strike has affected the shipping trade more than anyone had any idea it would and many complaints have been heard from all sides on non-delivery of packages, poor condition of stock on account of delayed shipments, etc., but shipments are going out in more regular style now than the earlier part of last week when everything was topsy-turvey and nobody knew just where they were at. It was almost impossible to get incoming express from the depots in anywhere decent time, consequently stock suffered considerably on account of the delay and was scarce at times, especially green goods and more particularly southern asparagus, which does not arrive in any too good a condition on schedule time. Considering the strike, the florists have been more fortunate than dealers in other lines and conditions might have been a whole lot worse. Everyone is hoping for an early settlement of the strike, for it is causing a lot of extra work and much inconvenience and the out-of-town customers should have a little patience for everyone of the dealers is giving the best possible service he can under the existing conditions. From present indications it appears as if there will not be any too much stock for Memorial day and everyone is advised to place their orders well in advance so as to insure their supply. The buyers would greatly oblige their dealers by ordering at as early an hour as possible during the strike so that all trains can be made and the shipments can go out on time.

NOTES.

The expressmen's strike is still on, but it appears as if it will soon be over. The florists are having practically normal service, and the out-of-town buyers can safely send their orders to this market with the assurance that they will be taken care of as well as before the strike. The trade can thank Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., for the splendid service that has been organized, and which is the best there is in the city today. Both outgoing and incoming shipments are being taken care of promptly, and the members of the trade are fully aware of what Mr. Lautenschlager has done for them as manager of the committee appointed to look after the affairs in regard to this service.

Miss V. Diamesis, 4448 Racine avenue, and John Canger, of Mangel & Co., the Palmer House Florist, will be married some time next month. Mr. Canger has a host of friends in the trade here who are all pleased to hear that he is going to join the ranks of Daniel Branch, 313 East Fifty-first street, is minus a five-passenger Ford, which some one stole from him Monday morning, May 22, when he left it standing for a few minutes at the corner of State and Adams streets while he was making a call. He promptly notified the police of his loss but so far the machine has not been located.

Joseph Kohout, who operates a range of 35,000 feet of glass at Libertyville, is also manager of the Meredith greenhouses, consisting of about 45,000 feet of glass, which is being planted principally to roses this year. The two places are only about two miles apart, so Mr. Kohout is able to superintend both of them very nicely.

The Association of Commerce wants each citizen to lend a hand in making the city more beautiful with window boxes. The campaign slogan is: "One mile of flower boxes; a good business as well as a good civic investment."

The Raedlein Basket Co. delivered most of its out-of-town orders by parcel post and freight during the expressmen's strike last week and succeeded in getting only a few shipments through by express.

Joseph Ziska & Sons have a large stock of tissue paper on hand and are not worrying about any advance in prices on this item. Abie Kabibble was a visitor at their store this week.

Henry Weinberg has been bringing in the Batavia Greenhouse Co.'s stock to O. Johnson in his automobile since the strike started, and covers the distance of 40 miles in about two and one-half hours.

Dominick E. Freres is supplying his customers as well as many of the wholesalers with a fancy grade of Asparagus Sprenger, which he is receiving in quantity every day.

Erne & Klingel are handling a fine grade of peonies in all the seasonable varieties and have a good supply to offer for Memorial day.

Chas. W. McKellar recovered sufficiently from his recent illness to visit his store Saturday, May 20, for a few hours.

Meyer & Dramm of Elmhurst have placed an order with Kroeschell Bros. Co. for a three-ton ice machine.

M. C. Gunterberg is handling a good supply of geraniums in addition to her regular line of cut flowers.

August Dresel, with Graff & Dresel, 2135 Clybourn avenue, is serving on the jury this week.

Joseph Weis, Jr., 3445 Southport avenue, has just purchased a five-passenger Ford.

Joe Bieber and wife leave next week to spend the summer at Point Place, O.

CUT FLOWERS for MEMORIAL DAY

Poehlmann Bros. Co. filled all their shipping orders on good time since the strike started, but under great inconvenience, and so far there have been practically no complaints whatever to speak of. August Poehlmann has been giving the store force a lift during the rush, and can make the younger generation step pretty lively when it comes to loading up empties on their big trucks. T. E. Waters reports a good demand for supplies for Memorial day, especially made-up magnolia wreaths, etc.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are looking forward toward a banner Memorial day trade, for orders were never so plentiful before so early in the week, and they never had such a good supply of stock to offer as they have this year. Peonies are arriving in large quantities at this house, and they will be right in the midst of a heavy crop for the big day.

W. J. O'Carroll, of the University of Chicago Botanic Garden, recently scored 97 for experience and efficiency, special subjects 95, in civil service examination for head gardener, St. Paul, Minn., park department. Although first on the list Mr. O'Carroll has decided not to take the vacancy.

John G. Witt & Son will add two houses, 20x126 feet, to their range this season, and already have the material on the ground ready to start work. They have had wonderful success since they started in business about a year ago, during which time they have built up a nice trade.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are all ready for the Memorial day trade with a complete line of cut flowers and supplies, and are particularly strong on made-up magnolia wreaths, which are worth every cent they are asking for them.

WE are prepared to take care of your orders any time for Peonies, Roses, Carnations, Cape Jasmine, Gladioli, Baby Gladioli, Lilies, Callas, Snapdragons, Sweet Peas, Mignonette, Greens, Etc. You will get satisfaction every time if you place your orders with

WHOLESALE FLORISTS

30 East Randolph Street,

CHICAGO, ILL.

Orlando Ofield, manager of M. Ofield & Sons, wholesale florists at Grimsby, Ont., and A. A. Savory, his shipping clerk, have been visiting the large greenhouse establishments in this vicinity for about a week, leaving May 22 for Richmond, Ind., to visit the E. G. Hill Co.'s range. Ofield & Sons have about 250,000 feet of glass and are turning their carnation range into roses and Messrs. Ofield and Savory's mission here was to secure stock for same. They are having splendid success with Hadley, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Mrs. George Sawyer roses, and will grow Ophelia on a large scale next season.

Wietor Bros. are having a brisk demand for chrysanthemum stock, but are unable to fill their shipping orders as quickly as they would like to, owing to the strike, which has made conditions such that it is almost impossible to get anything through except cut flowers. They are in good crop with Sunburst roses and carnations, and have a large supply for Memorial day.

Bassett & Washburn have been doing a good part of their shipping direct from the greenhouses during the strike, and so far have managed to take care of all their out-of-town customers in good shape. Mr. Washburn is dividing his time between the store and greenhouses, consequently he is about as busy as can be.

Peter Reinberg has booked a large number of orders for Memorial day, according to Felix Reichling, who expects that stock will clean up in all lines before the rush is over. The expressmen's strike is interfering some with the shipping trade, but all orders are being filled and delivered on time under great difficulties.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are strong on roses and carnations for Memorial day, but the demand is so heavy for same that a grand cleanup is expected in all lines. The shipping trade keeps up splendidly at this house, and new customers are being constantly added to their list.

The George Wittbold Co. will have a pretty store when the new structure is completed, and it will be one of the most modern in this section of the country. The Wittbold flats are progressing very favorably, and work on another wing will be started this week.

Zech & Mann never had a larger or finer supply of sweet peas and Mrs.

Chas. Russell roses to offer than they have right now. Allie Zech is looking forward to a brisk Memorial day trade, for orders already are numerous, and each mail brings in more.

Percy Jones is booking a nice lot of orders for Double White narcissus for Memorial day, which he is handling in quantity. Green goods of all kinds are handled on a large scale here, and the principal offering this week is a fancy grade of ferns.

Phil Broadbeck is busy repairing his benches and will start planting his roses this week. He will stick to the growing of Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney, and will endeavor to make them as gas-proof as possible.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, will open a branch store in the new Edgewater Beach Hotel in the near future. Buchbinder Bros. have the contract for the fixtures, including the refrigerator.

A. Lange has several wedding orders booked for next month, which will call for a large supply of stock. Manager R. J. Mohr says that lilac is unusually fine this year and sells splendidly.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a good supply of short stemmed Mrs. Chas. Russell roses. Budlong's have had an unusually good year and are in good crop with roses for Memorial day.

The George Wittbold Co. has placed an order with Buchbinder Bros. for a large refrigerator to be installed in their new store on Buckingham place as soon as it is completed.

The Ohio Floral Co. has opened a store on the second floor of the Ohio building, and have 3,000 feet of floor space. They are advertising "take the elevator and save half."

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is handling a fine supply of roses and carnations, and will have a large quantity of choice peonies to offer for Memorial day.

Anton Then will not sell his new red carnation, as he first intended to, but will disseminate it himself with the aid of his son John, the originator.

Hoerber Bros. are growing a large quantity of miscellaneous outdoor flowers this season and cut their first gypsophila last week.

MEMORIAL DAY PROSPECTS GOOD.

From present indications the supply for Memorial day will be large. Up to the first of this week unusually heavy orders for this day had been placed with the wholesalers. Peonies are coming along in great shape, and the first of next week should see the cut of early ones at its best. The cut of Easter lilies, too, is very heavy. Roses, of all kinds, and carnations are in a good supply. Large quantities of Cape Jasmynes are coming into the market. The supply of gladioli is fair and meets with a good demand. Outdoor sweet peas may be had; the first came in May 17. Corn flowers have been meeting with an active demand. Lily of the valley and orchids are in a fair supply. Other offerings include snapdragons, callas and irises. Smilax is plentiful.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger suffered a $4,000 loss from fire at his greenhouses at New-castle, Ind., early Sunday morning, May 21. The flames leveled the manager's home and the barns, and destroyed an automobile and wagons. The loss was covered by insurance. The blaze started during the absence of the manager, Fred Brueggemann, when the latter was in Cincinnati.

C. E. Critchell has been having an excellent lot of American Beauties.

Gus Adrian has been very busy with the spring bedding season.

DEMAND REMARKABLY GOOD IN ALL LINES.

The demand for stock still keeps up remarkably well in all lines. Sweet peas have been more plentiful and of good quality with carnations short of the demand, but roses are good and arrive in plentiful supply with the possible exception of white, of which color not quite enough to meet requirements are arriving at the present. A few days of sunshine will remedy this however. Lily of the valley is poor and scarce. Swainsonas are used freely and lilac is moving fairly well. Spanish iris in all colors is now arriving. Tulips are becoming quite small. Snapdragon cleans up daily, as does Halley and America gladioli, which are both of excellent quality. Local peonies are not expected to cut much of a figure for Memorial day as probably only a few of the early red varieties will be open on time. Local wholesalers are preparing, however, to take care of the trade for this day by having southern stock. Of roses there is going to be a good supply, while carnations will not be over plentiful. Local outdoor stock is not expected on time. Greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

Henry Taylor, carnation grower, of 4141 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street, has sold his range of greenhouses to Thos. Lisy, formerly of 4290 East Ninety-ninth street.

Hundreds of young women sold flowers on the streets of Cleveland Sunday, May 21, for the Jewish national fund. A cup is to be awarded to the team getting the most money.

Spring blooms were sold in large numbers to "baseball fans" at the ball grounds May 21, Cleveland ball players being termed "spring blooms" by an eastern manager.

L. F. Darnell and wife have returned from a long vacation trip through the southern states. Both are looking and feeling fine. He says he has come back to stay.

A. M. Coe, of North Olmstead, O., has been cutting some of the best Ward, white, yellow and pink snapdragon ever seen on the Cleveland market.

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange has put on an automobile delivery car to take care of the deliveries. Another car will be added shortly.

Timothy Smith, 4600 Euclid avenue, has been incorporated under the laws of the state of Ohio.

IMPROVED DEMAND AND GOOD SUPPLY.

Trade has shown a marked improvement during the past two weeks and stock is in the best of condition. In roses, American Beauty, Lady Alice Stanley, Ophelia, Russell and Hoosier Beauty are all grading up splendidly, Mrs. George Shawyer being the only variety where the stock is not clean and vigorous. Carnations are of good quality but are not plentiful. There is an ample supply of orchids and lily of the valley. Mothers' day was a decided success and sales showed considerable increase in volume over all former years. Carnations of course had the first call, but sweet peas, lily of the valley, roses, and in fact all other flowers found ready sale and the market cleaned up early. Seedsmen, nurserymen and plantsmen are all busy and the shortage of labor in all lines is making considerable night work necessary to keep up with orders. The planting of pansies and daisies has begun and the parks and the parliament grounds are ablaze with beds of tulips. Forsythias are coming out nicely and most of the stock has wintered well.

NOTES.

The shortage of geraniums last season has had the usual effect and more than three times the number have been grown this year, but this condition will doubtless be relieved by shipments to surrounding territory. Frank Doffert has them as they should be grown, and has been finding ready sale for them, receiving as high as $4 per dozen for stock in 5-inch pots.

The retailers are on the move. J. S. Simmons & Son will leave their present location about June 1, and will locate at the corner of Yonge and Elm street where they will have commodious and up-to-date quarters. J. J. Higgins opened at 256 Yonge street for Mothers' day and reports excellent business.

The vacant lot gardens, which are being looked after by the Rotary Club, have already been started. Applications for space to the number of 166 have been received, among them 64 from returned soldiers, and all indications point to much interest in the movement this year. H. G. D.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Brisk buying characterized the market during the past week. Dark weather has caused a dearth of stock, funeral work has been heavy and numerous weddings were factors. There is a steadily increasing demand for bedding plants and outdoor planting in general has been increased by the city beautiful campaign. The supply of roses, with the exception of American Beauties, is very moderate, Russell and Shawyer being in the largest supply.

Peonies are appearing in small numbers. The trade is looking forward to a good Memorial day business and hoping for favorable weather.

NOTES.

Miss Mildred Flick, of the Flick Floral Co., was a recent visitor at Toledo, O., the guest of Miss Helen Patten of the Patten Floral Co., of that city. Miss Patten, who has recently purchased a new touring car, reports excellent business.

City Forester Carl J. Getz and the park superintendent have begun the work of beautifying the grounds surrounding the municipal lighting plant. Extensive planting of ornamental shrubbery is under way.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey had their annual rose sale last week, which proved a great success, many thousand plants being sold.

A striking glow was noted in Butler & Ullman's show window last week. The cause was a display of Sweet Pea Robert Sydenham. The effect was to make everybody stop and take notice. Another fine attraction was a mound of Cattleia Mossiae. Phlox Drummondii and single dianthus have been added to the usual line of cut flowers and immediately made friends. Mr. Butler reports a largely increased business for Mothers' day. There is also a growing demand for hardy herbaceous perennials, and a splendid stock of seedlings coming along at the greenhouses would indicate that this enterprising firm is starting a preparedness campaign in earnest.

E. J. Canning has had a very busy planting season, and big gaps in his nursery show that quantities of trees and shrubs have been disposed of. In transporting these he says he could not get along without "Henry." More space is being devoted to growing perennials, and beds have been arranged to show them to advantage. Each season finds his business in these

SUPPLY AND DEMAND BALANCE.

Since the full shipments of Mothers' day, stock has been scarce, nearly all lines selling up as fast as they arrive. There has been a rather light demand which has kept things even. Had Mothers' day been Sunday, May 21, there would have been great difficulty in filling orders. The growers report that the warm weather of two weeks ago brought out the buds that were set, and that now quite a lot of items, particularly carnations, are off crop. The roses are about equal to the demand with very good quality for the season. There are still plenty of Easter and calla lilies; they are not bringing fancy prices. Gladioli are now quite a factor and some very good flowers are seen. Sweet peas are still in good shape and sell as well as anything on the list. Cattleyas are more plentiful and there is a fair supply of lily of the valley. Southern peonies are in but the quality is below the standard of the local stock, which is just commencing to show color in sheltered situations. Whether there will be anything in this line for Memorial day depends on the weather, six, warm, soft days will be necessary to bring any kind of a showing. On Saturday, May 20, there was a very good demand for flowers for May day in the Catholic churches, when each girl in the various processions was expected to carry a bunch of flowers.

NOTES.

In speaking of the peony situation, Leo Niessen reports that if the weather is at all favorable there will be a lot of peonies by May 27, hardly any of which will have seen the ice box. There are quite a number of growers in Virginia who have gone into peony growing and even with continued cool weather most of this stock will be at its best by that time.

There is much that in the minds of some in the retail trade, interferes with business—crepe pullers, street men, etc. Now along come the Italian florists who offer to rent out designs of wax and enameled flowers for funerals, even allowing them to be taken to the cemetery, when after the friends have departed, the various pieces are returned to the store.

Samuel F. Lilly, who grows largely of carnations, reports that the plants are not making the showing they should for the month of May, last season's cutting being much better at this time. He does not know how to account for it unless it is the cool weather. He looks for them to catch up later on, if they do not arrive too late.

Duncan Macaw, of Macaw Brothers, Norwood, is well satisfied with their past season's business, it having greatly exceeded their expectations. A new auto truck has been added to their delivery service; also, an eight-cylinder touring car, a very up-to-date looking machine.

The Robert Craig Co. is rushed with a great quantity of bedding stock. As soon as this is out of the way, the large ranges of glass on the Forty-ninth and

SEASON IS BACKWARD.

Trade since our last report has been very good with the heaviest call for funeral work of the year. Cut flowers, especially white, are very scarce. Indoor bulbous stock is over and owing to the continued cool weather the outdoor supply is not very plentiful, but promises to be very soon and of good quality. Roses and carnations are not seen in as large numbers as might be expected at this season, neither is the quality very good. There is little trade in plants. The bedding season is about to commence judging from the numerous inquiries and business promises to be good. Stock is a little backward, due to cool weather, but is very stocky and therefore more salable. Geraniums are still the favorites but there are strong objections to the scarlet, it being unsatisfactory if planted near anything else, due to its color. Several auction sales of Holland grown nursery stock have been held and the general public appear to be eager buyers at figures which play riot with established prices. Some of the prices were hammered down to practically nothing. Roses for an exception, however, which were worth about 40 cents, sold as high as $2.50.

There is quite a scarcity of gardeners, assistant gardeners and helpers for landscape work. Many places on private estates are open. J. L.

MARKET CONDITIONS SHOW IMPROVEMENT.

The weather of the past week was very cool and cloudy. By May 18 the supply of stock had decreased and prices advanced to some extent, particularly on short roses that were in demand for funeral work. On special stock of tea roses, there was little change. Special American Beauties have wholesaled up to $25 per 100. Good carnations have sold up to $4 per 100; in fact, all stocks seem to have been doing a little better than in the early days of May.

NOTES.

Pileski & Schott, growers of Bayside avenue, Flushing, have dissolved partnership. P. S. Schott retains the Flushing range. Frank Pileski has secured a site on or near Eleventh avenue, Whitestone, and will erect four houses, each 25x100. He will, we learn, grow a similar line of stock as when in partnership, that being largely bulbous stock and chrysanthemums. P. S. Schott has a very fine stock of young chrysanthemums which he is now planting in the beds. He expects to grow about 35,000 plants, and to force 750,000 bulbs.

Fr. Koller, for the past eight years with Fred Stewig, the retailer, of 940 Sixth avenue, this city, has bought the retail business of Charles Arnold, 180 Main street, Astoria, and has taken possession. He is a clever and active young man in the retail business and will undoubtedly be successful. There is a neat conservatory connected with the store.

Louis Neukert is one of the interesting florists of Brooklyn. Since 1883 he has conducted a retail store on Jamaica avenue, opposite the main entrance to Cypress Hill cemetery. He is a genial and kindly man and has many friends in the trade.

We found Victor Dorval's Sons, Woodside, very busy at potting and planting out, the late season having retarded outdoor work. They have a great stock of fine aster plants. Both these young men are hard workers and know their business.

John Kral, for a number of years head salesman for Moore, Hentz & Nash, in the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co., died at his home in Portchester, N. Y., May 21, of pneumonia. A more extended notice will be found elsewhere.

Louis Stossel, of Maspeth, has taken charge of his greenhouses near Flushing cemetery, Otto Kratt having given them up and gone to work for Frank Grumbach of Jamaica. Mr. Stossel has another range at Maspeth.

One of the busiest men in Flushing is George F. Kochersberger. He superintends Flushing cemetery, also a neat range, where many plants are grown, and has other interests and does all of it well.

At the store of Thomas F. Burns, 4 Madison avenue, Flushing, we have noticed great activity. In addition to cut flowers and funeral orders, he has been very busy with landscape work.

D. H. Laney, of Woodhaven, has a neat range and a nice stock of plants. He says, however, that he has been in harness long enough and is ready to sell the business.

Calling on Deans & Jacobson, Astoria, May 18, we found them busy planting Asparagus plumosus nanus. Peter Jacobson is getting to be an asparagus king.

Chas. F. Douglas, 1149 Jamaica avenue, Woodhaven, has a prosperous retail and seed business and is a very busy man.

August Millang, who has a store in Jamaica, has opened another at Richmond Hill, which is conducted by Mrs. Millang.

A. F. F.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Without the incentive of a visiting trip, the attendance at the May meeting was almost up to the normal; a few were no doubt too busy, possibly some had not made enough to warrant the expense of car fare, and the rest had no use for the essayist, so that the number present (about half the club's membership) was not so bad all things taken into consideration. The dates for the flower show were fixed for November 9-11 and the members urged to prepare as much stock as possible for the exhibition. A picnic committee was appointed consisting of Elmer Weaver, A. F. Strickler and Rudolph Nagle and it will report at the June meeting with date, places and all particulars. The programme committee, through its chairman, Harry K. Rohrer, reported the possibility of the June meeting being a peony symposium, with B. F. Barr as the essayist. T. J. Nolan was the only out-of-town member present. He is looking for building prospects, but the high cost of material has put a damper on new houses for 1916.

Mention the American Florist when writing

The paper of the evening was by A. M. Herr, entitled, "Looking Backward and Forward in the Florists' Business." In the discussion it created, the matter of prices was pretty thoroughly threshed out, and the general consensus of opinion seemed to be that it was an individual proposition. As a counteraction to the planting of hardy stock in small city yards, crowding out the annual plant trade and reducing the revenue of every florist in the United States, it was suggested by the writer that several florists make an exhibit of yard effects in our public parks as educators of what a yard should look like. If this were carried out all over this United States it would mean millions of dollars to the florists of the country. W. M. Hahman, a rose enthusiast, suggested that a rose garden be a feature of one of the parks to create a love for roses and educate the people what to buy. The after-meeting talk would fill a volume, and if the paper did no other good, it made some discussion.

Rudolph Nagle exhibited a fine specimen of Easter Greeting pelargonium.

Boston:

SHORT SUPPLY IN ALL LINES.

Business held up very well during the past week, there being a general shortage of flowers. Most growers seem to be off crop on nearly every line, and there is a certain amount of holding back for Memorial day. Roses were not plentiful and trade on them was fairly good at prices which ranged from 2 cents up, according to quality and grades. Carnations are in short supply and sell readily at $4 per 100. White varieties are in good demand. Sweet peas have been selling rather spasmodically. During the middle of the week prices fell off as the demand slackened, but on Saturday trade was very brisk. In fact, the Saturday business all around seems to be better than the rest of the week. Lily of the valley is very short and growers of outdoor stock find it a profitable crop this season, $3 and $4 per 100 being received for it. Bulbous stock is about finished for this year and the trade seems to have had enough of it as the demand is none too good. Yellow marguerites are shortening in supply as some growers have cut their entire crop for the season. They find a better market than they have for some months, selling at from 75 cents to $3 per 100. Gypsophila sells very well, this flower being very popular as a filler for bouquets. The supply of green, such as Sprengeri and plumosus, is fairly good, but seems to sell satisfactorily. There is a good supply of pansies, but only the choicest colorings sell well. The retail florists are advertising and pushing the sale of artificial wreaths this year more than ever, but as yet it seems to have made no impression in the flower business, as orders are coming in as well, if not better, than in previous years.

F. L. W.

Washington, D. C.

Business in general is keeping up far beyond expectations, with stock plentiful and prices are at the retailers' figures. Roses of all kinds can be had at prices varying from $2 up, the very best going at $8. Carnations in the best grades are sold at from $1 to $2 per hundred. The only scarce item is lily of the valley. Peonies are plentiful and find ready sale.

NOTES.

Geo. C. Shaffer is more than pleased with his spring business. He also has numerous advance orders for June wedding decorations, which will keep his force on the move.

G. M. Thomas, one of the leading retailers in Center market, has taken the "fatal leap." We wish "Milt" and his bride the best of luck.

J. H. Small & Sons have been very busy during the past week, the demand for Memorial day and funeral work being exceptionally brisk.

The government planting in the local parks is practically finished, and for beauty at this time of the year they cannot be excelled.

W. Marche & Co. are showing some peonies of extra good quality, also some fine bedding stock from their own range.

Hail at Fort Smith.

A near cloudburst, accompanied by the most severe hail and electrical storm in the history of the city, did heavy damage at Fort Smith, Ark., May 20, George Rye and other florists being heavy losers. At the Rye greenhouses on the Plaza nearly every light of glass was shattered. The effect of the storm was equally as severe at his establishment on Grand avenue. Mr. Rye estimates that his glass loss alone will amount to about $350. This is covered by insurance, however. B. B. Freeman, 202 Towson avenue, sustained a loss of from $175 to $200, as the result of broken glass and plants destroyed by hail. Garden truck in the city was cut to pieces, and if the storm was as severe in the fruit belt as it was in Fort Smith, it is feared that the crop is a total loss.

New Haven, Conn.

The retail flower shops of New Haven present a bright, up-to-date appearance that shows the proprietors to be alive to their opportunities. They are, for the most part, located on Chapel street, right in the heart of the shopping district, four of the principal stores, those of John H. Champion & Co., the S. H. Moore Co., Chas. Munro and Myers' Flower Shop, being within a stone's throw of one another, with Cowan & Heller just off Chapel street, opposite the Taft hotel. The last named have a very roomy and convenient store with nicely arranged windows.

The Doolittle Floral Co., on Orange street, has quite a large store and makes a feature of seeds as well as plants and cut flowers. They grow much of their own stock. S. C. Buck, who has opened a new store at 29 Broadway, is satisfied with his business for the first season and contemplates making extensive improvements. Andrew McCrea, on Meadow street, has a roomy store, selling seeds as well as plants and flowers.

The S. H. Moore Co. have in addition to their store, a greenhouse in the rear, which was filled with palms and ferns. A good stock of flowers is also carried. A lot of funeral work was keeping the force busy. John N. Champion & Co. have a very well appointed store with a showy window. Business was reported very good, with prospects of a strong demand for Memorial day.

Chas. Munro made a good bid for business, having quite a number of novelties. His window was very attractive and the entire front of the next building was banked with bay trees and bedding plants; in fact, all the stores featured growing stock for the flower beds.

Myers' Flower Shop carried a good stock of cut flowers and plants. The season's trade had been good. The preparations for Mothers' day at this establishment resulted in excellent business.

This is a wideawake business city, with a lively central shopping district. Most of the cut flower shops are clustered on Main and State streets, right in the busiest section. Mark Aiken's principal store is at 484 Main street. This is a very up-to-date establishment, well arranged with two showy, well decorated windows. A branch store on the same street, a half block away, was also well filled with plants and flowers. Mr. Aiken raises much of his stock, having a large range of greenhouses at the outskirts of the city.

N. F. Higgins, 154 State street, has a very commodious and well arranged store with a large greenhouse in the rear. Great preparations were being made for Memorial day, for which he expects great business. In fact, in all the New England stores, wreaths of magnolia were being made at every spare moment, as with them it is almost the greatest day of the year. T. F. Sheehan, 143 State, was well equipped with a nicely appointed store and attractive windows. "The Flower Shop," on State street, just above Main, is an attractive and inviting store with its many novelties and up-to-date ideas.

Wm. Schlatter & Son, 422 Main street, were well supplied with plants, seeds and flowers; their store has a busy look. Much of the stock is grown at their greenhouses on Bay street. Ostermann & Steele, 137 State street, have a very busy place, which is unquestionably a flower shop, they carrying a large stock of blooming plants and flowers.

L. D. Robinson on State street, on the edge of the shopping district, has a lively store. He also grows plants and flowers, having quite a lot of glass.

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., President; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., First Vice-President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer, Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20-22, 1916.

A DUTCH traveler writes: "Here-with beg to acknowledge you that I arrived home saved."

THE weather in the Chicago district has been quite favorable for onion sets except on low ground.

NORTHERN Missouri and Iowa are very wet and the young corn is showing in only a few cases.

ONION AILSA CRAIG, one of the most popular varieties on the English market, is reported a very scarce item.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade May 24 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $8.50 per 100 pounds.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—H. W. and John T. Buckbee have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their mother, who died May 20.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chicago, had 35 windows damaged in the west side warehouse by the recent bomb explosion in the next block.

CABLES from Ollioules, France, dated May 20 are said to indicate that the French Growers' Syndicate is maintaining the prices which it fixed about May 7.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—L. L. May, of St. Paul, who was operated upon at the Mt. Sinai hospital May 15, is progressing favorably and permitted to receive calls of friends in the trade.

THE HOLLAND-AMERICAN line is reported to have made 190 per cent profit the past year, having charged liberal amounts to depreciation and still paid a cash dividend of 50 per cent.

O. H. DREW, formerly in the catalogue seed and bulb trade at Hibernia, N. Y., and who for the past few years has lived at Tropico, Calif., has returned to the latter place after a four months' tour of the east.

SOUTH FRANCE reports of May 5 state that owing to the unfavorable weather the crop of Roman hyacinths is very poor and because of the shortage of labor it will not be easy to harvest the crop of narcissi.

YOSEMITE VALLEY, CALIF.—L. W. Wheeler, of Gilroy, Calif., and wife reached here May 15, in their Overland Six. They are stopping at Camp Curry. After viewing the local wonders they will motor to Wawona, where they expect to enjoy some fine fishing.

THE Twin City Trading Co., a holding company for the Albert Dickinson Co., of Chicago, has made plans for the erection of an elevator at Minneapolis, Minn., which will bring the total capacity of the company's storage in that city to 1,500,000 bushels.

DUTCH BULBS.—Dutch bulb dealers say business in Norway and Sweden is very good. It is reported that double tulips Murillo and Couronne d'Or sold at better prices than last year. Narcissi and hyacinths are looking better than the tulips just now in the open ground, although narcissi are said to have suffered from excess moisture.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, says that while store trade is quite active at the present time it will be difficult to counteract the losses due to the backward weather unless the season is prolonged well into June. Mr. Goodwin expects to spend the summer at his Indiana place. Mr. Barnard, who spent the winter and spring in California on account of his health, has fully recovered, and is now on his way home, due May 27.

French Bulb Growers Fix Prices.

At a meeting of the Bulb Growers' Syndicate at Toulon, May 6, the following fixed prices were agreed upon by the growers:

Variety	Size in Centimeters	Frances Per 1,000
Hyacinth, Roman White	12-15	100
" " "	11	80
" " Italian	12	80
" " Rose Tendre		70
" " Fonce		70
" " L'Bleu Fonce		70
Narcissus Grandiflora	13 and up	22
" " Grandiflora	12	18
" " Totus Albus	13	15
" " Double Roman	13	16
" " Trumpet Major		30
" " Soleil D'Or		55
Lilium Candidum	18-20	60
Freesias	4½	15

The prices are without discount and payable cash to the growers.

American Seed Trade Association.

C. E. Kendel, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, announces that the programme for the thirty-fourth annual convention, which will be held at Chicago, June 20-22, has been purposely shortened as matters of vital importance to the association will be up for discussion and it was thought wise to allow sufficient time for their consideration. The following papers are included in the programme and will be presented at the opening session: "Accounting and Business Methods," by Robert E. Belt, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C.; "Corn Growing in the Northwest," by A. K. Bush, Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; "Farmers' Associations," by John A. Salzer of John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis.; "Advertising—Fair Play Seed," by Frank B. White, Agricultural Publishers' Association, Chicago.

The Hotel Sherman has been selected as headquarters. The rates for room with bath are: Single, $2 to $5; two in room, $3 to $6; suites of two rooms for two persons, $5, $7 and up. The hotel management urges early reservations to avoid disappointment.

The Government Bulb Farm.

As the 60 acres of land donated to the government for experiments with bulbs and nursery stock at Bellingham, Wash., noted in our issue of April 1, page 558, is mostly woodland and will not be ready for some time, arrangements have been made to retain the leased 10 acres on which this work has been carried on until 1918. It is understood that 15 acres of the new land will be devoted to bulbs, 15 acres to nursery stock, and the remainder reserved for general agricultural experiments.

The past winter having been one of the most severe in the history of Bellingham, the bulb farm is showing its effects, whole plots of hyacinths and narcissi being frozen out. Tulips, however, do not appear to have suffered seriously. A total of 4,210,989 bulbs, including seedlings and mature stock, were planted last fall, divided as follows: Tulips, 2,117,678, hyacinths, 1,244,194, narcissi, 66,117, scillas, 92,000. The Single Early tulips are used more than the Darwins, although according to W. G. Vollen-god, bulb expert, a native of Bevel-wik, Holland, the Darwin tulips do much better in this country than in Holland and the Single Early not as well in America as in Holland. The tulips grown at the farm include Artus, Chrysolora, King of the Yellows, Rose Gris-de-lin, Belle Alliance, L'Immaculee, Crimson King, White Pottelbakker, Prince of Austria, Couleur Cardinal, Mon Tresor, Keizerskroon, Thomas Moore, Sarah Bernhardt, Cottage Maid, Princess Marianne, Duchess de Parma and Cardinalshat. Among the hyacinths, Gertrude, Grand Maitre, Roy de Belges and L'Innocence are the most abundant.

It is planned to add, probably this fall, Iris, Spanish, English and German, snowdrops, lilies and lily of the valley to the list of plants grown here for experiment.

Henderson-McRea.

Howard M. Henderson, member of the firm of Peter Henderson & Co., seedsmen, New York, and Miss Helen V. McRea, daughter of Milton A. McRea, well-known newspaper publisher, were married at the home of the bride's parents at San Diego, Calif., May 22. After a month's auto tour of California, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson will leave for their future home, Summit, N. J.

Sugar Beet Crop Expands.

According to estimates furnished by John Burnham & Co., the 1916-17 sugar beet campaign in the United States will total about 787,623 acres. This is 176,322 acres greater than the acreage for the last campaign. The figures are shown in the table below, with corresponding figures for the last season:

1916-17		1915-16
Factories operating	Acreage contracted	Factories operating	Acreage contracted

Totals

This estimate does not include anything for Wisconsin. The only factory that made a report was Janesville, which stated that it would not open this year.

The plants at Ottawa, Ohio; Waverly, Iowa; Marine City, Mich.; Corcoran, Calif.; Glendale, Ariz., and Fallon, Nev., will not operate, primarily because of the seed situation.

There are new plants operating this year at Lovell, Wyo.; Gering, Neb.; Twin Falls, Idaho; Grants Pass, Ore.; Brigham City, West Jordan and Spanish Fork, Utah.

Indian Corn Quarantine.

The fact having been determined by the secretary of agriculture that maize or Indian corn and closely related plants are subject to certain injurious diseases, especially downy mildews in various forms, it has been declared necessary to enforce the plant quarantine act to prevent the introduction into the United States of these diseases. The importation into the United States of Indian corn of maize, in the raw or unmanufactured state, seed and closely related plants from southeastern Asia, Malayan archipelago, Australia, New Zealand, Oceania, Philippine Islands, Formosa, Japan and adjacent islands, is forbidden on and after July 1, 1916, and until further notice.

Texas Bermuda Onion Crop.

Reports and telegrams received by the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture, in the first week of May, indicate that the total production of onions in Texas will be about 4,650 carloads of 460 bushels each, as follows:

Webb county, 2,250 cars; Lower Rio Grande valley, 350 cars; Dimmit and Zavalla counties, 1,550 cars; La Salle, Frio, and Atascosa counties, 400 cars; and scattering, 100 cars.

Shipments to and including May 3 are reported as follows: Out of Laredo, 2,014 cars, 200 carloads still to move. Total from the state, 2,924 carloads.

Thymol From Horsemint.

Recent investigations of the United States department of agriculture indicate that, under favorable circumstances, thymol from horsemint may be a profitable undertaking. Thymol, which forms the basis of a number of important pharmaceutical compounds, has in the past been imported from Europe, where it was manufactured from ajowan seed grown in northern India. For several years the department of agriculture has been conducting experiments with horsemint, which occurs as a common weed on light, sandy soils over the entire region from southern New York to Florida, and westward to Wisconsin, Kansas and Texas. The results of these investigations, published in Bulletin 372 issued by the department, show that horsemint, when the plants are improved by selection, warrant their use for the commercial production of thymol. It is probable the plants will thrive under cultivation wherever they are found growing wild, but local conditions will determine whether or not the production will be profitable. The investigations of the department indicate that by distilling the improved plants an average of 20 pounds of oil per acre may be obtained from first year plantings and at least 30 pounds per acre in succeeding years. The phenol content of this oil may be assumed to be about 70 per cent, almost all of which is thymol. The yield of thymol per acre of horsemint therefore, should be a little less than 13 pounds for the first year and a little less than 20 pounds for succeeding years. The average price of thymol for a number of years has been about $2 per pound.

It is difficult to estimate with accuracy the cost of producing the thymol. In the opinion of the investigators it is doubtful whether the profits from the industry will be sufficient to warrant anyone in engaging in it unless the horsemint is grown in connection with other oil-yielding plants for which a distilling apparatus is required. In that event, of course, the entire cost of the distilling plant can not be charged against the thymol industry alone. For this reason in the estimates of cost of production published in Bulletin 372 such items as land rent, taxes, depreciation, upkeep, and interest on the distilling plant have not been included. Excluding these items it is believed that thymol can be produced at an approximate cost of $23 per acre the first year, and $19 per acre thereafter. This figure includes the growing of the plants, fertilizer, cultivation, harvesting, and distilling. A plantation of horsemint will not have to be replanted oftener than once in five years, and under average conditions may continue to give a good yield for a still longer time. After the first year a material reduction can be made in the cost of fertilizers if the distilled herb is returned to the soil.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The Rose Hill Floral Co. has been incorporated by Louis L. Barton, Abner Pitner and Ralph M. Grant; capital stock, $50,000. Additions will be made to their present range.

Holyoke, Mass.

At the Oak street establishment of G. H. Sinclair & Son, prospects look fine for Memorial day, geraniums and other seasonable stock being in good shape. G. H. Sinclair is a keen observer, and no doubt owes a great deal of his success to this characteristic. A few years ago he noted a seedling adiantum that looked "different." Today he has a good stock of a fine fern which is a money maker in the production of "green." The fronds are of extra substance, borne on long stems, and of quite distinct appearance. In their new house at Smith's Ferry, carnations and sweet peas are in good crop. Buxton's Silver Pink snapdragon, with stems four feet long, have also been a pleasing sight in this house.

Gallivan Bros. have so many orders for Memorial day as to necessitate renting another store for making up purchases.

H. E. D.

Albany, N. Y.

Favorable reports are made by the trade on Mothers' day. Colored carnations brought $6 a hundred, wholesale, and white ones, $8. The retailers report sales ahead of a year ago with a disposition on the part of buyers to go into other lines of flowers than simply carnations. Some dealers did a good trade in boxes. White carnations were pretty well sold out when Sunday arrived.

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President;
John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 28-30, 1916.

HELENA, MONT.—The State Nursery Co. is now located in its new store and reports excellent business.

SCOTTSVILLE, TEX.—A heavy wind-storm during the night of May 20-21 blew off from 25 to 33 per cent of the peaches in this vicinity.

CAMDEN, N. J.—The new city park on the Delaware river, comprising 60 acres, is to have a 20 acre athletic field and club house and three new playgrounds.

PEONIES in Chicago and vicinity are about 10 days later than last year. At the present time (May 24) it is believed very few of the plants in this locality will bloom before June 10.

American Association of Nurserymen.

MILWAUKEE CONVENTION.

A spirit of true co-operation appears to have laid hold of the in-members of the American Association of Nurserymen, and the forty-first convention to be held in Milwaukee, June 28-30, will average in attendance with any former gathering of the representatives of the nursery trade. With the adoption of the new constitution at Detroit last year a general revival of determination to place the organization on a higher plane than it has ever before attained was manifest.

At the coming convention a report by Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass., who was appointed counsel of the association, will consist of a review of his work for the past year and of recommendations for the future; and the various papers to be read will all breathe the same spirit of effort to raise the moral and commercial ethics of the organization. The intention is to make a membership in this association a guarantee of all that is honest in the carrying out of contracts, the stock handled, and in general business conduct. The dealer who follows the "gold brick" methods and whose representations either to customers among the public or with his brethren in the trade, is to reform or suffer elimination from the association.

The quality of the program for the Milwaukee meeting, in variety of topics and discussions, surpasses anything ever before presented to the nurserymen, and the sessions will be full of life and profit. The receipts for membership dues are more than double those of any previous year, and the correspondence accompanying renewals indicates satisfaction with the new constitution. Members of record in 1915 may renew without coming under the new rule, and if this notice should be read by such as have not yet renewed they may feel at liberty to send in application so as to reach the secretary not later than June 3 and be included in the badge book. The address of the secretary is John Hall, 204 Granite building, Rochester, N. Y.

Warning Against Spineless Cactus.

The propaganda carried on in portions of the south in advocacy of the commercial planting of spineless prickly pear, or spineless cactus, should be viewed with suspicion by farmers who are seeking thoroughly proved forage crops for that region. For any portion of the south this is no more than an experimental crop, according to specialists of the United States department of agriculture. The experiment station at Gainesville, Fla., some years ago tested out 30 or more varieties furnished by the department and found them entirely unsuited to the conditions there. While the reports from some of the coastal sections are more favorable, the plants have not been grown on a sufficient scale to warrant more than an experimental planting by the man of limited means. Prospective growers should confine themselves to a small number of plants, from which a nursery can soon be established if the crop proves to be adapted.

There is but one spineless species known which will withstand the temperatures in Texas as far north as Waco. This is Opuntia ellisiana, a medium-sized species of about the same habit as the common natives of southern Texas. This hardy species seems to have its origin at Corpus Christi, and there are evidences that it was grown there 14 years ago. It is known to be grown there still. The stock of it is quite limited, there being but few growers known to the department who have propagated it on any scale, and even their supplies are not large.

So far as the types which are now being exploited are concerned, they can not be grown except in the very warmest sections of the country. It is yet to be determined whether any spineless cactus can make an economic crop in the humid South, where legumes and other forages of a higher nutritive value can be had in a green, succulent condition nearly the entire year.

Use The Garland Cast Iron Gutter When You Build

It has made good in hundreds of largeranges throughout the country and is recognized by all the growers who have used it as the best in the field. Gutters that were used for twenty years in old houses were found to be practically as good as new and when the other material was thrown on the rubbish heap the Garland Cast Iron Gutters were set aside to be used in the new range. Absolutely the best and safest Gutter to use. It costs no more and lasts a life time. Get in touch with us whenever you need anything in Greenhouse Materials. Always remember that we make the greenhouse complete and that it pays to get our sketches and estimates before you build.

TRADE GOOD IN ALL LINES.

We are having an unprecedented cool spring and every growing thing outdoors is very backward. The florists, however, say that business is very good in every branch of the trade. Mothers' day brought a bigger demand for carnations than has ever been known before; a conservative estimate of the number sold for that day is 25,000. There has also been a big demand from over the state for commencement flowers. The main trouble with these orders has been that only white flowers could be used for that purpose and it has been somewhat difficult to procure all of the stock required. The sale of bedding plants has exceeded all previous years and the end is not yet in sight as the planting season is being prolonged by the continued cool weather.

Papers have been filed by Shannon and Hickey, of the firm of Lucas, Shannon & Hickey, seedsmen, to dissolve the corporation and the store is closed temporarily until the matter is settled. The firm is perfectly solvent and it is the intention of Messrs. Shannon & Hickey to purchase the interest of Mr. Lucas, and to continue the business.

New Jersey Floricultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held in J. O. U. A. M. hall, Orange, May 15. It was decided that the next meeting, which will be held June 19, will be "rose night" and cash prizes will be awarded for the best vase of 18 white; also for best display of hybrids. It has always been the custom of the society in the past to discontinue its meetings during July and August, but an exception will be made this year as far as July is concerned, and the regular meeting of that month will be held to make arrangements for the eleventh annual dahlia, gladiolus, fruit and vegetable show.

A gold watch fob was presented to Fritz Berglund, who resigned his position as treasurer last year after three years of faithful and efficient service. There was an excellent display on the exhibition tables and the judges, Fritz Berglund, Peter Duff, Jr., and Wm. Jordan, awarded points as follows to Max Schneider: Carnations, 90; tulips, 50; sweet peas, 60; Calceolaria hybrida, 65.

GEO. W. STRANGE, Sec'y.

DALLAS, TEX.—A hail storm, which visited this city May 15, caused considerable damage to plants in the field, but very little glass was broken.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Cleaning Up.

The bedding season is over, the year's work is practically finished, the young stock for another year in preparation, and now is the time to clean house. Don't leave a lot of worthless stock scattered around the houses that takes a man's time to water, but what it is desired to save block all up together where it can be watered in a short time, and above all things throw out anything that has passed its usefulness. How often have we seen plants that would never have been of any value left standing in the greenhouses until fall planting; neglected, yet taking more or less room to be thrown out at last and the houses never thoroughly made ready for the coming crop. Get the plants that need care and attention all together and clean up the other houses. If the stock is grown in benches these will need repairing, and if badly decayed take them down and rebuild. Those that have cement benches are fortunate for they will only need repairs. Throw out all the old soil and clean up under the benches and in all the corners, and throw out any old rotting boards or pieces of crocks, and thus get rid of the vermin that invariably infest greenhouses. After the benches are cleaned out, give them a good, thick coat of whitewash in which sulphur was mixed when the lime was slacking. The advantage of this is too little appreciated by many growers. It costs but little and the prevention from fungus will often amount to a great deal. After the whitewash has dried throw a few ashes or a mulch of some kind on the wooden benches to protect them from the hot rays of the sun. Give the inside of the house a good coat of white paint; this should be done at least every other year, for the difference in the amount of light in a clean white house and a dirty one during the dark short days is material, and the increased quality and quantity of stock will more than repay for the expense and labor. Any repairs that the heating system needs should be done at once and the boilers cleaned up ready for fall. Too often the boiler is never thoroughly cleaned out after the last firing and ashes and clinkers left lying around in a moist condition, rusting the boilers. The steam boilers should either be emptied or filled, for if the water is left standing rust will form inside just above the water line and rapidly eat into the iron. These are all necessary details to be looked after at the earliest possible moment.

Ardisia Crenulata.

The seeds of ardisia may be sown at any time during spring, and as it will take until another year to grow plants that will fruit it is not material at which particular time they are sown. The seeds are a little slow in germinating and it is better to sow them in the manner of sowing cyclamen, about half an inch apart. In early summer they should be potted in 2½-inch pots and are better grown in a frame than in the greenhouse. In the fall when brought into the houses they should be again potted in three or four-inch pots and grown in a temperature of 50°. The plants are of a woody nature and grow slowly and should not be potted into too large pots, for it is far better to allow the roots to fill the pots before shifting. The following spring they will bloom, and should then be potted in six-inch pots and given a cool location in the houses. After the fruit has formed and grown to good size the plants should be given a good sunny position that they may take on a bright color by Christmas. If the plants are grown too warm the foliage will be thin and lack the substance and luster which makes them so much admired in the cooler grown plants, and the warmer grown stock gets chilled very easily, when the berries will drop off. The only insect which infests this plant is the brown scale, which, if not destroyed, will cover the plant stem completely. These should be carefully removed and continually guarded against. If there are any old plants that have dropped their lower leaves the top of these can be rooted in a similar manner to rooting rubbers, that is, by cutting into the stem and mossing the cut, and after the roots have appeared in the moss, the top cut off below the moss and potted.

Gloxinias.

The gloxinias that were started in late winter should now be beginning to flower. After the flower beds have set they can be placed in a little shadier location and the danger of burning the foliage be obviated to a great degree. The plants should be spaced far enough apart that they do not touch and a proper circulation of air produced around the plant. If the flowers are to be used in floral work they should be cut as soon as fully open and placed in water away from draughts, and they will keep very well; these flowers are very fragile and should be handled carefully. If there are any particularly beautiful flowers that it is desired to propagate, the leaves can be rooted in the propagating bench by placing the base of the leaf in the sand to the depth of about an inch. The seedlings should be potted along for later blooming.

Dracaena Indivisa.

The seedlings of Dracaena indivisa should now be taken from the flats and potted in small pots and placed in a good moist location that they may make a good growth before the fall. A palm or fern house or one with similar temperature is the best for the small stock. The four-inch stock that was not disposed of during the spring sales can be either plunged outside or planted in a frame, where they will not demand the close attention necessary in the greenhouse. If planted out they should be potted up early, at least by September 1, when the roots are active and will quickly obtain a foothold in the new soil. They should be heavily shaded for a few days after potting or some loss of the plants may result. Any old plants that have outgrown their usefulness may be propagated, the stems cut up into small pieces and laid in a propagating bed with bottom heat where the eyes will open and young plants quickly form.

Canterbury Bells.

There is always a demand in the spring for something different than the flowers which the buyers have seen all through the winter and many growers have a call for some of the forced perennials. Canterbury bells are grown for this purpose and if well grown find a ready sale. Seeds sown now and grown on in pots, being shifted into larger sizes as may be required, will bloom next spring and help furnish the grower with a variety of stock. They should be grown cool during the early winter, a violet house or one of a similar temperature being about right, and then brought into a warmer house with a temperature of 50° in late winter where they will produce fine blooms for early spring. By bringing a few at a time into the warmer house a succession of bloom may be had.

The June Wedding.

THE FLORIST'S OPPORTUNITY.

The first week in June is claimed by the bride, and more weddings are celebrated at that time than any other season of the year. It is an especially good season for the florist, as there is generally an excellent assortment of outside flowers, particularly peonies, and shrubbery of all kinds. Pot hydrangeas are also at their best and nothing is more decorative than well flowered, pink or blue hydrangeas. Palms and ferns can be handled without fear of frost, and some choice specimens get outside of the greenhouse for the first time for these occasions.

THE CHURCH DECORATIONS.

How the church looks is very important; the guests arrive; they are all expectation; they sit for half an hour listening to the delightful music and Gloxinia Imperialis.

Grown by Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore.

feast their eyes on the more or less elaborate decorations, which, whether large or small, should be in good taste and have a finish that will leave no room for criticism. No matter how familiar one may be with the building, it is best to look it over and plan out the work for each new commission. No two decorations should look exactly alike, as there are innumerable ways of arranging the same stock to produce different effects. A background of palms in the chancel or on the pulpit platform is nearly always in order. Cibotiums give a very artistic finish when arranged with palms. A swinging pot or tub holder, fitted to a flat-iron base, is admirable for the placing of such stock as ferns, hydrangeas and other short spreading plants. The holder can be placed on top of any pedestal and the plant, while securely held, tilted to any desired angle. Arches across the middle aisle are very effective, as are standards on either side bearing cibotiums or baskets of flowers.

Tall floor vases of peonies are very showy and seasonable as well. They can be used effectively among the palms or at other conspicuous points. Bunches of peonies or roses at the pew ends of the reserved seats with generous bows of ribbon, are nearly always seen in elaborate decorations; in fact, every pew end on the center aisle is at times decorated in this way. We have seen the chancel and front of the church near the pulpit and reading desk, decorated with climbing roses, as if clinging to the walls. Wire netting with laurel as a background to cover it, was put up the day before and small tubes or vases of roses set in a few hours before the ceremony. The effect was natural and very artistic.

A wide chancel railing gives an opportunity for a bank of flowers that always attracts attention. A well trimmed prie-dieu or kneeling stool, behind which the clergyman takes his position on the arrival of the wedding party, should be one of the special features. A very nice finish is given just before the bridal procession, by laying a white muslin floor cloth the length of the aisle. This has been rolled on a stick, resting on the floor with one end tacked down immediately in front of the kneeling stool. Two of the ushers carry this down the aisle; it unrolls as they go and is fastened to the floor at the end quickly with small nails that fit into holes made for the purpose.

FLORAL EMBELLISHMENT OF THE HOUSE.

The decoration of the house depends much on the architecture. The room in which the bridal party receive is usually the feature. Here is the inevitable bank of palms or ferns with floor vases of lilies, snapdragons, white roses or peonies. A canopy of smilax, embellished with any flower desired, is a worth while addition sure to attract the admiration of the guests. Other vantage points are the mantels, over the doorways, the newel posts and banister railings to the second or third floor. Pin oak boughs take the place of southern smilax at this time and are very effective. The white flowers of the privet work in nicely with the oak leaves. The table for the bridal party should be arranged with white flowers entirely, the center a tall, slender vase with snapdragons, long stemmed roses or lilies. A pretty decoration is made with a large low rose bowl in the center of a wreath of white sweet peas or roses that encircle the table just inside side the plate line.

The large serving or buffet table looks best with a tall vase, well filled with long American Beauties. When served on the lawn, as is often the case, the guests are seated at small tables, with a vase of flowers in the center of each, the bridal party generally remaining indoors.

At times the ceremony is performed on the lawn, but in this case a chance is taken with the weather. A canopy of green and flowers is erected at the end of one of the walks where there is sufficient room to seat the guests. This space can be prettily enclosed with garlands of laurel, with bunches of flowers at each supporting post. The path leading from the house should be garlanded in like manner. Such a setting makes a very pretty effect. It is generally for an afternoon affair, and with propitious weather, it is called a beautiful wedding.

The flowers for the bridal party are important. There is great latitude allowed. Sweet peas are a favorite with many, snapdragons with others, while pink or yellow roses, larkspurs, daisies, pink or blue hydrangeas are all suitable, either singly or in combination. Some carry colonial bunches; others have Leghorn hats filled with sweet peas. A generous use of ribbons is nearly always a necessary finish. The bride's bunch is a round or shower bouquet of lily of the valley and orchids, but some prefer white roses and sweet peas or gardenias and sweet peas. Boutonnieres are generally made of either gardenias, lily of the valley, or pompons of white carnations.

Mothers' Day—"Think it Over."

Our good Boston friend flounders around considerably in his criticism of the third largest floral holiday of the year. He does not believe it is a good thing for the florists' trade; that they will surely suffer later, in the public esteem; he quotes the lady who feels the burden of having to buy a flower for each of her children on that day, but who, no doubt, will welcome the flowers she will receive from them on future anniversaries. We are in accord with him versaries. We are in accord with him about the doggerel verse; the sentiment of the day is beautiful and no particular flowers are necessary for use in its observance. We are sure his information as to the "frosty" nature of its observance last year is incorrect, as the movement is steadily gaining in popularity. In his own city the wholesale dealers and growers all report that this season's demand was wonderful and much better than any previous Mothers' day, although there had been a heavy business last season. There was no boosting of prices, but the demand raised values all around, with carnations bringing easily one hundred per cent more than ordinary prices for the season. As to the ethics of advertising and "unwise promotion" of the sale of flowers for this occasion, we can only state that no word has been raised against the work of the Western Union Telegraph Co., who appropriated $20,000 to advertise the day, expecting to realize a profit from the use of their system in telegrams to mothers by sons and daughters away from home. We understand they are particularly well pleased with results.

Mothers' day is a fixed floral holiday of immense benefit to the trade; the selling or advocating the use of flowers for this occasion is perfectly legitimate and he is a poor business man who will not take every fair advantage of the opportunity. Birthdays and anniversaries of all kinds are made by some florists a special feature of their business, but this national Mothers' day, with the sentiment back of it, can be made, we believe, the greatest flower day of the year.

As to assisting Miss Jarvis in her work of furthering the movement, that has so greatly benefited the trade, we are sure that all will see the propriety of such a purpose. For years she has devoted her time and funds to extending the movement in this country as well as abroad, her reward being simply the honor of having founded the day. She is still earnestly engaged in continuing this work and moneys contributed will be given to her as a gratuity for her own personal use. It is hoped that enough benefited contributors will be found to make this a handsome sum.

BRIDESMAIDS' BOUQUET BY GEO. WIENHOEBER, CHICAGO.

Killarney Roses and Lily of the Valley.

Daffodil Show in London.

Each spring now brings forth a fine display of daffodils and narcissi at the Royal Horticultural hall in Westminster, and the show held in April this year was quite interesting in character. In addition to the older varieties (which still hold their own and are not likely to be ousted for many years to come) there were a very large number of new and exquisite seedlings. These show that the modern hybridizer is working on more enlightened and less haphazard lines than his predecessors, and the results achieved indicate future possibilities of great importance. Some of the very finest seedlings were unnamed. They were distinguished only by the raiser's private number, the reason being that it is scarcely worth while giving a name to a seedling, no matter however charming it may be, of which only one or two bulbs exist. When such seedlings become more common or show signs of increasing rapidly, we may be sure that their owners will lose no time in christening them with appropriate names.

As to the exhibition itself, both trade and amateur growers were in evidence. Robert Sydenham, of Birmingham; R. H. Bath, of Wisbech; J. R. Pearson & Sons, Lowdham, Notts; Barr & Sons, Long Ditton; Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh; Carter & Co., Raynes Park, and Sutton & Sons, Reading, were conspicuous trade exhibitors, each setting up his display according to his own taste. The majority contented themselves with arranging the blooms in clusters in vases, and these were generally staged in tiers, one above the other. Dobbie & Co. and Carter & Co., however, adopted more original lines. The first-named had large fan-shaped stands with metal vases at various heights and angles, and in these the flowers were artistically set up. Carter & Co. made a fine attempt at copying nature. Undulating borders representing the soil were made and the daffodils and narcissi sprang out of these and appeared as if they had been planted there last fall. Great masses of one variety were used to set off similar masses of another. The only criticism one might make against the style was perhaps that the flowers were arranged much too regularly. If the masses had been broken up a little more in accordance with natural garden schemes, the effect would have been far more charming.

As to varieties the most conspicuous were forms of poeticus seedlings, among which were Horace, Laureate and Virgil, of definite merit. Many unnamed seedlings in this section were also greatly admired. The Ajax or large trumpet section was boldly represented by such magnificent varieties as King Alfred, Emperor, Empress, Golden King, Golden Knight, Lord Roberts, Queen of the West, Olympia, Grenadier, Golden Empire and King Harold—all of which are monsters in size in the daffodil world and worth the commercial gardener's attention. There were hundreds of other forms intermediate in size and of all shades of yellow, cream, white and orange, but it is impossible to particularize. Mention, however, must be made of R. H. Bath's "White Pennant," which secured an award of merit. This is a pure Leedsi seedling, with a large, regular trumpet which is at first tinted with pale, creamy yellow, but when fully expanded is a pure white. An award of merit was also given to Coral, shown by W. F. M. Copland, Shirley, Southampton. This is an attractive seedling, delicately pure white, with a nicely filled trumpet.

Other fine varieties whose merits may be gleaned from the various growers' catalogues were Lady Margaret Boscawen, Great Warley and Lord Kitchener, Bernardino, Crystal Queen, Sunrise, Inglescombe, White Emperor (a fine thing from C. Towne, Simpson, Bletchley), Phyllida, White Pearl and Neron, the last named a fine trumpet from Sutton & Sons. W.

Destroying Moles.

The common garden mole is in most situations more beneficial than harmful, but is a decided nuisance when it invades a well-kept lawn or a newly-planted seed bed. The burrowing habits of pine mice closely resemble those of the mole, and they frequently use mole tunnels to reach growing plants. Pine mice may be easily killed with poisoned grain, but moles seldom take poisoned baits of any kind, and special mole traps, of which there are three general types, and which require considerable experience and judgment, are the main dependence for their destruction. These traps and their method of operation, together with much information regarding the mole, its habits, control, etc., are described in Farmers' Bulletin No. 583 of the United States department of agriculture.

WINAMAC, IND.—Miss M. J. Wittmer has spent a well earned vacation in Chicago during the past few weeks.

Am. Rose Society Visits Test Garden.

There was much to interest the members of the American Rose Society in the inspection of the rose gardens at Arlington in Washington, D. C., May 23, mention of which was made in our issue of May 27, page 992. It was regretted that the backward season had hindered the development of the flowers, although some few varieties, notably the Hugonis of China, were already out of flower. Mme. Abel Chatenay, Lady Ashtown, Papa Gontier, Grus an Teplitz, Harrisoniana, Dawson, and a few others, were fairly full of flowers. The newer sorts were looked over by the judges, who used the new charts of the society, one of which reads: Novelty, 5; color, 10; fragrance, 5; lasting, 10; shape, 10; substance, 5; petalage, 5; size, 5; blooming, 15; hardiness, 10; foliage, 10; growth, 5; stem, 5. The other chart awarded floriferousness, 20; vigor, 20; color, 15; size, 15; form, 10; substance, 10; fragrance, 10.

The drizzling condition of the weather interfered considerably (although it might have been much worse), with an inspection of other interesting points of the extensive grounds of the agricultural department. The visit to "Twin Oaks" was very enjoyable, the rose arches giving promise of a great show of flowers in a week or 10 days. The collection of irises were very fine, as were the columbines. A purple petunia of unusual color and substance was a feature. This is truly an ideal garden; a wealth of beauty the entire season.

The luncheon at the Raleigh hotel was most enjoyable, the table, with its tall vase of red Radiance and baskets of Richmond roses, stephanotis and gardenias, furnished by the Gude Bros. Co., looked especially inviting. With the serving of the ices, President S. S. Pennock called on Robert Pyle of the Arlington garden committee, who stated he thought the weather man should be consulted before next years' meeting was arranged. He praised Wm. F. Gude for his great interest in the society and the work he had done. Dr. Van Fleet was also commended for his great work in raising so many American varieties. It was Mr. Pyles' desire to see roses written into the civilization of America and the culture of roses woven into national life. All should take an interest in what the agricultural department were doing and assist by seeing that new varieties and also many old ones were furnished them.

W. F. Gude said he found it a pleasure to work for the society. Roses and beautiful gardens were places restful, where the money loving man tiring of this pursuit, finally found great repose. He strongly urged all present to ask their various representatives to give liberally to the ornamenting of the national capital which belonged to the whole people. He added that he wanted the American Rose Society to grow so that its fame would be heard around the world. J. Horace McFarland said he felt that the society should join with the great national rose organization of England and read several communications that had passed between the honorable secretary, Courtney Page, and himself, in which Mr. Page had extended the hand of fellowship and would do all he could to help in the good work. They had a membership of over 7,000 in England and if the people could be aroused, there was no reason why even these large figures should not be possible here. He referred to the great annual issued there and the work done here in that direction. In England, membership stood at about 500 for a long time, when an educational movement was begun by issuing books and pamphlets on rose culture which had added hundreds and later thousands to their list. Their rose culture literature had not heretofore been very extensive and the interest created among amateurs is now very beneficial. The American society, should it follow along these lines, he felt, would be greatly benefited. There was a most brilliant future, for this broad country presented climatic conditions to suit every class and variety of the rose. In a list of 5,000 roses in England only 26 were of American origin. Commercial work had been necessary, but the time had now come for the amateur to take a hand and experiment in the raising of new varieties. They could go to Admiral Ward and steal from him and yet take nothing away. He believed it possible for Dr. Van Fleet to start something in the United States—an American family to build upon, the people should be taken into confidence and told of the diseases of the rose and how to combat and cure them. At Cornell test garden they were making an orderly study of the rose and needed the co-operation of rose growers in a financial way to properly carry the work on. Wonders had been done in fruit tree diseases which had saved the country millions of dollars. The executive committee were directed to look into this suggestion of Mr. McFarland's, and if possible help with the assistance of the professional rose grower.

Prof. Mulford urged the society to assist in getting new varieties of roses for the garden, there not being half as many as they ought to have. California and the Pacific coast growers were anxious to send plants, but the expense of freight which must be prepaid should be in some way provided for. Admiral Ward spoke of the importance of stock for budding and grafting roses, different soils and environments were favorable, or otherwise, to certain root parentage. The seedling briar was the best all 'round for the purpose. The Manetti is rather short lived. The multiflora of Japan gives half again as much growth as any other stock, but it is thought to do so at the expense of color, which was very important. He said locality was a great factor, Great Britain and here being very different. Bright colored roses should be tried on different stocks and tested for color values. Jackson Dawson uses multiflora stocks exclusively.

Professor Corbett said he had become a rose enthusiast from riding across the prairies and noting the wild roses there. He was much interested in making American varieties of roses.

He was sure that to obtain the best success, we must have varieties raised here that will stand and become inured to our climate; instead of 5,000 European varieties and 25 American, it should be possible to read it the other way. In grafting, great attention should be paid to the congeniality of the variety with the stock which is to carry it. There must be the right soil for the plant that is to grow in it. In experiments as to variations of color from different stocks, it was desirable that the buds or grafts should all come from the same plant to get definite results. Individuality is very marked in different plants of the same variety.

E. G. Hill said he felt sure that if this garden was given the proper support, it would become in time national in character and reputation and rank with the best in England and France. Wonderful advancement in forcing roses had been made in this country. Bon Silene, Safrano and others of the earlier periods, had given way to the grand varieties of today, but outside garden roses had been neglected. Dr. Van Fleet and Mr. Walsh had done a great deal, but the reason that there was not the great improvement there should be, was because there was no money in it. The best new hybrid would not bring $100. there was no decent recompense for the commercial man as an inducement. The wealthy amateurs should take it up and Mr. Hill felt sure there would soon be some grand American roses. The amateurs in England knew all about roses, and at the large shows given there the rose growers took thousands of dollars worth of orders for their new sorts. He added that the city of Paris offers gold medals for the best roses and these are eagerly contended for. Something like that should be done here. George W. Hess invited all the members to visit the Botanic gardens, where they would find many interesting things.

Those in attendance were: E. Allan Pierce, Waltham, Mass.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; D. M. Dunning, Auburn, N. Y.; J. Horace McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa.; Admiral Aaron Ward, United States Navy; S. S. Pennock and F. B. Michell, Philadelphia, Pa.; Robert Pyle and Antoine Wintzer, West Grove, Pa.; George M. Hess, Professor F. L. Mulford, Dr. W. A. Taylor, Dr. H. H. Hasselbring, Clarence C. Linz, Professor Corbett, George Wainwright, W. F. Gude, Adolph Gude and Ernest Gude, all of Washington, D. C.

The Ficus.

The term, decorative plants, is a rather elastic one, and may cover a large variety of stock, but from a commercial point of view the list becomes much more contracted. For many years some of the ficus family have been very familiar among the trade species of decorative plants, partly from their natural beauty and partly from their enduring character. In fact, a rubber plant became almost a necessary part of the furnishing of a modern home in some localities, until this popularity became almost its undoing, for as an article becomes common, especially one that is used for decorative purposes, it is likely to lose caste, if it ever had any. This is not intended as a criticism of Ficus elastica, for the writer is still a strong admirer of a well-grown and shapely ficus, be it either a single stemmed plant or a symmetrically branched specimen, and there are surely few more satisfactory plants for the window than this.

A well grown plant of the variegated form of elastica is also a thing of beauty, and as to its wearing qualities I can only say that I have seen it in an ordinary living room in good condition for more than a year. But to keep a variegated ficus in a dwelling for such a period requires in the first place a well-rooted plant, and one that has been given plenty of light and air in the course of its growth, for one that has been grown in a close atmosphere and under shaded glass will surely lose its leaves in a short time after it has been taken from the greenhouse. Too much water either at the root or overhead is not beneficial to the variegated ficus, and especially during the winter it should not be syringed too late in the day.

OTHER VARIETIES.

But Ficus elastica is not the only member of the genus that has attracted attention commercially, for during the past ten years or so the bold foliage and massive growth of Ficus pandurata have won many friends, and incidentally have swelled the bank accounts of some fortunate growers, even though this noble plant is not adapted to all occasions or to the most humble dwelling. And now some of the acquaintances of our earlier years in the rubber family are being exploited to a greater or less extent, among them being Ficus Chauvieri and F. Porteana, both admirable species of the elastica type, but abundantly distinct from that species.

Possibly when another broad-leaved species is found desirable for the market we may be re-introduced to F. macrophylla, a remarkably handsome plant as a large specimen, though not quite so easily propagated as some of its brothers. Generally speaking, the ficus are easy to propagate, provided that sufficient heat and moisture be maintained to keep the stock plants in a growing condition, and although cuttings of many of the species root freely, yet the topping system is the most satisfactory.

CARE OF THE PLANTS.

For the benefit of those who may be unfamiliar with it, we may remark that the topping system referred to is that of partly cutting through the growing shoot and then binding it up with a bandage of wet moss, then keeping the moss wet and the plants rather warm until the roots show through the moss, after which the young plant is severed from its parent and potted up. These young plants naturally require some protection from the sun and wind and also abundant moisture to keep them from wilting after they are potted off, but once they are established in the pots they cannot get too much light, and this applies especially to those that may be potted late in the season. AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY MEMBERS AT THE ARLINGTON TEST GARDENS, WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 23.

Washington Notes.

In keeping with this beautiful city, with its tree lined avenues and wide thoroughfares, of which every American has a right to be proud, there is, it seems, a more universal demand for flowers than one finds in other communities of the same size. No doubt the beautiful surroundings of all the government buildings and other public grounds has encouraged an aesthetic taste and love for flowers that the craft have been wide awake enough to foster and increase by liberal advertising and a wealth of window displays in their many large stores. The retailers here delight in corner properties and a number of large flower shops are seen with wide fronts and show windows extending the length of the store on the cross street. J. H. Small & Sons, Z. D. Blackistone, Geo. C. Shaffer, The Flower Store, the Dupont Flower Shop, W. Marche & Co., and Robt. Bowdler & Sons, all have very elaborate show windows, which when one considers their size, are kept wonderfully well decorated. Gude Brothers Co., Inc., F. H. Kramer, and J. R. Freeman have large, inside the block stores, very deep with commodious greenhouses in the rear. The Washington Floral Co. and Geo. H. Cooke's are also beautiful stores. There are in addition to these a number of other establishments that by their attractive displays of plants in front, and more or less elaborately arranged windows and store decorations, keep in active touch with the flower buying public.

Auto delivery cars are considered a necessity with nearly all the stores, the Gude Co. having some six or eight. This store carries on a wholesale as well as retail business. Their stock is wonderful; everything in flowers and plants would just about describe it, but their 35 or 40 employees manage to handle the immense business and keep the store in order and inviting condition nearly all of the time, although the extra rushes of business does at times tax them to the utmost. A large telegraph delivery business is done here—over 100 orders have been received and filled in one day. Their windows are always attractive. A large gilt frame with baskets of flowers made a beautiful picture, while silver thistle plants from the fields growing in moss at the front, kept people guessing.

The Flower Store at Harvard and Fourteenth streets is another corner shop with fine show windows at front and side. With its tasteful decorations and the bright personality and enthusiasm of Mrs. Phillips, there can be no doubt about the success of this business. J. Dan Blackistone, 3120 Fourteenth street, N. W., opened last fall, and has quite an attractive shop. Business has greatly exceeded his expectations. S. F. Holland, 2406 Eighteenth street, out in the residential district, is also well fitted for business with a very well arranged interior and show window. There are nine months of good business here, but dull in summer, but trade is increasing all of the time.

In addition to their well stocked stores, some of the trade are quite liberal advertisers, using printer's ink in a way that would appear extravagant to a degree to those who have not tried such methods of publicity or on such a scale. F. H. Kramer runs one-half, and at times whole pages in expensive papers when he is featuring a specialty. Z. D. Blackistone is another who uses large space, in high priced advertising mediums on special occasions. Gude Bros. Co., Inc., Geo. C. Shaffer and others are also seen in newspapers, theatrical programmes and publicity mediums.

The Center Market must not be forgotten, for here in their separate stalls or some with enclosures as large as small stores, are found splendid stocks of all kinds of flowers, plants and made up work. Frank Sly, G. Milton Thomas, Robt. Bowdler & Sons, John Boyle, A. Herold, F. H. Kramer, M. J. McCabe, J. R. Morgan, C. Ponnet & Co., F. L. Schultz, and D. H. Von Bottger, all find the market a good place for business, and made up work here is quite as artistic and up-to-date as that seen in many of the stores.

J. H. Small & Sons' beautiful store, with its many windows all elaborately decorated, is always one of the show places. Z. D. Blackistone's windows are always gay with blooming plants, cut flowers, and made up work. Bedding plants are now a feature. W. Marche & Co. on the opposite corner, in addition to showy windows, carries outside a line of evergreens and hardy plants, which are very attractive.

F. H. Kramer, at Ninth and F streets, has a very showy place, with his decorative and bedding plants, large cut flowers and funeral design business. This is always one of the busiest shops in town. His extensive advertising brings him a great deal of out of town business. An insecticide of his own manufacture has quite a reputation and is much in demand.

The Dupont Flower Shop, on Dupont circle, is an ideal place, with its wide front show window and 50 feet of same on the side, which is really all front. The inside and outside display of selected plants makes this a very attractive store. Mr. Mayberry, the manager, reported business very good.

Geo. C. Shaffer's store is always gay with flowers. His windows won two prizes in April, this year, offered by the Chamber of Commerce and the Washington Times. This was in competition with all florists, dealers in fruits, fancy grocers and other branches of trade.

Leapley & Meyer, Ninth and G streets, have a showy front, and are doing an extensive business in bedding plants and seeds of which a large stock is kept at this season. Cut flowers and design work are also features.

The Washington Floral Co.'s well arranged shop on H street, with its large well decorated show window, is right in it for location. Manager Hetherington reports business very satisfactory.

C. E. Brook's branch store, Fourteenth street and Park road, and his place at 1527 Fourteenth street, were well stocked with plants, in which a large business is done.

W. W. Kimmell, at 1139 Fourteenth street, has a large greenhouse in the rear. Landscaping is a specialty and an important branch of his business.

O. A. C. Oehmler, on G street, has a busy looking shop with attractive windows. He reports business on the increase.

George H. Cooke's store on Connecticut avenue is well fitted up with attractively arranged windows and interior. K.

SALEM, N. J.—Several greenhouses are to be added to the range of the Seabrook Farms Co.

MANKATO, MINN.—Two new houses, each 20x100 feet, are being built by A. J. Kramer.

CROMWELL, CONN.—A. N. Pierson, Inc., will hold a field day at Cromwell Gardens, June 21, complimentary to the National Association of Gardeners and the American Association of Park Superintendents.

OBITUARY.

Frank A. Stecher.

Frank A. Stecher, head of the Stecher Lithographic Co., Rochester, N. Y., died at his home in that city May 22, after an illness that had lasted since the first of the year. At that time he contracted a heavy cold and found it necessary to withdraw from business temporarily. He went to Florida in the hope of regaining his former good health, but as he grew no better, he returned home early in March.

Mr. Stecher was founder of the house which bears his name, and was well known in the seed and nursery trades. For many years he was a familiar figure at the annual conventions of the American Seed Trade Association and the American Association of Nurserymen, having among members of both organizations numerous patrons for his high grade lithographic work in catalogue covers, plates, etc. Mr. Stecher's genial disposition, with his fine character and the unusual skill displayed in his business, won for him everywhere a host of life-long friends.

Mr. Stecher was born at Achern, Baden, Germany, in 1849, and came to this country when he was but 10 years old. He is survived by one sister, two daughters and several grandchildren. His funeral took place at Rochester May 25 and was largely attended.

Jonathan Nash.

Jonathan Nash died suddenly at his New York home early on the morning of May 27. He had been ill for several weeks, but was believed to be improving, when his heart failed. He was born in Essex, England, in 1853. He received a good education, and after reaching manhood, engaged in the wholesale florist business. He came to this country 22 years ago, 21 years of which have been spent with the New York Cut Flower Co. For a number of years he has been the resident manager of the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, which is connected with the New York Cut Flower Co. It has been written: "Say nothing but good of the dead," but there is nothing else to say about Jonathan Nash. A Christian in the best sense of the word, an educated gentleman and a good business man, he was an honor to the country of his adoption and to the florist business. He is survived by a widow, three sons and one daughter. His funeral was held at Grace Episcopal church, May 29, at 2 p. m. and was largely attended by the trade.

A. F. F.

George Vocke.

George Vocke, one of the older florists of Long Island City and Brooklyn, N. Y., died at his home, 153 Albany avenue, Brooklyn, May 28, aged 66 years. He was born in Germany and came to this country when a boy. He was for a number of years a grower at Long Island City, and later, for a number of years, was florist and gardener on the grounds of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The last position, which we believe he relinquished because of ill health, was his last active work. He is survived by a widow, two sons and three daughters. One son, Joseph, is a salesman for William H. Siebrecht, Sr., in the Cut Flower Exchange, in which the deceased was also a stockholder. The other son, George, is a salesman for the New York Cut Flower Co.

Sunflowers in Germany.

Cologne, Germany, May 30.—Garden planting of sunflowers for the sake of the oil contained in the seeds was all the rage last year. It was also sufficiently successful so that it is being urged on a large scale this spring. The very latest suggestion is that the school children of Germany shall utilize part of their spare time by systematically planting sunflowers along every mile of road in the empire.

THE price of the government postal guide, the new edition of which will be issued in July, has been reduced to 40 cents. Every florist should have a copy.

British Curtail Plant and Bulb Imports.

By an order in council signed by the king on May 10 the importation into the United Kingdom of bulbs, flower roots, plants, trees and shrubs is prohibited, except under license from the board of trade.

This order, it is believed, practically prohibits importations as above, and while it will most likely depreciate prices of all stock usually imported by British growers, including plants and bulbs from Holland and Japan, on the other hand, the value of stock grown in the British Isles will be materially increased.

Imported Nursery Stock Regulations.

New rules and regulations governing the importation of nursery stock in the United States have been issued by the federal horticultural board and will take effect on and after July 1. In the revised regulations the most important change is the provision which makes permits for the importation of nursery stock from countries which maintain nursery stock inspection and for the importation of orchids and tree seeds from those which do not maintain such inspection valid until revoked. Hitherto all permits had to be renewed each year. The other changes in the regulations are chiefly minor and matters of form.

Memorial and Arbor Day in China.

The Chinese Minister of Agriculture and Commerce has called upon the nation for the observance of Arbor day, a festival only within recent years added to the Chinese calendar. In reality no new holiday is created, for the observance of Arbor day is set for the Chinese "Ch'ing Ming" festival, the day corresponding in a great measure to our Memorial day, for on this day the Chinese all over this vast country visit the graves of their ancestors. The graves are put in order, trees are planted, and there is a ceremony to the departed. The people also ascend the hills and mountains near by, in a sort of nature worship. Five thousand magistrates throughout the length and breadth of China were instructed by the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce to exhort the people of their respective districts to an observance of Arbor day by the planting of trees. The day fell this year upon April 6. The fact that this festival was observed generally throughout China, in conjunction with the "Ch'ing Ming," speaks volumes of promise for the future of this "forestless" nation. Tree planting promises soon to become a habit with the Chinese people. The Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, in company with the Director of Agriculture, the Director of Forestry, the American forestry adviser (formerly director of forestry for the Philippine Islands), and a number of other officials went to the western hills near Peking, April 6, and there set an example to the rest of the nation in the observance of Arbor day by personally planting a number of trees.

Mothers' Day Prices.

A NOTE OF WARNING.

May 14 has been decided upon as Mothers' day, the day being designated by wearing a flower in memory of your mother and sending a flower or bouquet. A beautiful sentiment, to be sure, and where is the man or woman who wouldn't wear a flower in memory of the dearest one that ever lived, "Our Mother."

I should like to ask why this day should be robbed of its sentiment and turned into a financial proposition? Flowers that were selling at a moderate price, within reach of all, a few days previously, were advanced from 100 to 300 per cent higher. In other words, Mothers' day was made a harvest for many.

Let us always have May 14 as Mothers' day, but instead of wearing a flower, let a white ribbon be just as appropriate, and let us see who will get a corner on white ribbon and send the price up beyond the reach of those who really care and want a Mothers' day.—Mrs. F. T., in the Minneapolis Tribune, May 22, 1916.

BEST MEMORIAL DAY DEMAND IN HISTORY.

Business in all lines was very satisfactory for the week ending May 27. Funeral work is especially heavy and decorations for social functions and weddings are more numerous. Orders for outside plantings and stock for boxes are more plentiful, the cool weather during the past few weeks having delayed this business. Nearly all of the local trade report a big increase in this line over last year. The Memorial day supply was large especially in peonies. These are now seen in every yard as well as at the flower shops. Carnations, roses, snapdragons and other seasonable stocks are seen in better supply. Memorial day orders up to the close of business last week were the heaviest in the history of the trade of this city.

NOTES.

At the Alpha Floral Co.'s establishment, the Memorial day demand was far beyond expectations, but preparations had been made to take care of a record breaking call. The mail order business especially showed a substantial increase over that of a year ago.

T. J. Noll & Co.'s stock for the week consisted principally of peonies, carnations, roses and Cape Jasmynes, but they were disposed of by the thousands. The number of advance orders broke a record at this establishment.

The Mount St. Mary's greenhouses prepared for a big cemetery trade and were not disappointed. The call for stock for bedding and window boxes has also been heavy.

A. F. Barbe was prepared as usual for the big rush. He had a large supply of both cut flowers and pot plants and was not disappointed in the volume of business.

W. J. Barnes reports the heaviest call for bedding plants and porch box stock of the year. He carried a heavy Memorial day stock and had record breaking business.

Arthur Newell had a wonderful display of wreaths for Memorial day. His advance orders exceeded all expectations and a big quantity of stock was disposed of.

Samuel Murray prepared for a record breaking Memorial day trade and had splendid business. An especially fine line of pot plants were a feature here.

H. Kusik & Co. handled 65,000 peonies for Memorial day, in addition to large stocks of roses, carnations, etc. The shipping trade was extra heavy.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower and Plant Co. handled a big supply of roses, carnations and pot plants. They also cut 49,000 peonies.

Charles Biederman & Son were "all set" for the big day and were rushed to the limit to take care of the large number of orders.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. had heavy cuts of good stock which cleaned up nicely, as did some fine pots of hydrangeas.

Mrs. T. A. Mosely has been very busy with commencement work. Her Memorial day trade was brisk.

Roy Harvey has been added to August Luther's force. Business is reported larger than expected.

The Elmwood Landscape & Nursery Co. had a cut of 25,000 peonies for Memorial day.

Jacob Hepting is cutting about 3,000 carnations daily.

James Payne had his usual rush of cemetery work.

E. J. B.

Cincinnati.

HEAVY SUPPLY FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

The supply for Memorial day was heavy. All seasonable lines were seen in good quantities, although advance orders for this day had been unusually brisk. During last week, owing to heavy dumping of stock, the market was overcrowded. Roses are in very large supply. The supply of American Beauties, too, is plentiful. The peony cut for Memorial day was also very heavy. Practically all of the local early varieties arrived in time for the occasion. Carnations are plentiful, as are lilies. Cape Jessamine glut the market, and it is impossible to move all of them. Gladioli are proving good property. A good cut of Double Poeticus is on hand. Other offerings for the day included orchids, lily of the valley, stocks, feverfews, snapdragons, cornflowers and sweet williams. The supply of greens is ample.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger has made arrangements to rebuild the house, packing shed and barn recently destroyed at his greenhouses at New Castle, Ind.

Joe Maunder and Dollie Maunder have the sympathy of the trade in their bereavement in the loss of their mother, who died May 24.

C. E. Critchell had a fine lot of Double Poeticus from Perry, Ohio, for his Memorial day business.

E. G. Gillett reports that he had a large number of orders for Memorial day.

Visitors: Karl Heiser, Walter Gray and Wm. Lodder, Hamilton, O.; Jos. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; J. T. Herdigen, Aurora, Ind.; Frank Friedley, Cleveland, O., and Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York.

H.

Whitestone, N. Y.

When we called on Manager Apple, of the John M. Keller Co., we found him directing his force in planting out a fine stock of heather. Many other good plant features were noticed at this range.

Frank Pileski, formerly of Flushing, who recently bought the Bagley fruit and flower garden, has broken ground for four new houses, each 20x100 feet.

Bedding plants are a leading feature at the range of Fred. Holderer and they grow good ones; also cut flowers, which Mrs. Holderer sells in the Cut Flower Exchange, New York.

Dreyer Brothers have a fine stock of plants coming on, particularly noteworthy being a great stock of young cyclamens.

A. F. F.

Los Angeles.

GOOD BUSINESS CONTINUES.

Business is keeping up well in all lines of the florist trade in this city. Weddings and funerals are always with us, but as a rule special days come only now and then. This spring, however, with a late Easter, then Mothers' day and Memorial day have helped to keep things moving. With the exception of roses, the market seems to be well supplied with cut flowers. The girl graduate will soon be making her bow, and the florists, through her friends and relatives will have another heavy call, especially in roses. It is safe, therefore, to say that business will continue good for a time at least.

NOTES.

At Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Golden-son's corner, we noted their window banked high, a background of gladioli making a splendid contrast for an excellent arrangement of roses and sweet peas, a feature being Cecile Brunners in the foreground. Some extra fine Coreopsis grandiflora were also seen here. They report a poor condition in roses generally, but have booked splendid orders in all other seasonable lines.

As usual Wright's Flower Shop, Inc., is well stocked with everything seasonable that is procurable. This establishment grows its own roses, but reports stocks scarce in this line, many of the plants taking their annual rest.

O. C. Saakes had some very good roses on display, especially Shawyer and American Beauty. He anticipates good business for graduation exercises as well as for Memorial day.

The Redondo Floral Co. specializes on Memorial day wreaths made up with statice; also a full line of appropriate decorations.

The California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. reports a good general trade. Shipping business was also good here.

G. H. H.

Oklahoma City.

MEMORIAL DAY DEMAND INCREASING.

Florists who also maintain a landscape department report that they are having an extremely busy season; many private citizens are having rose gardens laid out and it is just beginning to dawn on the people, that roses, when properly planted and the right varieties selected, make a grand showing in this climate and are one of the best things to plant for general purposes. Considering that it was commonly believed a few years ago that roses could not be grown successfully here, it may be remarked that we are making good progress horticulturally.

While Memorial day trade does not assume the large proportions here that it does in northern cities, there is always, however, quite a demand for cut flowers and bedding plants, and it is a noticeable fact that each succeeding year sees an increase in this trade. Local florists say they expect good business for this day, and one of their chief reasons for their prognostication is, there has been a great deal of inquiry for stock from over the state, and that is always a sure sign that the home trade will develop strong.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE VERY GOOD.

The Memorial day trade this year was very good and compares most favorably with that of 1915. Business could have been much better, but very few complaints in regard to poor business are heard. The shipping trade was exceptionally good, but the heavy rain Monday, May 29, affected the city demand to such an extent that the buying was rather light. Considerable business was done on the morning of Memorial day, and while there were more than enough flowers to go around first-class stock was none too plentiful. The excessive heat of last week brought the stock in in large quantities and affected the quality to such an extent that it was impossible to use some of the flowers to ship any great distance. The mercury registered 90 $\frac{1}{4}$ degrees Friday, May 27, which was the hottest weather of the year and a record-breaker for so early in the season. Though the bathing beaches were not officially opened, hundreds of bathers sought the cooling waves of the lake and all the parks were thronged. The expressmen's strike caused a lot of extra work for the wholesalers, but all orders were pretty well taken care of and no one has any license to kick in this regard, for the florists are getting better service than any other line of trade in the city, which means a great deal. Peonies were unusually plentiful this year and sold well, but there never was such a large supply of poor quality stock offered for Memorial day, which was no doubt due mostly to hot weather and the delay in reaching the stores. Other stock also suffered considerably from the heat and what real good stock was offered was quickly disposed of at satisfactory prices. Roses and carnations sold well, but did not bring as high prices as one expected they would. American Beauty roses, lily of the valley and orchids were scarce, notwithstanding the fact that there was a good supply of out-door lily of the valley offered. Sweet peas sold well and some magnificent stock was seen. Lilies and callas had a good call and there was no great surplus left when the stores closed at night. Cape Jasmines were plentiful and arrived in unusually fine condition this year. Lilac was not as plentiful as in other years and what stock was offered sold quickly at fair prices, but there was a lot of inferior stock seen which was dumped almost as quickly as it was unpacked. Gladioli were in good supply and had a fairly good call. Snapdragons, iris, feverfew, larkspur, swainsona, Double White narcissus, daffodils, candytuft, daisies, pansies, violets, poppies, tulips, mignonette, cornflowers, calendulas and a raft of other indoor and outdoor miscellaneous flowers were included among the offerings and in some instances had a surprisingly good call.

NOTES.

Members of forty-three of the teams in the Chicago Junior Baseball league assembled at Armour square last Saturday, May 27, and then paraded to the White Sox park where "Bobby Roth day" was celebrated. Upon arrival at the park the teams encircled the grounds once, following which the league officials presented Roth, who formerly was a member of the Sox and is now with the Cleveland Indians, with a gold watch and a beautiful floral token.

The date of the flower day for the benefit of the Frances Willard hospital has been set for June 9. Two hundred young women will sell the flowers and fourteen of the leading society women will chaperon them. The committee selected a good time and will no doubt receive the support of many of the local wholesale florists.

Vaughan's greenhouses at Western Springs now have their rush orders well in hand. The business shows a 20 per cent increase. A large proportion of the orders coming a month late has made the season a difficult one.

T. R. Otsuka, the well known landscape gardener of 300 South Michigan avenue, is engaged on a very extensive Japanese garden for F. A. Seiberling, of Akron, O., with a large force of men.

A. E. Hunt & Co. are cutting a dandy supply of poppies which are in brisk demand for window displays and basket work. They market all their stock at D. E. Freres' wholesale store.

E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., returned from a successful out-of-town trip in plenty of time to spend Memorial day at home.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Morrison, next Thursday, June 8, at 8 p. m.

The preparedness parade, June 3, will be composed of ten grand divisions instead of six, as was originally planned. Each grand division is roughly estimated as being 20,000 strong. The units are distinct from the national guard division, in which 5,000 soldiers will march. It is now estimated that the parade will consume about twelve hours in passing, beginning at 9 or 9:30 a. m. At 6 p. m. an hour's recess may be ordered, but the police line will be maintained and the route kept clear for the evening division. At least 20,000 men representing the packing industry will be in line and the committee of the stockyards industries to have charge of the organization of the marchers in their division includes Dwight L. Harris of the Pulverized Manure Co.

Erne & Klingel had a wagon load of peonies tipped over about four o'clock on the afternoon of May 17 by the striking express drivers at the south end of the State street bridge as they were taking them to the Western cold storage plant. August Barnett, one of the Erne & Klingel force, was with the driver and promptly notified his house, but fortunately no flowers were lost, which Chas. Erne was afraid of, who reached the scene shortly after the trouble. Riot calls were sent to two police stations, but the attackers had disappeared before the police arrived.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report a splendid Memorial day trade with the sales running considerably ahead of last year. This firm had a magnificent supply of peonies to offer in addition to their regular line and cleaned up much better than they expected to. J. Mohrie helped the regular force out during the rush, which had more orders than it could conveniently handle alone.

Walter Kennicott cut his first local peonies this week, mostly Old Reds.

Mr. Kennicott says he has heard more or less talk of the scarcity of labor, but adds that he had no trouble in getting all the help he needed for the next four or five weeks.

The George Wittbold Co. had the decoration for the electrical convention held at the Auditorium theatre last week and will arrange the decoration for the republican convention to be held in the Coliseum. Louis Wittbold has solved the labor problem at Edgebrook by employing 25 Polish women to do the potting and other light work about the greenhouses and the results so far have been very satisfactory.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, had the decorations for the opening of the new Lyon & Healy building last week. His conservatory is nicely stocked up with blooming and foliage plants of all kinds and a dozen small, live ducks are a side attraction for the visitors. Someone left the door of the conservatory open May 28 and when no one was looking the ducks walked out and started to parade east on Monroe street to Wabash avenue and got lined up in battle formation before anyone noticed them. It was more fun than a picnic to see the boys catch them and to avoid their joining in the preparedness parade on June 3 a special cage has been built for them in the rear of the glass house facing the hotel lobby. Mangel's new store in the Edgewater Beach hotel will be opened next month.

W. P. Kyle, of Kyle & Foerster, says that it would be perfectly lovely for the trade if all the marchers in the preparedness parade, June 3, could be induced to wear a carnation on that day. Over 200,000 will be in line and about that many carnations disposed of would strengthen the market considerably.

The Central Floral Co.'s store on North State street was robbed of $37 one night last week after the store was closed for the day. Peter Duris says that the robbers climbed through the transom over the main entrance and then rifled the cash register, making their escape the same way.

The White House Florist had a very good Memorial day trade and was called upon to make a number of American flags of flowers in which red and white carnations, feverfew and cornflowers were used. The pieces were very pretty and were greatly admired by their many customers.

Daniel Branch, 313 East Fifty-first street, recovered his automobile through the police, which was stolen last week. The thieves stripped the car of everything of value and then abandoned it on the west side, where it was located several days later.

Harry J. Murphy, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., was in the city this week on business in connection with the new store that he will open at Lansing, Mich., next fall in the new bank building there.

George Reinberg cut a good supply of Richmond roses all last week but they were of such good quality that Manager Northam did not have a flower left when the store closed for the day, May 26.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Can., is here this week on business. He gave the boys a lift at Pyfer & Olsem's retail store in Wilmette during the Memorial day rush.

Miller & Musser handled a good supply of choice peonies for Memorial day and will have enough to supply their customers with for several weeks to come.

M. C. Gunterberg added a peony grower to her list of consignors just in time to get her share of the Memorial day business, which was the best in years.

John Schoepfle, 933 Belmont avenue, has had a remarkably good season and reports an abundance of funeral orders which has kept his force busy right along.

One of the young South Wabash avenue retail florists will join the ranks of the benedicts in the near future. Further particulars later.

H. C. Blewitt is cutting a large supply of fine sweet peas, which he is marketing at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store.

The Alpha Floral Co. made a large showing of cut flowers for Memorial day and advertised extensively for the occasion. Everything went along lovely until the weather man turned on the faucet and sprinkled the city so thoroughly Monday, May 29, that trade was not as brisk as it might have been otherwise.

Nick Monsen, 3640 Fullerton avenue, reports a busy season. He is ably assisted at the store by Mrs. Monsen which permits him to attend to the buying and make his daily trip to the market.

The Fleischman Floral Co. had an appropriate window display for Memorial day, consisting of a large wreath of magnolia leaves, wheat sheaves and callas backed by three American flags.

Dick Rolson says that trade has been very good at the Flower Craft, 1514 Hyde Park boulevard, of which F. L. Eagleston is the proprietor.

Miss Frances Ludlow, of Vaughan's Seed Store, has been visiting St. Louis friends this week.

The expressmen's strike is not over yet, but rumors have been numerous the past week to the effect that the men would be back to work by June 1, but at this writing, May 31, there does not appear to be much truth to the report. In an effort to facilitate arbitration, a delegation, headed by Robert E. Crowe, called on Mayor Thompson, May 29, which was the third effort made by the strikers to prevail upon the mayor to bring about a conference. Fred Lautenschlager is still managing the special service inaugurated by the trade, and, everything considered, no one has any reason to complain, for the florists are getting better attention than any other line of business in the city.

A. J. Knapp, of Evansville, Ind., is shipping a large quantity of peonies to the E. C. Amling Co. in a ventilated box that appears to be just about what the grower needs for shipping his stock into the market. The box he is using holds about 40 dozen peonies, and is made of elm so as to be as light and strong as possible. The corners are iron bound so as to give it the necessary strength and avoid breakage, and the box itself is self-locking with a separate seal for each one. Mr. Knapp says that the boxes cost him $2 each and have given such splendid satisfaction that he can safely recommend them to any grower who would like to give them a trial.

A. I. Simmons, 242 West Sixty-third street, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, whose death occurred Friday evening, May 26. Mrs. Simmons dropped dead in the store and heart disease is said to have been the cause of her death. The funeral was held Monday morning and the remains laid to rest in Oakwoods cemetery. She was a sister-in-law of Mrs. J. L. Raske and Fred Ronsley and was well and favorably known to the trade. The floral offerings from the wholesale and retail florists were many and beautiful and the funeral was well attended by members of the trade.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department has just received a large importation of French baskets which always play so important a part in the June weddings and school closings. The cut flower department had a dandy Memorial day trade and got out all their shipping orders on good time, notwithstanding the expressmen's strike, which caused a lot of extra work.

Wietor Bros. had a tremendous supply of carnations for Memorial day, which enabled them to take care of all their regular customers in fine shape, as well as several of the wholesalers. Sunburst roses are in fine crop with this firm and some exceptionally fine stock is seen at this house this week. The Memorial day trade was very satisfactory and will run considerably ahead of last year.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association had a good Memorial day trade and report the shipping trade as exceptionally brisk. Roses and carnations are seen in large quantities at this establishment and their list includes all the old standards and best new varieties.

Frank Schramm, of Crystal Lake, is adding two more Foley houses, 40x225 feet, to his range. He is shipping his stock to Des Plaines during the expressmen's strike and from there it is brought in by truck to Kyle & Foerster's store where his entire output is handled.

A. Lange always has a pretty showing of cut flowers at his East Madison street store and Memorial day was no exception. Trade for Memorial day was as good as could have been expected at this establishment, considering the unfavorable weather conditions.

Peter Reinberg has a splendid Memorial day trade with the shipping demand exceptionally good. Stock cleaned up nicely in all lines at this house, according to Felix Reichling, who adds that the sales will compare most favorably with those of last year.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. had their share of the Memorial day trade and filled an unusually large number of shipping orders. Peonies, roses and carnations are arriving in large quantities at this store but are cleaning up fairly well each day.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting heavily in yellow roses, which are always in brisk demand for weddings and school closings. The Ophelia and Rhea Reid roses that this firm is cutting are of unusually fine quality.

Percy Jones is supplying his trade with a choice grade of ferns and has plenty on hand to supply everyone with until the next crop is available. Double White narcissus is one of the principal offerings in cut flowers this week.

Mike Seganos, a frequent visitor in the market and proprietor of the Hammond Floral Co.'s store, at Hammond, Ind., is pleased with business and reports that his sales are running about 30 per cent ahead of last year.

George Wienhoeber had several orders for the Hill funeral, the prettiest of which was that of the C., B. & Q. railroad, consisting of a large wreath of palm leaves, lilies, orchids, lily of the valley and statice.

Zech & Mann's store force, captained by Allie Zech, were busy as bees handling the Memorial day business, which was up to all expectations, notwithstanding the heavy rain Monday, May 29.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a good supply of Lady Alice Stanley and Francis Scott Key in addition to their regular line of roses, including the two favorites, Ophelia and Mrs. Chas. Russell.

Fred Ottenbacher is back on the job again at Zech & Mann's store after serving nearly a month on the jury, three weeks of which were spent on the long-drawn-out Kellogg case.

Schiller's downtown store had a special Memorial day window display in which the red, white and blue played an important part.

Mike Callahan, foreman of the Hoskins Floral Co.'s greenhouses, at Elmhurst, is the proud father of a baby boy.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The tulip show held by the Nassau County Horticultural Society, May 19, brought forth a magnificent display of these popular flowers. The major part of the exhibition was composed of Darwins, although Cottage, Breeder and Picotees were also well represented. The competition in almost every class was very keen and the judges, James Bell, George Wilson and James Duthie, had a rather difficult task in making the decisions. John H. Johnstone, gardener for George D. Pratt, and Ernest Westlake, gardener for W. H. Porter, were the principal prize winners, the former being awarded five firsts and six seconds, while the latter had four first and an equal number of second prizes to his credit. The following were also given awards for meritorious displays; John W. Everitt, gardener for John T. Pratt; Robert Jones, gardener for Percy Chubb; S. D. Brewster, Herbert Pratt and Frank Johnson, gardener for Harold Pratt.

COMMENCEMENTS BRING BUSY DAYS.

With the many schools and their various departments having exercises and recitals, one after another, the past two weeks have been busy ones for the local trade, flowers having played an important part in the various commencements, and there seems to be no let up for some time to come, as upon this comes Memorial day, although much of the demand for this occasion is supplied from the home gardens. The florists are even asked to donate of what surplus they may have on hand. Following the national Memorial day, there comes the day of decoration of the graves of those heroes who fought on the Confederate side, and which is observed June 3. The supply of flowers has been excellent, there being a profusion of roses in all varieties, lilies and carnations, to say nothing of a general variety of other seasonable stock. Peonies have been in wonderful supply, but are slacking up somewhat at present, but lilies, both Harrissi and callas are strong favorites in decorative work.

NOTES.

The public schools have limited the commencement flowers this year to one bouquet to be carried in the arms. There is usually a class flower and this year it is the Kaiserin, tied with a chatelaine of gauze ribbon. At Ward-Belmont college, however, the friends of the graduates are at liberty to send flowers without stint, and as a result the platform was a perfect bower of flowers as well as young ladies.

As a feature to call attention to the minstrel show given by the Shriners last week, the Joy Floral Co. decorated one of its windows with the emblem of the order in flowers. The other window was given over to the "sweet girl graduate" with her diploma and the indispensable bouquet.

Funeral work continues heavy. This had added much to the already brisk demand. M. C. D.

The bad weather which followed the planting season has had its effect on the nursery trade here, business not being up to its usual standard. Some nursery stock, imported from Holland, due here about April 1, was not received by Donaldson & Co. until May 15, and was found in such poor condition that it was not worth the duty and freight charges. Another shipment consigned to the F. Walker Co., on contract to arrive not later than April 1, reached here 45 days late and was refused.

While the Memorial day trade in this city is improving from year to year, it does not as yet amount to a great deal as far as the local florists are concerned. Mothers' day demand this year was double that of any previous year, however.

The 5 and 10 cent stores have been handling plants and cut flowers this season, being supplied by a local florist, but do not seem to be doing any great volume of business.

P. A. Reynolds, who was confined to his home with a severe case of ivy poisoning during the busiest part of the season, is able to be about again.

Bedding plants are in brisk demand. The season opened here about May 1 and will close about June 10.

Louis Kirch will change his heating plant from hot water to steam this summer.

W. L. Brady has entered the wholesale selling field, making a specialty of roses.

Middle Village, N. Y.

Middle Village, about a half hour's ride from the heart of New York city is an interesting place to visit, particularly during the week preceding and on Memorial day. There are here grouped, and in the adjoining village of Maspeth, over 50 florists, nearly all of whom have some glass. The individual area varies from less than 1,000 to 10,000 square feet, though a few have from 18,000 to 25,000 square feet. Plant growing for the trade of the large cemeteries located there is the principle business, and when we visited the various ranges, just before Memorial day, trade was very active. Rose bushes, geraniums, fuchsias and all the smaller bedding plants were very noteworthy. We were attracted by numbers of fine fuchsias which we believe are admirable for cemetery work, as they do better in the shade of trees, than most plants.

NOTES.

McCloskey & Dehn is a comparatively new firm, as both are young men, but they have a neat store at 2288 Metropolitan avenue and a well kept range on Pulaski street. There are many other good florists, and one noteworthy feature at Middle Village is, that father and mother and all the boys and girls work.

John Baumann has a prosperous store at 1722 Metropolitan avenue, where he also has glass. Near Juniper avenue he has a well constructed range, the whole totaling about 20,000 square feet.

The venerable Fred Bauer (he is now 79 years old), is probably the oldest florist of Middle Village, and has been a hard worker, frugal and saving.

John F. Fieber, successor to Jacob Vetter Riede, is another of the enterprising young men who are building up a good business.

Fred. Marquardt has a fine store and range at the terminal of the Metropolitan avenue elevated line, and has an excellent business.

Fabian Oskierko has a neat range on La Farge street. He is a good plantsman and an agreeable and clever gentleman.

A. F. F.

TAUNTON, MASS.—V. B. Olson has purchased the greenhouses of E. F. Rose, 20 Bay street. He will take possession July 1.

WORCESTER, MASS.—Misses E. E. and L. E. Smith will build a greenhouse on North street and engage in the florist business.

OBERLIN, O.—Paul Wainwright, formerly of Lisbon, O., has purchased the greenhouse of Wm. Humm, his brother-in-law, and has taken possession.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

GOOD MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS.

A favorable feature of the Memorial day trade was the shortage of garden flowers. This was in marked contrast with last year, when there was a great supply from this source, particularly in peonies. Part of the gain to florists from this reversed condition has been offset by considerable stock going to waste. Shipped-in flowers, even from short distances, went to pieces in the case of many consignments, through lack of normal hardiness. From their own greenhouses a number of Columbus florists were able to have on sale beautiful peonies when the rush set in, but the supply was not equal to the demand. Carnations were in ample supply, 75 cents a dozen being the standard price. Roses sold from $1.50 upwards. All kinds of wreaths had a better sale than usual because of the limited variety of flowers. Pot plants of all kinds have had a good sale.

NOTES.

In a rotarian parade in the neighboring city of Dayton, May 25, the marchers visited all the public bridges in town, and placed upon them a total of 20,000 plants in receptacles which had previously been prepared. The idea of extensive city beautification through the use of flowering plants originated with the National Cash Register Company, of that city, whose factory surroundings are ideal in this respect.

A move has been made to prohibit by city ordinance sale of flowers on the street for charity purposes, together with the elimination of the numerous "tag" days, on the ground that such methods of raising money have become an annoyance to the public. Florists, who were called upon to contribute flowers for a number of these events, will enter no protest against the proposed legislation.

Florists suffered considerable damage to iris beds and to other out-door planting by a hail storm during the past week, but no loss of glass was reported. Market gardeners also came in for a sacrifice of crops.

Bayside, N. J.

Bayside is one of the beautiful villages of Long Island, and it now shows at its best with its many beautiful trees in full leaf. The motto, "Plant a tree", which one time Secretary of Agricultural Morton had engraved on his stationery, is as good advice now as it was 40 years ago. Many of the trees of Bayside are things of beauty and will be joys to many generations yet to come. It is pleasing to note that the care and protection of trees has come to be a widespread sentiment, as well as a business. There are probably many men now living in Bayside, who might say with George P. Morris:

'Twas my forefather's hand
That placed it near his cot;
There, woodman, let it stand,
Thy axe shall harm it not.

Frank Finger has two houses of very fine sweet peas. The dark weather has kept them back, but they are now coming finely.

At his range on Seventh street, Herman Anderson is showing fine stock in plants and cut flowers. He retired for a time from the florist business, but has taken it up again with renewed vigor.

S. Szybrillo has a neat range and grows a variety of stock. He is a clever and genial man and the only fault we can find with him is his name, which is hard to spell and pronounce.

O. J. Mertl, who conducts what was formerly known as the Bell range, is growing good stock which he ships to Wm. P. Ford, New York.

Exceedingly warm weather with great humidity has forced a heavy supply of outdoor flowers into bloom and there was no shortage of stock for Memorial day as there was feared there might be a week ago. Greenhouse stock is also much more plentiful, although roses have suffered somewhat from the sun, especially the Killarneys. The carnation supply is equal to the demand. The call for blooming plants was a feature of the Memorial day trade, although there were numerous cut flower orders.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. arranged a very attractive window for Memorial day in which the American flag and the Fort Wayne centennial flag were conspicuous. Groups of pink and white hydrangea plants, begonias and baskets of cut flowers were also an attraction.

Ed. Hauswirth arranged a large American flag made of immortelles as a Memorial day suggestion as a background for a splendid display of wreaths, blooming plants and cut flowers.

A handsome casket cover was made last week by the Doswell Floral Co. This firm also had the orders for many other large and handsome pieces.

The Fort Wayne Flower Shop had a splendid showing of stock for Memorial day, peonies being especially noteworthy.

TRADE CONDITIONS NORMAL.

Stock was not over-plentiful during the past week, neither was there any activity, worthy of note, in business, so one feature balanced the other. The weather, during the early part of the week, was very dark and disagreeable, which had a depressing effect. The last three days of the week were fair and warmer and there is a prospect of plenty of stock for Memorial day. Few home grown peonies, for reasons stated, will be in, but we expect heavy shipments from southern points. The snow-balls and other outdoor stocks are on the market and with other cheap stock and plants, will be sought for. We do not anticipate any great flurry in special roses, carnations, lilies or lily of the valley on account of Memorial day. Business was quite active May 27, and the best carnations brought $5 and in some instances $6 per 100, but there was some very poor stock on the market that went as low as $2 per 100. By Sunday morning the supply had greatly increased and there were prospects of a drop. Compared with nearly every other year that the writer can recall, peonies are scarce. Southern stock is about all that is reaching the market. The firm of Goldstein & Futterman made a "killing" May 28, by getting in 10,000 peonies from "somewhere" south.

NOTES.

A number of the officers and employees of the New York Cut Flower Co. attended the funeral of John Kral at Portchester, N. Y., May 24. His death was reported in our issue of May 27. He was buried with Masonic honors. Another sad event is the death of Jonathan Nash, which occurred near midnight, May 26. He had been ill for about three weeks, but was believed to be greatly improved up to within a short time of his death. In the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, Mr. Nash and John Kral had been very closely associated and the high esteem in which each held the other was mutual, and they were equally esteemed by many friends. There are many who knew Mr. Nash who could appropriately voice the sentiment of King David: "I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan; very pleasant hast thou been unto me; thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women."

At the funeral of Jonathan Nash at Grace church on the afternoon of May 29, many beautiful floral tributes were noticed. The surviving members of the firm, Frank Moore and Henry Hentz, Jr., furnished the casket cover of orchids and lily of the valley. The Greek-American Florists' Association sent a beautiful standing wreath of orchids; the New York Cut Flower Co., a fine design in American Beauty roses; the employees of Moore, Hentz & Nash, a wreath of orchids; F. H. Traendly and Charles Schenck, a wreath of orchids; Paul Meconi, a wreath of orchids. A number of other florists sent fine designs. Much of the design work was arranged by P. Gerlaid, the retailer, of 41 West 27th street, who also sent a fine wreath. The funeral was attended by many florists and their families, and the impressive service of the Episcopal church made it a solemn occasion. Interment was in Woodlawn cemetery.

At a meeting of the retailers' association of this city, held on the evening of May 23, a resolution was adopted to the effect that, hereafter no commission will be allowed out of town florists on orders amounting to less than $2, and further, if deliveries for less than that sum are to be made in Jersey City or other outlying cities or towns, car fare or other expense of delivery will be added to the bill. We will not now go into all the features of this branch of the retail trade, but from independent investigation, we have learned enough to satisfy us that the local retailers are right and that this step is necessary as a matter of self-protection.

W. A. Blaedel's Sons, 402 West 23d street, arranged a very fine decoration, May 27, for the Fine Arts Federation of New York, in the Fine Arts Building, 215 West 57th street. The occasion was the John W. Alexander testimonial under the auspices of the Fine Arts Federation. In foliage, 50 large plants of laurel were used and 150 cedars. There was also a profusion of cut flowers. This is an old New York firm, has a fine store and conservatory and an established reputation for good work.

Eugene J. Keenan, head salesman for the Greater New York Florists' Association, of Brooklyn, has resigned and is open to an engagement. He has been with that association since its organization, eight years ago, and is a clever and capable man.

The suffragists realized some $6,000 for their funds from the sale of flowers on the streets, this city, May 27. The flowers, we understand, were supplied from private gardens free of cost, a kind of competition which can hardly be calculated to help the legitimate trade.

Harry Forman, a brother to Anthony Forman, head salesman for A. H. Langjahr, who was a soldier in the regular army, was shot and killed in Mexico, May 18. His body was brought back to Brooklyn and buried with military honors, May 25.

E. G. Hill of Richmond, Ind., but known, as he is in all parts of the world where good flowers are grown for sale, spent May 27 in this city. He had been in Washington and took part in the inspection of the government rose garden.

F. G. Van Mater, now in the retail business at 37 Conway street, Brooklyn, succeeds Geo. W. Crawbuck as manager of the Greater New York Florists' Association.

The Flower Pot.

Paper by A. H. Walker, read before the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 6, 1916.

The standard flower pot of today is little different from the pot of our forefathers as far as I know. The material used today may be of a better grade, and uniformity of shape may have improved, but otherwise there has been no improvement from a grower's standpoint.

The grower cannot blame the manufacturer if the pot of the present day is not satisfactory, as it is possible the manufacturer knows nothing, or at least should not be expected to know, anything about the requirements of plants as we understand them. Therefore his business is to produce as good a pot as possible of the orthodox type. It is for the grower to suggest to the manufacturer how the pot could be improved upon.

In suggesting such a radical change as I will outline, it seems to me that the proper way to bring such a matter before the grower is through florists' clubs and horticultural societies; they could discuss the matter at their meetings and publish the findings. It might be advisable, however, to have a number of reputable growers experiment with the pot before passing judgment, but in the case of the change I suggest, the points in its favor are so apparent that the experimental stage could be dispensed with; as a matter of fact, the writer has experimented with the pot and found it to be all he claims for it.

The change I suggest is the manner in which the pot should be drained. At the present time our pots are drained by an opening in the bottom of the pot. In place of the opening being at that point I suggest that the point of drainage should be in the side of the pot, close to the bottom. And in place of one opening of large size, that in the case of a 5-inch or 6-inch pot, there be three openings, equal distance apart, the holes being $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in diameter. In the case of small pots, one opening would be enough, while in the case of large pots, increase the number of openings. There are good reasons for advocating this change, especially from a florist's standpoint. In the first place, perfect drainage is secured, as the point of drainage is well above the bench soil or boards on which they are placed. The fact of having perfect drainage secures perfect aeration of the soil in the pot, so important a factor in plant growing, as all experienced growers know. With the point of drainage in its present position, the florist knows from experience that in repotting a batch of plants that have been standing on a bench of soil, that too frequently the point of drainage is plugged with soil. The soil has to be removed before the plant can be properly turned out of the pot. The pot is either broken or half of the ball of earth breaks away, leaving the other half in the pot. This all means time and money wasted besides the use of language by the florist unfit for print.

Another reason, especially from the florist's standpoint, is the elimination of earth worms from our pots. For instance, the florist often has to place pot plants on a bench of soil. Very soon the pots are full of worms, which disturb the soil, preventing the roots from performing their function, and in so doing, often block the opening in the bottom of the pot. Every grower knows from experience what a nuisance worms are when repotting a batch of plants. The plants do not turn out of the pots in good shape on account of the displacement of the soil or a combination of displacement and blocking of the points of drainage. Worms, as I see them, have no particular desire to enter pots in preference to remaining in the bench soil, but they come to the surface and, as they happen to be opposite the point of drainage, they simply continue their upward course and they are in the pot. Now if the point of drainage were in the side this nuisance would be eliminated as the worm, I feel sure, would not come to the surface, have a look around and then enter by the side openings. Being perfectly satisfied in my own mind that the change I suggest is needed, I ask of you, as a representative body of growers, to give this matter your serious consideration before passing judgment.

One point that naturally will arise on discussing this matter is, "Will the Manufacturer Manage to Make Such a Change and Still Sell the Pots at the Same Price?" I see no reason why the manufacturer cannot place the openings where I suggest as simply as the one in the bottom, at present. He would have to make changes in his apparatus, but that is an every day occurrence with manufacturers.
